Dear Doris: My husband has a good job and we will probably be meeting some prominent people from time to time.

My problem is an inferiority complex and I really do have a lot to be inferior about. None of my family are well educated — just poor simple people. I love them all dearly but it seems in our society today there's no place for poor humble people. You have to know the right people and try to be somebody.

I have a basic honesty and can't be what I'm not. Doris, would you give me some advice on how to overcome these fears and have more peace of mind? — A Bit Lost.

Dear Lost: If we were to write off all the "poor simple people" who were our forebears, most of us would go down the drain.

Specialist Notes Many Reasons For Number of Allergic Sufferers

MONTREAL (CP) — Overcrowding in urban areas, increasing pollution and lack of funds for research have combined to give the problems of allergic and asthmatic sufferers, says a Canadian specialist.

Dr. A. H. Elsen, head of Montreal Children's Hospital's allergy and clinical immunology department, says "North America, the sufferer can get relief and almost never needs to fear suffocation.

"Furthermore, about 75 per cent of asthmatic children outgrow the conditions although they may still have allergies and sometimes a tendency to wheeze.

"An important factor is for the family not to over-protect the child or become so involved with him that the rest of the family is ignored. Family life can be seriously disrupted if too much emphasis is placed on an asthmatic child."

Other don'ts for parents from Dr. Elsen:

—Don't overplay "the emotional angle." The fear is real for the child but parents have to reassure him, not display their own fears.

—Don't give too much medication or the wrong kind just because it looks good in an advertisement. Always consult a doctor first.

—Don't let the child on a heavy diet of barbiturates.

—Don't let him relax too much.

—Although excitement and activity can bring on an asthmatic attack, don't hold back a youngster who wants to play baseball or hockey. "Instead, let him do what he can and find out what his limitations are. If he wheezes after three pedals on a bicycle, he can still after two. Same thing with baseball. If he can't go five innings without a rest, let him stop after four or three. But let him play."

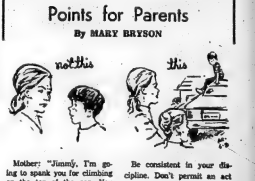
—Don't move all around the country looking for the ideal climate for your youngster. "I just don't think that's a good idea. I've seen families spend a fortune, jeopardize their morale from place to place, and in each new environment the youngster wound up with the same attacks because there's usually more than one contributing factor to asthma."

Dr. Elsen says parents should make sure the child has the best medical care he can get. Even so, that they're doing as much as possible to eliminate attacks and that they keep the home environment fairly serene.

When there is evidence that there are severe psychosomatic factors involved in precipitating an asthma attack "it is best for the treating physician to perhaps collaborate with a psychiatrist in getting to the root of the problem."

"Allergy and asthma does run in families," says the Montreal specialist.

"There's usually a family history of allergy, and asthma can begin at any age. Even tiny babies can show the characteristic signs of allergy."



Allergy and Asthma seem to go hand in hand. Frequently when the source of the allergy is located and eliminated, the asthma attacks can be controlled to a large degree.

Tomorrow: Allergic substances must be avoided.

Lynda Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wootton, 580 Victoria Ave., Belleville received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Home Economics at the University of Western Ontario, May 28, 1976. Lynda will continue training as Dietetic Intern at Victoria Hospital, London, Ontario in September. She is a graduate of Moira Secondary School in Belleville.

Points for Parents
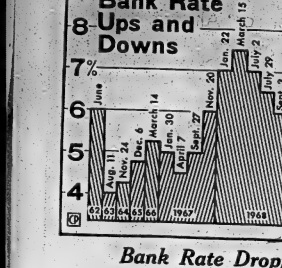
By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jimmy, I'm going to spank you for climbing on the top of the car. You know you're not supposed to do that."

Jimmy: "You let me do it last Sunday when Grandma was here."

Most actions should be forbidden for legitimate reasons — because they are wrong, dangerous, destructive or annoying to others — and children should realize there are no exceptions to these necessary rules.

Be consistent in your discipline. Don't permit an act at one-time because it is inconvenient to enforce a rule, then punish a child for the infraction at another time.

Bank Rate Dropping

The Bank of Canada bank rate was dropped to 7 per cent May 31 from its previous level of 7¼ per cent. The basic rate was dropped at the same time Finance Minister Edgar Benson announced the freeing of the Canadian dollar. The rate, the trend of lending rates generally, had reached a high of 8 per cent in July of 1969.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed in light mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials were down .19 to 153.82 and base metals .55 to 90.53. Golds were up .26 to 144.19 and western oils .58 to 134.93.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 445,000 shares, up from 302,000 at the same time Monday.

Gains outnumbered losses 58 to 46 with 128 issues unchanged.

Observers say the low volume indicates widespread caution among investors.

Largest declines were in bank, beverage and chemical issues. Moderate gains were made in merchandising and oil refining issues.

Stratford's Merchant Warmly Received

By ROBERT TANNER . . .
Special to The Intelligencer

Dead is one clue as usual, Stratford's opening night beat wave brought blue skies and temperatures in the 80s to continue a record of good weather which has failed only once or twice in the Festival's 18 years. But the climate inside the theatre was often far from sunny as Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice unfolded its familiar tale of prejudice, greed and retribution.

It was particularly interesting to compare this performance on the company's home ground, not only with its presentation earlier this year in the theatre of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa, but also with Tyrone Guthrie's magnificent production 15 years ago in the old tent, with the late Frederic March in the title role.

In those days, the Festival still possessed the excitement of novelty, of the sheer improbability of seeing fine performances of Shakespeare in a small Ontario town no bigger than Belleville.

Perhaps this has tinged the memories of that earlier Merchant of Venice, but last night's performance did not seem quite to measure up to them.

This is not to suggest that it was not in its own right a fine production, matured and improved from its Ottawa showing, and benefiting from the somewhat simplier staging. Most of the time, the action is fast-paced and gripping, but there are moments when it tends to drag. Why does Stratford refuse so strenuously to cut some the less meaningful scenes or lines? Jean Gascon's direction was as expert as ever and made full use of the Stratford stage. Acting honors went, oddly enough, to Jane Casson, who was a continual joy as Nerissa, Portia's waiting woman, and succeeded in bringing and deepening every scene she was in. Miss Casson has come to be Stratford's leading comedienne, with a great gift for characterization, and excellent timing. Her mistress, Portia, was played by Maureen O'Brien with conviction and charm: Her difficult court scene was more than usually believable.

The role of Shylock raises many problems for the modern actor. In the light of present day view on racial prejudice, he is tempted to make him a sympathetic character, but it is clear that this is very far from the playwright's intentions. Donald Davis avoided this pitfall and gives a straightforward, but deeply-felt portrayal of the role. He has the power, both physical and psychological, to dominate the scene and the theatre and he uses it to good advantage. His final exit lacked the magnificent defeated dignity which Mr. Valk gave it; in fact it passed almost unnoticed, partly owing to the distraction of other action on the stage during these critical moments.

Leo Ciceri did his best with the rather unsympathetic role of Antonio, who spends too much of his time convincing his audience and the other characters that he is a very fine fellow, as well as a martyr; never a popular approach. Barry McGregor had a much cooler time with Bassanio, the pleasant lad who won and wins Portia by choosing the right casket. The unsuccessful suitors were played with great force by Powys Thomas as the Prince of Morocco, and with the superb direction by Eric Donkin as the Spanish Prince of Arragon. Two other short parts were deftly portrayed were the Gobbos, father and son, by Bernard Behrens and James Blendick respectively. The scene of their reunion was both touching and hilarious. Kenneth Walsh was both energetic and loquacious in the role of Gratiano (who married Nerissa), while Helen Carey and Stephen Markle were appropriately charming as the two young lovers, Jessica and Lorenzo, who defy religious prejudice in their runaway marriage.

The play was warmly received by the first night audience, which included their Excellencies the Governor General and Mrs. Michener. The festival continues tonight with Richard Sheridan's School For Scandal, with Henry Ingram and Sheila Gabel opening on Wednesday.

Bushnell Bidding To Become Giant

OTTAWA (CP) — Bushnell Communications Ltd. of Ottawa will unveil a multi-million-dollar bid later this month to set up the largest private broadcasting company in Canada.

The Bushnell firm, which already holds large broadcasting interests including CJOH-TV in Ottawa and CJBQ in Belleville, Ont., outlines its plans at a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission beginning June 16.

The company has completed purchase agreements for a series of TV and radio stations as well as cable TV companies from Quebec to British Columbia, all subject to CRTC approval.

The over-all cost of Bushnell's proposed acquisitions is difficult to calculate but it is in the neighborhood of $50,000,000. The estimate is based on a compilation of figures contained in a preliminary prospectus filed with the CRTC and dated May 15, 1970.

LIST AIMS

Bushnell is applying for:

—Complete ownership of National Cablevision Ltd., Montreal; 100 per cent of Metro Cable TV Ltd., Toronto; 100 per cent of Community Video Company Ltd. in British Columbia and Alberta.

—Complete ownership of Smiths Falls Cablevision Ltd., Smiths Falls, Ont., an arrangement that would give Bushnell 85 per cent of the voting stock and 76.6 per cent of the equity in Skyline Cablevision Ltd., Ottawa.

—Full ownership of Cornwall Cablevision Ltd.; 100 per cent of Cablerun Belleville Ltd. Co. Belleville, Ont., 100 per cent of Aurora Cable TV Ltd., Aurora, Ont., and 100 per cent of Northumberland Cable TV Ltd., Cobourg, Ont.

Bushnell is also applying to purchase 100 per cent of the broadcasting interests of Canadian Marconi Co., which includes the Montreal stations CFCF-AM radio, CFQR-FM radio and CFCX short-wave radio.

The remainder of the applications is for 100-per-cent ownership in a string of Ontario stations, wholly or partly-owned by Lord Thomson of Fleet interests. The Davies family is associated with the Thomson interests in CKWS AM and FM radio and TV in Kingston. Lord Thomson also has interests in CHEX AM and FM radio and TV in Peterborough, CFCH-AM and CFCH-TV in North Bay, CKGB AM and FM in Timmins and CJKL AM in Kirkland Lake.

The Bushnell firm, with consolidated net earnings of $729,676 in the year ended Aug. 31, 1969, will raise the money for its proposed purchases mainly through the issuance of shares and by bank and other loans.

Horton, Provost Among Surprise Expendables in NHL Draft

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League's annual meetings swing into high gear today with the intra-league draft and signs of a better financial deal for amateur hockey in the offing.

In today's draft each of the 12 clubs is allowed to protect 18 players, with goaltenders and first-year pros exempt. Draft price is $30,000 per player, with each team allowed to lose only one player.

There were a few surprises when the clubs filed their protected lists Monday night. New York Rangers did not protect forwards Ron Stewart and Don Marshall and defenceman Tim Horton. However, the team stands to lose only one of the three veterans under the draft rules.

Also unprotected will be veteran right winger Claude Provost of Montreal Canadiens, defenceman Pat Quinn of Toronto Maple Leafs, forward Billy Dea and defenceman Paul Popiel of Detroit Red Wings, Bill Speer of Boston Bruins and left winger Reg Fleming of Philadelphia Flyers.

Provost has said he will retire rather than join another team.

Al Arbour, appointed coach of St. Louis Blues last week after a fine record as a defenceman and captain with the club, appeared on the team's protected list despite the fact he said Monday he has no intention of filling the dual capacity of coach and player.

Apparently Scotty Bowman, St. Louis general manager, feared Arbour would be drafted by another club if left unprotected.

Meanwhile, officials of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association were meeting with NHL officers in an effort to amend the current pro-amateur agreement drafted Thursday's amateur draft.

It was learned that the proposed new rules would give the CAHA the present $3,000 for each of the first 72 amateurs drafted, plus another $3,000 to funnel back to the club level if the draftee was signed to a pro contract and an additional $4,000 if the player performs in at least 25 NHL games in his first season.

The NHL rules committee also had its innings, taking another step to straighten out the curved stick blades controversy.

The committee cut the maximum curvature allowed to one-half inch from the one-inch allowed last season and the 1¼ inches permitted two years ago.

A new anti-delay rule to be tried during the pre-season exhibition schedule was proposed for approval by the league governors today.

The rule would create a free face-off in cases where players deliberately freeze the puck or shoot it over the boards instead of clearing or passing it.

In a free face-off, the referee will place the puck on the spot of the face-off circle in the zone of the team committing the infraction. On a signal from the referee, the player taking the face-off will play the puck in any manner other than taking a direct shot on the defending goal from within the circle.

Also proposed was that basically white uniforms be worn by home teams and colored uniforms by visiting teams, reversing the present system.

Also awaiting approval by the governors is a doubling of fines for automatic penalties.

If approved, a misconduct penalty will cost the player involved $50, a game misconduct $100, a match penalty $200, a major penalty causing injury $50, and penalties dealing with altercations up to a $100 level from the current $50.

Imlach Still Likes to Fill Twin Bill

MONTREAL (CP) — Colorful George (Punch) Imlach was always insisted on working in a dual capacity.

His arrival Monday at the annual National Hockey League meetings was no exception.

Imlach, appointed general manager and coach of the new Buffalo Sabres, sidled up to the NHL registration desk reserved for newspaper men.

When the young lady told him he should move to another desk reserved for registration of hockey officials, Imlach produced his NHL Writers' Association membership card.

"There's no way you're going to stop me registering here," Imlach said. "I'm a paid-up member."

After being dismissed a year ago as general manager and coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, Imlach became a syndicated hockey columnist and wrote a book outlining his hockey career.

Clippers Sell Zaine To Penguins for Cool Cash

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Clippers announced Monday they have sold 24-year-old centre Rod Zaine to Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League for cash and other considerations.

Besides the $30,000 draft price which the Clippers will receive from the Penguins, the Baltimore American League club will retain Zaine's minor-league rights for one year and obtain a player on loan from Pittsburgh for the 1970-71 season.

Zaine came up through the Ottawa bantam, midget and junior circuits and played for the Canadian Nationals and the Clinton Comets before turning pro last season.

He was inactive for six weeks due to a broken jaw suffered in September. In 33 games he had 47 points on 19 goals and 28 assists.

Plante Peddling New Mask

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Plante, first National Hockey League goaltender to wear a face mask nearly 15 years ago, will introduce a new, improved version today.

The wandering goalie, recently traded to Toronto Maple Leafs from St. Louis Blues, plans to manufacture the new mask which he says will bear up under shots travelling up to 135 miles an hour.

He developed it with the cooperation of the University of Sherbrooke in Sherbrooke, Que.

Plante said in an interview at the annual NHL meetings here: "It will increase the playing time of a lot of goaltenders. If a goalie gets hit and hurt often, he becomes a little puck shy. With this new mask, he'll be able to just shake it off and keep on playing."

At the news conference today, electronic devices will fire frozen pucks at the mask to demonstrate its durability.

"We've been making tests with it to see how much it can take and it didn't even budge with shots at 135 miles an hour," he said.

"That's pretty good when you consider the hardest shot in the NHL is Bobby Hull's. He shoots 118 miles an hour."

The mask is made of woven fibres with resin added to keep them rigid.

At three ounces, the mask weighs about a pound less than a baseball catcher's and will cost between $15 and $25.

Grand Jury Closes Sawchuk Case

MINEOLA, N.Y. (CP) — A Nassau County grand jury has ruled the death of Terry Sawchuk, long-time National Hockey League goaltending great, was "completely accidental" and marked the case closed.

Ron Stewart, a New York Ranger team-mate of Sawchuk, was cleared Monday of any criminal responsibility in the May 31 death of the 40-year-old goalkeeper, taken to hospital in acute pain last April 29 after a scuffle with Stewart at the rented home they shared on Long Island.

District Attorney William A. Cahn, announcing the grand jury's decision, said the case is "closed . . . so far as any further criminal investigation by this office is concerned."

Stewart left for Toronto immediately after testifying before the grand jury for 45 minutes.

The death of the 27-year-old Stewart with Rangers, where he is a penalty-killing specialist and right winger, remained uncertain. The New York team did not put him on its protected list for today's NHL intra-league draft in Montreal.

Cahn told reporters that the testimony from nine witnesses, including Stewart, indicated the two hockey players had been involved April 29 in a "childish and senseless verbal argument, with a lot of pushing and shoving," after a disagreement over cleaning and closing their rented house at East Atlantic Beach.

Cahn said Sawchuk's death was "tragic, senseless, bizarre."

"The exact cause of Sawchuk's injury remains unknown . . . There was no evidence by any of the eyewitnesses that any blows were struck," said Cahn.

Evidence showed that Sawchuk and Stewart first had words in a Long Beach bar.

"The argument continued at the home . . . and apparently Stewart felt backward over an obstacle in the yard and Sawchuk and one Ben Weiner, who had hold of Sawchuk, fell and the injuries which caused the embolism leading to the death of Sawchuk occurred."

Sawchuk's gall bladder was removed at Long Beach Memorial Hospital. A liver operation followed and on May 29 the goalkeeper was taken to a New York City hospital where another operation on the liver was performed.

Poile Eyes Favell

MONTREAL (CP) — Bud Poile, general manager of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, said Monday he has his eye on goaltender Doug Favell of Philadelphia Flyers for his new club.

The Canucks and Buffalo Sabres join the NHL next season and will draft 20 players, including four goaltenders from the existing 12 clubs, in Wednesday's expansion draft.

Poile said he thinks Favell would help his club and that he is willing to make a deal with the Flyers for the services of the ,25-year-old St. Catharines, Ont., native.

Canada's Netters Easy Section Winners

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada has taken a bold first step along the Davis Cup trail and the next crossroads will bring a meeting with New Zealand.

Canada polished off the Commonwealth Caribbean in all five matches of the northern section of the American zone Davis Cup tennis tie which ended Monday.

And the team of Montrealer Mike Belkin and Torontonian John Sharpe and Stan Burwash now await the second round confrontation next weekend in Winnipeg against New Zealand's Brian Fairlie and Onny Parun.

Canada's captain Lawrie Strong of Toronto said Monday the 5-0 showing against the Caribbean "gives the team a big lift for the meeting with New Zealand."

"There are things we can do to improve, but all the basic weapons are there and we'll just have to refine ad improve on them."

The Canadians made it five straight with victories Monday in the final two singles matches. They had sewed up victory in the best-of-five elimination round Sunday after their doubles win over the Caribbean's Richard Russell and Lance Lumsden.

In Monday's play, the third members of each team performed in relief of their top-ranked players who also played in injury and illness.

Burwash defeated Leo Rolle 6-1, 6-1 and 6-1 and Sharpe beat Lumsden 6-4, 6-1 and 6-0.

Sharpe had beaten Russell in five sets and Belkin needed five sets to oust Lumsden in Saturday's singles play.

Sharpe's win was considered the key victory for Canada and even bigger things are expected from the young stockbroker.

"In the last 25 days I've played 21 times which is tremendous for me," said Sharpe. "I'm getting a little more confident . . . I think my game is at least twice as good as it was last week."

Belkin was taken out of Monday's action because of a recurring back ailment, but Strong said he should be fit and ready for the second round which gets under way at the Winnipeg Canoe Club Saturday.

Belkin, a world-ranked tennis player, has played against the New Zealanders before. He lost to Fairlie and has a win over Parun.

The New Zealand team is in Winnipeg and will begin practices Tuesday.

McLaren Honored

TORONTO (CP) — The Bruce McLaren award, a special plaque honoring the New Zealander whose cars dominated the Canadian-American Challenge Cup series since its inception four years ago, will be presented Saturday to the fastest qualifier in the kickoff of this year's race series.

McLaren was killed last week while testing one of his cars at Goodwood, England.

Since the international series for Group 7—big-bore sports-racing cars—was inaugurated in 1966, McLaren and fellow countryman and team-mate Denis Hulme had been the top competitors.

In the Ontario end of the series last year, McLaren was fastest qualifier and won the race. He and Hulme finished 1-3 and during the season collected a total of more than $300,000 in prize money for the richest series in motor sport.

Qualifying trials for the 200-mile race around the 2.5-mile Mosport road track will be Saturday, with the big event Sunday afternoon.

Mexicans Blaring Trumpets to Keep England Sleepless

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The 16 World Cup soccer contenders patched their wounds and sbulisent fans sought to clear the cobwebs from their heads as this section of Mexico braced for the eight games on Wednesday and Thursday that will wind up round-robin play.

Mexico City and Guadalajara, major soccer citadels, strove to get workers back into the shops and factories after considerable absenteeism Monday in the wake of celebrations that followed World Cup victories Sunday by the Mexican and Brazilian teams.

England, the defending World Cup champions, went back into training to try to eliminate the errors which led to its 1-0 loss to Brazil. Coach Sir Alf Ramsey is seeking a way to give his team some thrusting kick.

Brazilian coach Mario Zagalo must decide whether to let his team relax Wednesday against Romania. Brazil, with a maximum four points from two games in Group III, could still theoretically be eliminated by a disastrous loss to Romania.

Nevertheless Zagalo may be tempted to rest Pele, his star forward, rather than expose him to the tough-looking Romanian defence.

The Romanians need at least a draw to stay alive in the championships. On form, they are capable of getting it. They lost just as narrowly to England (1-0) as England did to Brazil.

But if Zagalo does decide to take the risk of letting Romania win two points, he will make his more difficult for England, —and that's a course that may have its attractions in the bitter rivalry between Europe and Latin America which has marked this World Cup scene.

England and Romania each has two points. England, in its last, group match Thursday, must beat winless Czechoslovakia by a convincing margin to go into the quarter-finals in a style worthy of defending champions.

However, England would need only a tie with Czechoslovakia to be sure of second place if Brazil beats Romania.

The Soviet Union, meeting El Salvador in Mexico City's Azteca Stadium, was reported planning to run up a huge score to make its mastery of Group I beyond all doubt.

Mexico and the Russians have three points each in their group. A draw with Belgium Thursday would give the host country second place in the group.

In Group II, Uruguay needs a win over Sweden to make sure of a quarter-final place.

Only West Germany and Peru, who meet Wednesday in Group IV, have clinched quarter-final berths with two wins each—over Bulgaria and Morocco.

The England players, camped in Guadalajara, complained that for the second night in a row Brazilian fans and Mexican supporters of the team awoke with bongo drums and blaring trumpets.

"It's simply impossible to get to sleep," said team captain Bobby Moore. Some of the players relaxed Monday at a hotel outside the city centre to get away from the noise.

The Mexican-Russian alliance has come up with a joke chant of "No-be-ca-Brasil," which is not just confined to voices. Car horns blare out the rhythm in the streets of the capital and in Guadalajara, Mexico's second city.

Against Czechoslovakia, it is essential for Ramsey to find a way to get goals from an attack which has produced only one in two matches.

Against Brazil his 4-4-2 system produced chances enough to win. Only Ramsey knows whether he will stick with his current front runners, Geoff Hurst and Francis Lee, or send in young strikers Allan Clarke and Peter Osgood.

The International Federation of Football Associations—FIFA—announced that four El Salvador players were cautioned for actions in the match against Czechoslovakia.

This resulted from a dispute over the first goal. The Salvadorans thought they had a free kick; the Mexicans believed it was theirs.

The Salvadorans moved forward to take the kick but the Mexicans got it, with the Salvadorans out of position, and scored. Afterwards a lot of jostling and pushing around the referee occurred.

El Salvador, Morocco and Bulgaria already have been eliminated mathematically with two losses each.

Soccer Arguments Can be Costly

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police Monday reported the first known slaying caused by an argument about a game in the ninth World Cup soccer championship.

Police accused Epigmenio Sanches Luna of Mexico City of shooting a neighbor, Herminio Gonzales, who had said: "Mexico didn't accomplish anything by beating El Salvador because the Central American team is a zero."

Gonzales was shot in the heart.

Mexico defeated El Salvador 4-0 Sunday.

Player Praises South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Gary Player, embroiled in the widening controversy over apartheid, praised his native South Africa Monday, but admitted some changes had to be made.

The diminutive professional golfer, who has won some $88,000 on the U.S. pro tour this year although under police guard against demonstrators at many tournaments, said his travels have showed him that South Africa has only minor problems compared to Western nations.

South Africa was the best country in the world to live in, he said, free from race riots, campus troubles, and still maintained discipline and law and order.

"What's more I think we have a greater love for and understanding of the non-white people in this country then they have in America for their Negroes," he said.

"It's a matter of sacrificing our country for sport, we must sacrifice sport."

But he did say that being forced to make such a choice would be a tragedy.

"Basically, what I'm trying to say is that if we want to compete with the rest of the world as it is thinking now, we are going to have to comply with the way they are thinking," he said.

"We will have to make some changes. What they are I don't know. This is where the government will have to make the decision."

South Africa's segregationist policies have led to the banning of South Africa from the last Olympic Games, and it's being kicked out of the Olympic movement and the Davis Cup in tennis.

Sports Canada Goes Under

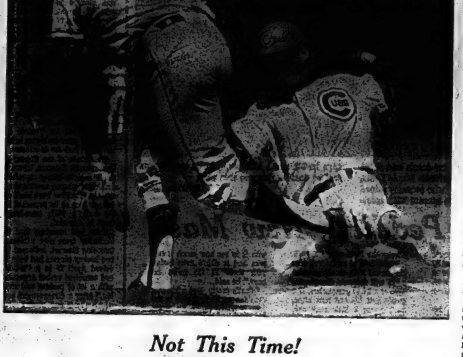
OTTAWA, (CP) — Assignments in bankruptcy have been filed on behalf of three companies involved with publication of the magazine Sports Canada, it was announced Monday.

D. F. McKechnie, trustee in bankruptcy, said assignments were filed with the Ontario Supreme Court on behalf of Sprocan Agency Ltd., Morton Basshaw and Co. Ltd. and Canpubco (Canada) Ltd.

He said Sprocan was responsible for advertising in the magazine, Basshaw for mechanical work and Canpubco for publishing.



Sports Canada suspended publication early this year.

A meeting to discuss the assignments is to be held here June 18.

Bill Van Burkleo, defensive halfback last year with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League, earlier filed suit against Red O'Quinn and Rick Black to recover $10,000 he said to have been loaned the men in connection with Sports Canada.

Black, former Rider player, and O'Quinn, former Rider general manager, were involved in starting up the publication, which first appeared last year.

O'Quinn now is general manager of Montreal Alouettes of the CFL.

Jim Hickman of the Chicago Cubs slides safely into third as wild throw from right fielder Ken Henderson of the San Francisco Giants gets away from third baseman Ron Hunt (33) in fifth inning of Friday's game at Chicago. Action came on right field single by Johnny Callison, but Henderson's throw ended up in Cubs' dugout, scoring Hickman, and advancing Callison to third. Chicago won, 12-8.

Billingham Blasted From Shutout String

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A two-run homer by Art Shamsky featured a 6-4 pitcher Jack Billingham's shutout streak Monday night as New York Mets trimmed Houston Astros 2-0 in the only scheduled National League game. Right-hander Jim McAndrew limited the Astros to five singles as the Mets ended a five-game losing streak.

In the only American League contest, Tommy Harper's home run off the first pitch of the game sparked Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 win over Chicago White Sox.

Three inter-league exhibitions were played Monday night. Baltimore Orioles downed Philadelphia Phillies 7-4, Montreal Expos outscored Boston Red Sox 8-6, and Kansas City Royals beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4.

At Houston, McAndrew and Billingham were locked in a shutout duel over five innings. Cleon Jones started the New York rally in the sixth with a one-out single. Shamsky followed with his sixth home run of the season to cut Billingham's string of scoreless pitching at 25 innings.

The Astros threatened to score in the seventh. Joe Pepitone opened with a single, but was out when Jim Wynn hit into a double play. Norm Miller and Denis Menke followed with consecutive singles, but Keith Lampard flied out to end the inning.

Lew Krausse scattered six Chicago hits, one of them a home run by Ed Herrmann, to pick up his fourth victory for the Brewers.

Milwaukee fattened its lead with a four-run rally in the third inning. Singles by Mike Hegan, Ted Kubiak and Phil Roof, a walk to Ted Savage and Russ Snyder's double produced the runs.

A bases-loaded single by Rusty Staub in the fourth inning was the key blow for the Expos in a four-run rally, erasing a 6-4 Boston lead, at Montreal.

Carl Yastrzemski struck a two-run homer off Montreal reliever Howie Reed in the fourth to break a 4-4 tie.

Two consecutive walks in the fourth finished Red Sox' starter Jim Lonborg and Jose Santiago came on in relief. Jim Gosger singled to load the bases and Staub's hit drove across two runs to tie the score 6-6. A single by Mack Jones and an error by Santiago accounted for the Expos' final two runs.

In one other exhibition game Monday, Cincinnati Reds of the National League posted an 8-3 win over Indianapolis Indians, their Triple-A farm club in the American Association.

Expos Eye Winnipeg For Triple A Team

MONTREAL (CP) — Officials of the National League Montreal Expos held talks Monday on the possibility of establishing a Class AAA International League farm team in Winnipeg.

President John McHale and director manager Jim Fanning of the Expos met with Percy Downton, president of Winnipeg Enterprises Ltd., owners of Winnipeg Stadium.

They also had a long-distance telephone talk with Mayor Stephen Juba of Winnipeg.

McHale said:

"We're planning to meet again after the Winnipeg officials have had a chance in evaluate with members of their boards the requirements that are necessary for Class AAA ball."

Buffalo Bison, Expos farm team in the International League, currently are homeless after running into financial problems and a new site for the franchise is being sought.

Meanwhile, the Expos confirmed a report that Watertown, S. D., would be considered a possible site for the Expos current Class A Northern League franchise in Winnipeg if Winnipeg becomes a Class AAA city.

Reid's One-hitter Ends City's One-game Winning Streak

Ellis Juniors' Scott Reid ended City Hotel's "win streak" at one game as he fired a one-hit masterpiece to give the Juniors a 2-1 win.

In the other Commercial League game played Monday night, Point Anne edged Stinson's, coming up with a run in the bottom of the eighth for a 5-4 win.

The Juniors hung the loss on Bob Ethier by scoring unearned runs in the first and second innings to account for their scoring.

A two-out double by Ken Genereaux in the bottom of the fifth inning ruined Reid's bid for a perfect game. A walk and a wild pitch allowed the City shortstop to score his team's only tally.

The Ellis harlers fanned four batters and walked a single man, while getting the losers to pop out for most of the game. Ethier allowed only four hits, striking out five and walking two.

Cliff Scott and John Campbell scored the Ellis runs, reaching base on singles and scoring on City fielding miscues. Scott Reid with a single and Wayne McTaggert's double were the other Junior hitters.

Back - to - back doubles by Larry Fraser and Vern Whalen in the bottom half of the first extra inning gave Point Anne their win over slumping Stinson's Construction.

Stinsons weather a four-run sixth inning and come back to tie the game with a pair of tallies in their half of the seventh, on a single by Larry Soule, a Point Anne error and Harold Workhoven's base hit.

The winners got their four runs in the sixth on Mike Cook's safety, two walks and a double by Larry Fraser.

Jamie Hunter went the distance for Point Anne allowing eight hits, walking one and fanning five.

Bob Swan took the loss in relief of Howard Jeffs who was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning. The pair gave up five hits, issuing six free passes and striking out five batters.

Fraser's two doubles were tops on the Point Anne team, while Harold Workhoven and Martin Walsh each had two base hits for Stinson's.

Belleville defenceman Tom Helm sets his sights on retrieving the ball during the Quinte Lacrosse League game last night. Helm and his teammates were outscored 4-1 in the final period to drop an 8-4 decision to the defending league champions from Campbellford.

Little League Pitchers Like to Help Themselves

Little league pitchers believe in helping themselves. This was proven Monday night when each of the winning pitchers made big bat contributions to their Minor Baseball Association wins.

Thapsie Terry McEachern started a double and single to lead his Eric Watkins mates to a 9-4 win over Plane's. McEachern and Dave Emerson recorded 16 strikeouts between them and walked nine batters.

Plane's losing mound staff Dale McTaggart, Tony Parks and Stev Meeks also fanned 16, but issued 19 bases - on - balls.

Bill Whalen helped himself with a homer, double and two singles, and pitching mate Brian Turner added a homer as the Branch 99 Legion pewees trounced Farrell's 25-10. The winning pitchers struck out nine and walked six, getting support from Tony Meagher's triple, George Bongard's triple and double, and Billy Balys' double and single.

Losing pitchers Clyde Routley and Joe Moleski each struck out two hits in a losing cause, striking out 10 but walking 15 between them.

In the other pewee game Monday Cablevue pitcher Mike McClelland banged a triple and single to help his mates earn a 5-2 verdict over Barrage's. McClelland and John Misner combined to strike outs and gave up only two walks, while David Holland's homer and double provided their biggest support.

Losing pitchers Allan Rutherford and Glen Pearson fanned 10 and issued the same number of free passes.

Soule's One-hitter Keeps Wings Flying

The number 13 proved to be lucky to the Wings of the Tyke minor softball division last night, as they handed the Leafs a 13-1 setback.

Tim Soule pitched the win, allowing only one hit, walking five and fanning 20. Len Wigger was touched for 17 safeties in a losing cause.

Bob Hedge and Tim Soule had homers included in their two hits for the Wings, with Ron Buckley and Ron Globe picking up a double and single respectively.

The Kinsemen bantam Bobcats stopped the Bears 5-1. Andy Rossi pitched a two-hitter for the Bobcats, while DON Green took the loss.

Atlas Keeps Moving

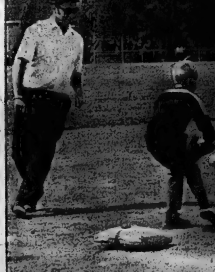
Atlas Van Lines moved to a 10-3 win over Bob's Sports in minor lacrosse pewee action last night.

Jeff Belanger paced his team with four goals, while Kent Manning and John Green each had a hat trick. Mike MacDonald scored twice for Bob's Sports with Randy Hutchinson adding the other.

In the other game the Dairy Queen steppe dthe Y's Men's Club 8-2, Brent Walmsley notched four goals for the winners. Glen Mortimore scored twice and Steve Wilson and Roger Colden once.



Mike Thompson and Bob Ashley were the goalgetters for the losers.

Soccer Stalemate

In minor soccer play Monday, Trenton and the Oddfellows juniors played to a 2-2 deadlock, while the Beppe's peewees took a 4-1 decision from the Steelworkers.

Dennis Woodcock and Jim MacDonald scored Trenton's goals in the junior contest with Stuart Hilchon and David Smith replying for Oddfellows.

Rick Barbeau and Eddie Grills each counted twice to pace Beppi's win, while John Lynch got the Steelworkers lone marker.

Stylish Squirt

Deacon Shirt's Dwight Begley gets prepared to unload one of his fanciest slides during CASA squirt action at the Alemite Sunday. Umpire "Soup" Campbell prepares to call the third-base play in the game won 12-5 by Belleville.

Lacrosse Jrs. Lack Finish

Last period woes continued to plague the Belleville Junior lacrosse team, which saw Campbellford outscore them 4-1 in the final frame to break what had been a close, well-played Quinte Lacrosse League match.

Last year's Quinte League champions dominated play in the final frame to come up with the 8-4 win.

Only some brilliant goaltending by Paul Muldoon in the Belleville nets prevented the score from being even higher. Coach Jerry Vincent was fairly well pleased with his team's effort in the first two frames as they trailed only 4-3 after two periods.

"We really missed John Whalen and Greg Scarlett", claimed team manager Roy Payne. "Right now we're a little weak on defence but we should improve after a couple of our regulars return from school."

Whalen and Scarlett, who are sitting out suspensions are expected to be back in action for Thursday's game in Cobourg.

Ball handling appeared to be the Belleville bugaboo as they failed to match the sharp passing of the visitors.

Fred Tanner led the Campbellford scorers with five goals. Single markers went to John Gay, Wayne Turpah and Don McMillan.

For the losers, Steve Casselman was the top scorer notching two goals. Dave Middleton and Steve Pecoul added the other scores.

Besides Muldoon, who came up with a number of almost impossible stops, Tom Helm stood out with a hard-hitting defensive game and newcomer Brian Reddick performed well in his initial game.

Cobourg had nine infractions and Belleville six in the lightly penalized contest.

Last-inning Circuit Clouts Give Printers Win

The Intelligencer pulled their Industrial Softball game "out of the bag" last night, getting last-inning homers from Ron Culloden and Merv Thompson to win 7-6 over the Post Office.

Dave Feeney pitched seven-hit ball to record the win for the Intell, who are currently tied for first place with Head Johnson. He struck out four men and walked a pair.

George Johnson took the loss allowing 10 hits walking two and fanning three.

The Post Office scored once in the top of the seventh to give them a 6-5 lead, but Culloden led off the final frame with a solo homer to tie the game. After Johnson got the next two batters, Thompson blasted his game-winning shot over the right-fielder's head.

Culloden and Thompson each had a homer and single for the winners, with Bill Moreton getting a lone circuit blast and Bill Hoard collecting two singles.

Glynn Reynolds stroked a pair of doubles in a losing cause with Gord St. Louis getting a two-bagger.

AOCO bunched all their scoring in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings to stop the Morch Mariners 5-3 for their second win of the year.

Dennis Genereaux pitched the route, allowing four hits, while walking eight and striking out ten. Will Bulpitt fanned two and walked three while giving up eight hits.

Genereaux helped his own cause with a pair of hits, with the other going to Sagriff, Hornbower, Brown, Wales, Palmer and Wood.

Hallett homered for the losers, while Bone, Marsh and Turner collected the other hits.

Best Girls Over 30

Winners in the opening Girls Softball games were members of the "over-30" club as Ellis Sweethearts won their senior contest 31-15, while the Dairy Queen juniors stopped the Impossibles 11-12.

Hughes pitched the win for Ellis, with Strahan taking the loss.

Hughes also topped the winners at the plate with a pair of homers with single home runs going to P. Hughes, Harper and Crabb.

Cronin won the Dairy Queen game, getting support from Wardaugh with a homer and Kirby, who tripled.

Queens Better

Dairy Queen continued their winning ways with a 7-1 win over Weese's Greenhouse in Womens Softball action last night.

Barb Breadner pitched the win, fanning nine batters. Nora and Irma Barberstock split the inning decision for the losers.

Kathy Brown led the winners with a homer and double while Barb Breadner tripled and Beth Palmer doubled.

Theresa Maracle had a triple for the losers.

Aces Galore!

Bay of Quinte Country Club goalers have been getting aces with the regularity of a crooked blackjack dealer in the past week, with Paul Castonguay recording the third hole-in-one in seven day Monday.

Castonguay sank his tee shot on the 155-yard, 12th hole, using a seven iron.

He was playing in a foursome with Bob Moon, Jack Johnston and Ross Down.

Pharmacists' President Flays Unscrupulous Drug Promotion

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The president of the Ontario Pharmacists' Association said Monday there is too much emphasis on drug use in our society and attacks "unscrupulous, blatant advertising" of drugs as contributing to the problem.

"The promise of a pill for every ill," G. L. Hiller told the association' 63rd annual convention, "and the availability of this medication over the counter or by prescription has brought us to this drug oriented society."

He said that whether it is taken for kicks by the young, as a morning pep pill by an overweight frustrated housewife or a sleeping pill or tranquilizer for a mentally-exhausted male, drugs are used as an escape from pressures of our society.

Mr. Hiller questioned if the drug industry, by its "over promotion" of medicines, could become "pushers of our bodies."

He called for tighter controls on many over-the-counter preparations by druggists, and encouraged they use "professional restraint and place ethics ahead of the almighty dollar."

If the "put all your faith in the pill" philosophy of the last decade continues into the next, Mr. Hiller warned, pharmacists will be forced to play an ever-increasing roll in the checks and balance of drug usage.

Religious Instruction Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — The Ecumenical Institute of Canada asked Monday that the teaching of religion be permitted as an optional subject in Ontario high schools.

In a brief presented to Education Minister William Davis, the institute also asked that teachers-in-training at universities be permitted to major in religion so that specialist religion teachers would become available to instruct in high school courses.

Reducing Smoking Not Good Enough

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: According to my doctor, I have emphysema. I don't feel especially bad. Just have a little cough and slight shortness of breath when I walk fast or run.

Other than advising me to give up smoking, there is nothing else he has prescribed. Do you have any practical hints for a patient like myself? I still smoke a pack a day (I used to smoke three packs). — Mr. B.

Comment: Congratulations on cutting down to one pack a day. However I'm sorry I can't pat you on the back as being a completely cooperative patient.

Your emphysema will not improve if you cut down further from one pack to one single cigarette. It would still be like "taking a little bit of poison."

There's the old joke about the man who stood under a No Smoking sign and continued to smoke. He said: "It doesn't say Positively No Smoking." Where emphysema is involved, the patient has no choice. Quit. (No pipes or cigars, either.)

We know that colds and attacks of bronchitis aggravate emphysema. Therefore, try to protect yourself from these infections by staying away from people with colds, and from crowds. At the first evidence of illness, see your doctor so he can treat you early with antibiotics, etc., to prevent acute bronchitis, pneumonia etc.

Try to avoid heavy dust and irritating fumes, even if you have to consider changing jobs. Since patients in air polluted cities improve by changing climate in moving to another part of the country. However, breathing "clean" air is no guarantee that emphysema can be prevented or improved. Moving is serious business.

Many emphysema patients become short of breath while eating. As a result they lose nutritional and weight because they do not eat enough. One way to overcome this is to plan to eat less at meal times but eat more frequently.

A good night's sleep is essential. Therefore an occasional sedative at night is important when prescribed by your doctor.

Special walking exercises (with or without oxygen) are important. So are breathing exercises to develop the diaphragm. (For example, have your doctor demonstrate "silent whistle" or "pursed lip" exhalation — which helps get rid of most of more of the stale air.)

Also have your doctor explain the use of bronchodilators and how to lie (head down) for gravity drainage of mucus from the lungs. Ask him about the need for using the IPPB machine for deep breathing.

I give you these suggestions, not because you personally may require them all; but to give you an idea of what the patient with emphysema may require in management of his condition — depending upon his individual needs. If your doctor still believes you need no further treatment, and you are in doubt, ask for consultation with a chest specialist.

For Mrs. V.: Many lovers of cheese have been told to cut out their favorites because they have a high blood cholesterol. As a substitute I suggest the use of cottage cheese. At first, not a satisfactory dish; but I've found that many grow to like it.

* * *

For Mrs. L.: The fact that you are 75 pounds overweight may be one reason why you have been unable to become pregnant. In a few instances, I have found that reduction of excessive weight seemed to be a helpful factor in women who have apparently been sterile.

Sydney J. Harris Says

'Pot' Is Smoked to Conform

Speaking of young people, as I was yesterday, reminded one of the latest cases of a 15-year-old heroin addict in New York: "I started using dope because my friends were using it and I didn't want to be left out."

Most kids begin experimenting with pot as a way of demonstrating that they belong to the "in" group, that they are "with it," that they march in the vanguard of young mod-ernity. Child-psychiatrists, at grade-cal conformists in the world, and nonconforming to the Establishment is the way they now conform to each other.

In commenting on this problem, Prof. Reuel McDevid of the University of Chicago makes an interesting and pertinent point in a recent educational bulletin. He suggests that our emphasis on "group activities" has stimulated the tendency of youth to copy one another even more than they normally might.

"It seems to me" he writes, "that one of the shortcomings of present-day education, at almost every level, is the emphasis on groups at the expense of individuals. Instead of the process of growing up . . . is learning to take groups with one another, of sharing, of discussion, and acquiring the power to walk away from them (those who are loaded in asserting nonconformity are often the most tyrannical in imposing their own kind of conformism)."

I was struck by much the same thought not long ago when I attended a film showing at my children's school. Five high school youths were standing up in the aisle behind me, trying to friends, and each was identically bearded and dressed in hippy style so that they presented ludicrously overgrown quintuplets. They were just as represented as if all had been wearing the same Brooks Bros. suit or military school uniform.

It is hard not to agree with Prof. McDevid that our educational (and social) emphasis on "group activities" has stimulated nonconformity in individual to his peer-group that has made him more ashamed than ever before to be his own person.

Admittedly, there are many other factors moving young people to pot and the even more dangerous capsules. But the high sanction we confer on "group activities," and the pressure we give to the individual who prefers to go his own way, surely must contribute to the growing problem of addiction as a form of inalienable peer-conformity.

It is ironic that a nation that considers "individualism" so ardently in the marketplace is so intolerant of individualism in any other area of social life, looking with approved up on the "joiner" and with suspicion upon the "loner." Above all revolutions take on the color of the regime they want to overthrow. It is scarcely an accident that our youth dissidents enthusiastically "join" in the pot parade.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 19

Your birthday today: Your motivation is for excellence. You should stem from healthy normal development. Brief interludes of confusion may occur, but the main path is toward solid success in skills and knowledge. Be willing to change and grow to suit new conditions. Today's natives are positive and persistent, willing to work hard and often possess difficult tempers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This promises to be a quiet day in which you can make some sensible progress. Let your loved ones know you really do care.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Pick up the pieces from yesterday and go on with your work. Creative effort is favored. You can improve your living conditions through use of available resources.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Concentrate on one thing at a time if you want to get anything done at home and in social action could stand some thought now. Decide what you want it to be and get started.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you start early and try your best, you can get up a new way forward. Creative and mental activities are under excellent aspects.

LEO (July 23 — AUGU. 22): Rely mainly on your own initiative. Physical or mechanical projects can be managed better now — stand to them. Relax early for the extra rest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Don't fritter away the day over trivial details. Attend to considerations health care new habits requiring practice — all without complaints.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Money matters permits you to pick up the threads of tangled matters. The less public notice you attract the better. Use the evening for meditation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Everybody hires to you in cooperation and friendly way reflecting your own attitudes. Organize quickly; share the work and the credit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Timing today is important. Start early and allow for delays. A tardy beginning will find you completing assignments too late.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You have the opportunity to do something to bring peaceful situations to the people around you. Mull it over and get started along constructive lines.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Positive thinking improves both your career and personal situations today. Expect to carry more than what seems your fair share of adjustments in the home without grumbling.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Put on your most comfortable shoes and in a full day of people are quite ready to help. Creative projects thrive.

Senate Is Called Tame Tiger

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Senate was described Monday as a "pretty tame tiger" that has not fulfilled its purpose and must be abolished or reformed.

A resolution by Frank Muldoon of Winnipeg said Senate reform must ensure that less populated regions are protected and represented, must redefine and broaden the Senate's role and give it more significance in the two-house parliamentary system.

The resolution was presented at the closing of the three-day conference and received strong support from delegates.

Delegates also took issue with the practice of voting along party lines in the Commons, saying it "seriously impaired" MPs from carrying out the wishes of their constituents.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

This Special Hemorrhoid Remedy Contains a Unique Healing Substance That Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles". It is no wonder, harassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you have this unsatisfactory relief — here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its pain-allaying properties also help prevent infection.

In case hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained over a period of months. Among these sufferers were a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions — even cases of long standing.

The healing substance is the new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Cost of Living Index Declines

OTTAWA (CP) — Reversal of a sharp April increase in food prices brought the consumer price index down one-tenth of an index point last month to 129.6 from 129.7.

A finance department spokesman described the announcement by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics Tuesday as good news in all respects.

Not only did food prices decline but other sectors of the consumer price index behaved well —with the exception of housing —on a seasonally-adjusted basis computed by the finance department.

A member of the federal prices and incomes commission also said the index decline reflected some success in talking industry into holding prices down.

The commission now is getting regular reports from wholesalers and retailers showing their compliance with the yardstick of holding price increases below cost increases. Profit margins are being squeezed.

DBS reported that food prices declined nine-tenths of one per cent last month. They had risen eight-tenths of one per cent in April. The over-all index last month was 3.8 per cent higher than in May last year. This is the smallest 12-month increase since February, 1969.

But housing costs continued to rise last month, and were five per cent higher than a year earlier.

Officials describe this sector of the over-all index as the slowest one to react to lowered costs. High interest rates on mortgages are quickly reflected in new house prices, but lower rates are slow in moving the index down.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: High pressure over the United States south of the Great Lakes is causing very warm and settled weather throughout southern and central Ontario. Low pressure across Northern Ontario separates the southern warmth from much cooler and unsettled weather to the north.

Drury, Houle Wave Cudgels

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal leaders return to the bargaining table today, verbally picturing themselves as front-line warriors in labor's battle against government wage restraints.

But as the deadlocked negotiations dragged into their ninth month, C. M. Drury, president of the federal treasury board, made it clear that the government, too, considers the dispute a vital test of wage restraint on which it cannot yield.

In an interview, the minister said the government will risk long-term damage to the post office to uphold the six-per-cent maximum it has requested on wage increases this year.

Mr. Drury was commenting on statements made Tuesday by Postmaster-General Eric Kierans, who said he wants a settlement "fast" because the Post Office is losing business, and may lose some of it permanently, if mail disruptions continue.

However, a quick settlement of the contract dispute seems unlikely. No progress has yet been made on key issues of wages, monetary fringe benefits and job security.

William Houle, co-chairman of the 27,000-member Council of Postal Unions, said late Tuesday that as long as the six-per-cent wage guidelines are maintained there will be no settlement.

"If we give in we will drag the rest of organized labor down with us," Mr. Houle said. "We are fighting the first fight against the guidelines."

Earlier, Cecil Harper, chief treasury board negotiator, said he has no freedom in bargaining to exceed the wage guidelines. He said fringe benefits too are included with straight wages, in the six-per-cent maximum.

So far treasury board has offered postal workers, who now average $3.06 an hour, increases totalling 41 cents over 34½ years, plus unspecified fringe benefits. Mr. Drury estimates the total offer is worth just under six per cent.

The unions have refused to budge from their demand for 61 cents over two years. Treasury board estimates the union demand as worth 11 per cent and when fringe demands are added in, 20 per cent.

Meanwhile, in the Commons, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday the government has no plans to implement mandatory wage and price controls, and it is not involved in the preparation of such a scheme.

New Homes for Canadians Earning $3,000 Said Possible

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The president of the National Home Builders' Association said Tuesday his group could build houses which people earning $3,000 annually could afford to buy.

Eric Johnston of Toronto told a group of home builders and politicians the high cost of housing is the result of costly and unnecessary government restrictions.

"There are thousands of dollars in the cost of a home which have nothing to do with materials or labor. On a $13,075 home, for instance, there is $1,000 in sales tax alone."

Other expenses, he told a special meeting of the St. Catharines Home Builders' Association, stem from such planning restrictions as requirements for sidewalks, underground hydro and paved private driveways.

"The standard of housing in Canada is inferior to none in the world but we have that standard at a price—fourth-fifths of our people can't afford housing."

He challenged all levels of government to let the association build a demonstration project with all restrictions lifted.

"We will house 1,250,000 more Canadians at no extra cost to governments if they will let us show them how," he said.

Mercury Traces Found In Cereals, Milk Powder

OTTAWA (CP) — Appearance of mercury at unacceptable levels in a few samples of cereals and powdered milk has led federal authorities to intensify efforts to locate the source and extent of contamination, it was learned Tuesday.

Prime object of suspicion is seed grain which has been treated with an organic mercury compound to kill rust and other fungus.

The mercury contamination showed up in samplings now being taken by the five regional laboratories of the federal food and drug directorate.

They have reinforced steps by the federal agriculture department to re-assess entirely the use of mercury in agriculture.

Industry sources forecast virtual elimination of mercurials by the end of next year. The agriculture department said there is a considerable reduction in mercury use this year.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, deputy chief of the federal food and drug directorate, said about 100 food samples—cereals, meat, vegetables, milk and eggs—have been analyzed in laboratories in the five regions.

"We are finding occasional samples with sporadic and unpredictable mercury content," he said.

These are mainly cereals and products in the grain-animal cycle, particularly dried skim milk.

While the government recognizes no safe level in food samples, the World Health Organization has fixed a limit of .05 parts per million in the total food supply and Canada has banned marketing of fish with more than .05 parts per million.

Dr. Morrison said one skim milk sample had .23 parts per million of mercury and 17 others less than .02. One wheat sample had .28 and another .14 and five others less than .01.

Ten egg samples had less than .01, five less than .04, one less than .08 and seven less than .05. They were analyzed at different regional laboratories. Among potatoes, 11 samples had less than .01, 19 cabbage samples had less than .01 and 28 apple samples less than .01.

Bomb Rips Offices Of New York Police

NEW YORK (AP) — Seventeen minutes after an anonymous caller telephoned a bomb threat, a powerful dynamite blast ripped through the second floor of police headquarters Tuesday night. Eight persons were injured, none seriously.

"There is a bomb set to go off at police headquarters," the unidentified male caller said and hung up. The time was 8:40 p.m. EDT.

About 150 persons were at work in the fortress-like, 61-year-old structure at the time — most of them in the fourth-floor communications centre. Emergency units sped to the building and began a search.

At 4:37 p.m. the bomb — estimated to have contained 10 to 15 sticks of dynamite — exploded in a men's room, destroying several nearby offices and shattering windows in the five-storey structure.

Fighting Continues In Jordan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fighting still raged today in Amman despite an early-morning ceasefire between King Hussein of Jordan and guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat aimed at ending the fighting between their forces in the Jordanian capital. Meanwhile, a band of extremist guerrillas held 32 foreigners hostage in a Amman hotel.

Guerrilla reports reaching Beirut, Lebanon, said a Jordanian armored unit moved back from the Jordan River front with Israel today and shelled a refugee camp on the outskirts of Amman where several guerrilla organizations have their headquarters.

Guerrilla sources in Damascus said that although the fighting today was widespread it was not as intense as Tuesday, when from 50 to 100 persons died.

Lightning Feared

Storms Mixed Blessing for Firefighters

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

More rain and cool weather were forecast today across fire-scarred timberland in northern Saskatchewan and Alberta, but precipitation was expected to be light and accompanied by lightning in some cases.

More than 2,000 men continued battling 69 fires in Alberta and 90 in Saskatchewan, while Alberta forestry officials faced the threat of new fires in the tinder-dry Rocky Mountain foothills.

Lightning has been responsible for most of the fires that have ravaged timber in northern areas of both provinces in the last two weeks. Most blazes now are considered under control.

Rain fell Tuesday night and early today in scattered areas checking the speed of the fires and helping spotters locate blazes previously hidden by dense smoke.

Damage was largely to non-commercial timber, but some fires were in spruce and jackpine. Spruce is the major source of commercial timber products.

Latest reports indicated the largest fire continued to burn on the defence department's Primrose Lake air weapons range, straddling the Alberta-Saskatchewan border. It was reported advancing on a 50-mile front early Tuesday.

About 170 fires were reported burning Tuesday in British Columbia and 16 in Manitoba, but a trend toward rain and cooler temperatures was expected to assist bringing these under control.

Northwest Ontario Tinder Dry

TORONTO (CP) — Northwestern Ontario is facing its worst forest-fire threat in almost 10 years, Lionel Affleck, fire control officer for the department of lands and forests, said Tuesday.

Sixty-five fires now are burning. Several of them, including a 1,500-acre fire 135 miles northeast of Thunder Bay, are out of control.

In the last four days an additional 29 blazes have been extinguished.

Mr. Affleck said the dryness index is "extremely high" in most areas north and west of the Severn River because of a lack of rain.

"Odd scattered thunder showers are, unfortunately, giving little rain and more lightning," he said. "At the moment, it's lightning that's causing the bulk of our problems."

Separate School Board Confident of Financial Future

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The state of separate school education in Hastings and Prince Edward counties is not yet at a crisis level, despite the projected half - million - dollar deficit for this year's operations.

"We'll get out of it," asserted board vice - chairman Ben Krause. "I'm the situation gets no worse, we can get out from under eventually."

A brief is now being prepared for the ministry of education, asking for relief for school boards like Hastings-Prince Edward, with a small pupil population scattered over a large geographic area. The Hastings - Prince Edward board covers a larger geographic area than any other separate school board in the province.

Mr. Krause, business manager Edgar Paquet and supervisor of program and acting superintendent R. G. Mercereau discussed the reasons for the deficit and the means of pulling out of the present financial doldrums following announcement of the budget yesterday. Board chairman E. J. Buckley was out of town.

"The main reason we are in this position is that tax support is geared down — we have no support from major industries in Hastings," the vice-chairman said.

Another reason was lack of adequate spending by the individual boards in assessment before amalgamation in January, 1969.

"Additional programs — French, special education and kindergarten — were where the money should have been spent in 1968," added Mr. Paquet.

These programs were advised in 1969 by the two-county board, forcing educational costs up.

Since educational spending in 1969 was held at no more than 15 per cent above the 1968 level, the boards received additional expenses for programs without the additional funds to pay for them.

In 1969, the board was entitled to put a pupil provincial grants of $488, although the ceiling, payable to boards with previously high expenditures, was $400. This year the board is entitled to $428 per pupil, $75 less than the maximum of $503 permitted some boards.

A large pupil-teacher ratio is another contributing factor to the deficit position.

The ratios went from 22.1 to 1 in 1968-69 to 23.4 to 1 in 1969-70, in January, 1969 there were 3,892 pupils in the system and 181 teachers. By January 1970 there were 175 teachers and 3,891 pupils, a increase of 34 teachers for 72 additional pupils."

However, the average class size was about 30 pupils, because technical, in the ratio figures are part-time teachers and principals' reliefs. Consultants and co-ordinators are not included in ratio calculations.

"A reasonable ratio would be 25 to 27 to 1," said Mr. Mercereau.

Projected ratio for 1970-71 is 24.5 to 1, a reduction accomplished not by increasing ratios to fill vacancies left by nice resignations.

The separate school board carries a heavy capital works debt. Fourteen per cent of its annual budget goes for debenture payments, and the amount will increase next year when the first debenture payment for purchase of the Tweed high school comes due.

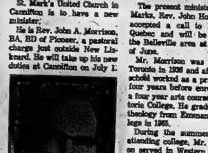
"Fourteen per cent in capital debts is high for any board and we called in to start with purchase of the Tweed school pending," said Mr. Paquet.

Only source of revenue is through property tax levy," said Mr. Paquet. But this method of raising the required money is impractical, and would result in hiking taxes to three times their present level for a period of several years. Hence the brief to the minister.

"What is needed is a more realistic approach by the department of education to educational budgeting," he said.

Cutting programs in the schools is no solution, the board officials agree.

"How can you cut back services when the minister says you must provide equality of education?" queried Mr. Paquet.



By seeking increased revenue from the province and cutting back on the number of teachers, the board hopes to hold the line and eventually emerge from its deficit position.

With an eye to the future, it is also hoped that new industry will bring increased population and assessment to broaden the separate school tax base.

New Minister For St. Mark's

St. Mark's United Church in Camilton is to have a new minister.

He is Rev. John A. Morrison, BA, BD of Picoser, a pastoral charge just outside New Liskeard. He will take up his new duties at Camilton on July 1.

REV. J. A. MORRISON

The present minister at St. Mark's, Rev. John Bickley, has accepted a call to Lachute, Quebec and will be leaving the Belleville area at the end of June.

Mr. Morrison was born in Toronto in 1926 and after high school worked as a printer for four years before entering in a four year arts course at Victoria College. He graduated in theology from Emmanuel College in 1955.

During the summer, while attending college, Mr. Morrison served in Western Canada mission fields. Following his ordination in 1955 he took up his present charge in the New Liskeard area.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison have three children, Peter, six; Melanie, three, and Lizzie, five months.

The present minister, Mr. Bickley, has been at Camilton four years and with his wife and daughter will leave for Lachute at the end of the month.

Although a congregation at Lachute are English speaking protestants, a French speaking protestant group use his church for meetings.

"I hope to take part in their meetings so I guess I will have to hone up on my French," Mr. Hobbs confessed.

Y Program Under Way

The Belleville Family YMCA has made progress in realizing its reform program, the so-called Action Plan.

At a Y directors meeting June 4, a new constitution was presented.

If the constitution is adopted, there will be an open form of election procedure.

The processes of nomination committee and election meeting will remain but ballots will also be sent to the entire membership to ensure a wider participation.

The national role of the YMCA, at least in the area, is defined in the last few weeks.

At the national convention in Ottawa, many of the religious trappings of that event were removed as a matter of national policy as well as a number of other potential corporate impediments.

The committee system has been altered somewhat and the committees are meeting weekly or even bi-weekly.

The marketing campaign for new memberships is under way and one Y spokesman reports that there are some 20 new members.

The financial situation is being assessed and there is a special meeting of the finance committee last night.

City council has exempted the YMCA from the general tax rate and negotiations will soon begin with United Community Services.

The YMCA directors hope that the UCS contract will permit certain revenue making events by the Y, in an attempt to stabilize Y resources.

The YMCA has agreed to accept a director chosen by the city council. Mrs. Jean Smith will hold this office.

OMB Decision Would Restrict Cottage Building in Ameliasburg

AMELIASBURG (Special) — Summer cottages may disappear from the Ameliasburg scene altogether.

The final decision rests with the Ontario Municipal Board who will have to rule upon the recommendation of a Belleville dentist to lot to be added to the Township zoning bylaw covering lot size required for summer cottages.

Dr. John Clarke, a property owner in the Pete's Point area, submitted a petition last night with a request for the specifications of a summer cottage lot be raised to 30,000 square feet with 100 feet frontage to comply with R2 zoning.

Summer cottage zoning in the Township at present calls for a 15,000 square foot area with a minimum of 75 feet frontage.

Dr. Clarke expressed the opinion that the 1,200 square foot floor plan set out as a home building requisite in R2 regulations should be adopted by council to bring about the change in summer cottage zoning.

The zoning bylaw, in effect, permits summer cottage construction with a minimum floor plan area of 600 square feet.

The changes, according to Dr. Clarke, will discourage the conversion of summer cottages to permanent homes, a practice which the township are powerless to prevent once the cottage is erected in accordance with present zoning regulations.

Council passed Dr. Clarke's request on to the township planning board for action.

In communications from the Ontario Municipal Board reported that Jack Allin of Belleville had been refused approval to develop an acreage in the Pete's Point area as a summer cottage subdivision. Mr. Allin's request for a zoning change was the subject for an OMB hearing in the township hall earlier this year.

Plans for a firehall in the Carrying Place area will be shelved for this year, council revealed. The reason for the delay is due to a decision to hold back on spending for the volunteer fire department, already nearing its budget limit.

With the large number of grass fires recently added to a house fire that cost the township $1,000 to contain during the weekend, council told a delegation of the volunteers, all expenses would have to be delivered until 1971.

The spokesman for the delegation who reported several members of the township department had enrolled to take a Scuba diving course under Jim Meeks of Belleville wanted to know whether they would be covered by compensation in the event of an accident during training. Council agreed to investigate the feasibility and approved an expenditure, should be the firemen, for 21 hat badges at a cost of $5.25 each.

Tweed Vote Favors Lounges

TWEED (Special) — Tweed residents yesterday in a liquor plebiscite voted in favor of a lounge licence for sale of liquor without meals.

The vote saw only a 40 per cent turnout with only 459 of more than 1,000 eligible residents turning out at the polls. Four hundred and ten voted in favor of the lounge license with only 49 opposing.

Tweed already has liquor with meals, beverage rooms for men and ladies and a liquor store.

Yesterday's vote was requested by Tweedmuir Hotel Company Ltd., which will now apply to the Liquor Control Board for a lounge licence.

ANAF NEWS

An invitation was extended to all Dominion Presidents of the various veterans' organizations in Canada to attend a special banquet in their honor by the Royal Canadian Legion at its recent convention in Ottawa.

A number of years ago these organizations had united and formed a committee to do whatever was possible to aid the dependents of fallen comrades and the disabled veterans in getting better treatment, increased pensions and better hearings on applications for pensions or appeals for higher pensions.

For the dedication, hard work and the time they gave to it, the Legion presented them, including Dominion President A. E. Landberg, with a special Legion Friendship Medallion.

Approximately 150 members of the 14th Field Regiment gathered in Belleville from all over Canada over the weekend and the weather man smiled on them. After enjoying the sumptuous dinner prepared and served by the Ladies' Auxiliary, they finished the evening dancing and reminiscing over the war years.

Sunday morning the ex-artillerymen paraded to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Memorial on the Armory lawn for a short service and wreath laying in memory of the ones who did not return. They all enjoyed their visit in the friendly city.

A reminder that Thursday June 11 is the last meeting until September and the President requests all members to try to attend.

Last week the members were saddened and shocked to learn that Comrade Hubert Herrington had suddenly passed away and sincere condolences are extended to his bereaved family.

The sick chairman reports that the following members are in BGH. L. Temporale, 834, E. Scott, 734. Resting at home are I. Pukancik and J. McNaught.

High Weeds Obstruct View

Time to Cut Weeds

The weeds are growing higher along the Redneersville Road and some residents are getting upset.

Some report it is difficult and dangerous for homeowners along the road entering it from their driveways.

The grass is high enough, they claim, to block vision of oncoming cars.

However Amelia's burg Township clerk-treasurer William Nightingale, told The Intelligencer yesterday that the township had received no complaint concerning the growth of weeds.

He added the road was a county road and that county officials usually start cutting the weeds along the sides of the road at this time of year.

D. F. Clark, Prince Edward County engineer, echoed Mr. Nightingale's statements.

He said that there had been no complaint from residents along the Redneersville Road.

Mr. Clark added that weed cutters had already started in the County and were starting in that area this week.

He spoke of the financial problems of keeping weeds cut and that municipalities were limited by money.

"They don't want to pay any taxes, but they want the weeds mowed," he said.

..At any rate, the residents near the Redneersville Road will see the weeds cut this week.

Municipal Affairs Minister At County Council Meeting

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McGeough was an unexpected visitor to the morning's meeting of Hastings County Council.

His meeting with county councillor was in caucus, with county Warden John A. Wilkes noting that he had invited the minister to talk further on planning proposals for the county.

The caucus session with the minister got under way at the 10.30 and was expected to last the remainder of the morning.

The one day session of council will hear reports from committees that have been active since the last meeting.

Several outside resolutions were considered by council at the outset of the morning session.

Included was one from Lennox and Addington County which asked that the Ontario andGet the wolf head bounty act in order to classify different species of wolves, and that the compulsory bounty on coyotes and hybrid wolves be discontinued.

The resolution brought objection from Deloro Reeve Charles Gordanier and Reeve Reeve Burton Morton who recommended no action be taken.

Reeve Gordanier said that contrary to some opinion, coyotes or brush wolves do kill deer. He said he had taken 11 such wolves last year and three of them had eaten venison within the preceding 24 hours.

Reeve Morton said wolves were sneaky and cunning murderers which should be controlled.

Neither was any action taken on a Hastings county resolution that asked Ontario Premier John Robarts to set up a special committee to co-ordinate studies of the various provincial departments so as to avoid duplication.

Warden Wilkes suggested there was some merit to the resolution, noting that all government departments were carrying on studies — apparently with one department not being entirely aware of what the other was onLg.

But Bangor Reeve Delmont Card said he couldn't see the point of a co-ordinating committee.

"It would be creating just another body," he said.

Council concurred in a Tyendinaga township resolution asking that the assessment equalization factor as determined by the assessment branch of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs be averaged over the preceding two-year period instead of just for the one year.

Township Reeve Carman Gibson said that in his council's opinion, the factor based only on the one year was unjustified.

The reeve said factors were apparently being determined on the basis of one year sales, but felt such figures in many instances could not be expected to be a fair representation of values.

He said it was up to the municipalities to make sure that assessment personnel did not do their job from the registry office.

British Swingers Arrive

PICTON (Staff) — A small group of real swingers behaving to the jet set arrived in Picton yesterday filled with plans for a swinging time.

Members of an international square dancing association, five couples from England's London area stepped off a bus at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute where they were welcomed by the County Twirlers, their Canadian counterparts in Prince Edward.

These ten dancers flew to Canada with 105 other "swingers" for two weeks of "change your partner".

Members of the County Twirlers will billet their English guests for two days while they join the main body of visiting dancers for festivities in Trenton and Belleville.

Organized in 1967 by Mr. and Mrs. David Hickman, The Whirlers have steadily increased their membership in the past three years. When the Hickmans first ferreted out Picton's swinging crowd about 16 persons made the scene. Today 125 dancers meet weekly in the cafeteria at PECI where Ernie Dempster, Trenton, calls the tunes. Square dancing classes for beginners are conducted weekly there also. This year's graduation ceremony boasted 50 students happily in step.

Since the Whirlers support the adage, "variety is the spice of life," interclub dancing is popular among all members. Trips to Peterborough, Trenton, Belleville and Napanee inject enthusiasm into club meetings. Presidents of The County Whirlers are Cherry Valley dancers Jack and Kathryn Shelley.

Britain's swinging globetrotters will travel to Toronto on Thursday for the International Square Dance Convention held in the Royal York hotel. The delegates range in age from seven to sixty five years of age. Following the spectacular meeting of the "squares" in Toronto, the English dancers will remain in Canada for about ten days before jetting back to London.

Haylocks Meet

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — British square dancer Victor Haylock stepped off a bus in Picton yesterday and brushed against what could be a new limb on his family tree. As each visiting dancer got off the bus, secretary of the County Whirlers, Andrew McIntosh, welcomed them here and billet number.

A bystander, Capt. James Haylock, overheard the secretary greeting Britisher, Victor Haylock. Curious because his ancestors, originally left England to settle in Upper Canada in 1836, Capt. Haylock introduced himself to the British visitor. Both men agree at once that there is not a common name in England or Canada and after comparing notes felt that they possibly are distant relatives, Noted Victor Haylock, "The name is found only in East Anglia and nearly all persons by that name there are related.

Capt. Haylock observed that he has discovered only a handful of persons with his surname in Canada and added that the first Haylock in Prince Edward County came here to work in a Picton pottery in the 1800s. The men decided to compare notes at home and correspond if name dropping seems to promise the establishment of common relatives.

Ready Cars For Derby

Hammers and saws are moving into their final strokes for several soap box derby contestants in the Belleville area.

The annual soap box derby, sponsored by the Road Angels Road and Custom Club, is to be held this weekend at the Cabreise Street hill.

Road Angel officials said they expected at least 25 entrants in the derby which begins Saturday afternoon.

Prizes and trophies have been obtained for the winners of the various events.

All cars must pass a safety inspection the day of the race The vehicles are to be brought to Queen Mary School by one p.m.

There will be two general age classifications — junior from nine to 13 years of age and senior from 13 to 15.

The vehicles will be judged by appearance and construction as well as in the race itself.

New Postmaster

Jim Hodson, who served 14 years with the armed services postal corps, is the new postmaster at Carrying Place. The appointment was held by the Westfall family (father and son) general storekeepers, for more than half a century until the recent change.

City's Opportunity

Retiring Loyalist College President J. K. Bradford's reminder that the Quinte area will have to be prepared for the rapid growth resulting from decentralization away from Toronto echoes the Ontario government report indicating that the province's prosperous Golden Horseshoe region faces serious problems.

These problems have to do with air and water pollution, transportation, competitive demands for land use and social issues affecting the population. Presenting the report to 400 municipal politicians and officials at Grimsby and District secondary school recently, Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton noted that for many years the region had been heavily dependant on manufacturing. However, despite this apparent prosperity the region had a high proportion of "slow-growth industries."

"The presence of several high-wage industries, welcome though these are, has created labor problems for many other firms," he said. "In addition, the loss of power rate advantages, the increase in transport costs and the rise in labor costs are causing a shift in industrial location away from the eastern portions of the region."

Among other problems, the report listed those related to the fruit industry; they include rising costs and dwindling lands. The tobacco industry is facing an uncertain future, land with high agricultural capability is not being used to its full potential, in some areas mineral and natural gas reserves are being depleted, there is a lack of co-ordination in development of public and private services and tourist, road, rail and harbor facilities are inadequate. And so on.

The school conference room was hot and delegates had been asked not to smoke. The chairman asked for one more question — and then Laura Sabia, outspoken former St. Catharines alderman, fighter for women's rights and candidate for prime minister in the last election was on her feet. In a moment she put her finger on one of this country's basic problems — people talk too much, are forever passing the buck (governments to royal commissions and councils to committees), evading issues and getting nothing done.

Said Mrs. Sabia: "We've been studying, studying, studying the Niagara area for years. . . We've all agreed on what the area is lacking, but what we need are some showers. We're a country of people who study things — when is a policy going to come about?"

To which Mr MacNaughton replied: "Well, I agree there is really nothing new here, but I think this is the first time all these things have been put into one overall study." Then he said the government would examine each of the report completed by September 30 and this would be the last study.

Everyone went out for their fresh air and cigarettes, although the two do not necessarily go together. The moral is, we should be prepared here in Belleville for whist eventually will accrue to this area, when the studies are finished and action finally taken, and not for the achievement of a more balanced economy, easing the strain on Toronto and increasing the industrial capacity of cities such as our own.

Clean-up Days

One of the most depressing revelations of the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority's recent anti-pollution clean-up was garbage bags which had been dumped into the river by cottagers on a small island a mile below the Trent River bridge.

The bags had been weighted down with stones, and according to the Trent News of Campbellford there were amazing piles of garbage found along the river and on islands and near roads that drain right into the river without treatment.

Accompanying pictures portrayed a dismal scene, but the only encouraging aspect of it all is that the public at large is becoming concerned enough to take action to control it. The Conservation people are planning another operation next year, but we would like another one this year — say in September — would be more in keeping with the real urgency of the pollution problem.

Gun-Happy

The latest to be mentioned to carry weapons in the United States is customs men at the two border crossing points at Detroit. It is the result, officials say, of "danger to our men with the kind of people we have had to deal with." Thus we have one more indication of the sickness that afflicts a large segment of American society. As it is, the annual death toll in the U.S. from gunshots is about 17,000. The so-called "right to bear arms," which somhow is ingrained in the American way of life, has made them — and this is a matter for regret — a gun-happy society.

Prairie Family Discuss Quebec Maritimes

Westerners Not as Isolationist as Many Think

What do the people on the land on Canada's Prairies think of Canadian nationalism, Joseph MacSween of the Montreal staff of The Canadian Press went to the farmers to find out. This is another in a series by MacSween on Western Canada attitudes.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

REGINA (CP) — You arrive at a prairie farmhouse expecting to talk about wheat, but that idea skitters when the woman of the house demands:

"Why can't we get Nova Scotia fish out here We love fish."

Nothing inward-looking about Art Ulmer and his wife, who had aimed at many questions as answers when a reporter drove up to their home north of Regina.

The Ulmers, who have found children including a son in university and a daughter in Montreal, did talk about the wheat glut with some bitterness. But their interest ranged across Canada and — perhaps more significant — to Japan.

"When we went to Quebec for Expo 67 I was really excited," Mrs. Ulmer confided. "I thought, 'My, this is different and wonderful.'

"What a fine thing to have two cultures."

"Fabulous," said Mr. Ulmer of the Montreal scene.

The idea that Canadians should think big—as at Expo—obviously appeals to the Ulmers, who are pleased about the next Canada Games being scheduled for Saskatoon.

If the Ulmers had no trouble understanding Expo, the question of Quebec is something else. "We don't really know it, we're too far away, we don't understand it.

"Surely that's why we put Trudeau in power, he's a French-Canadian. He must understand it."

Mrs. Ulmer's simple statement seemed to underline a comment made by some Prairie leaders—that the West has shown itself more willing to accommodate Quebec than the other way around.

Western economic problems cause resentment not only of Quebec—"people tend to strike out at something in times like these"—but of Ontario. Mr. Ulmer is convinced easterners are full of myths about the West, partly because of the jargon of the grain trade.

"The easterner may read, for instance so many millions are coming to the West in 'deferred payment' for wheat. He thinks it's some kind of gift from the federal government."

What it really means, he points out, is "that when we sell our wheat, 50 per cent of payment is withheld to cover freight and handling charges and in the spring we get what's left—this year, about nothing."

The Ulmers and their friends debate whether farmers could do better by setting up some kind of a sales agency of their own and negotiating deals with foreign buyers, rather than depending on the government.

"Perhaps we could export to Japan and buy our equipment there a lot cheaper than we are able to get it now."

Mr. Ulmer touched on a thought probably shared by many Canadians when he said some farmers would be willing to give away their pledged wheat to hungry peoples if "somebody like Aristotle Onassis" provided free ocean transport.

But it is a myth that the world's starvation would automatically be solved simply by moving wheat, in the opinion of T. D. McLeod, professor and former vice - principal at the University of Saskatchewan's Regina campus.

"There are two aspects to the food problem—the starvation issue and the diet issue," said Dr. McLeod.

Various world developments in cereals production contributed to a global surplus and to Canadian marketing dilemma. The ever-all picture now is that "people in the world can only consume so much starch."

"That doesn't mean there's not a need for food but I think there is an over-production of starch foods. The problems are going to be to produce protein foods and get them to the people who need them."

What does that mean in terms of Saskatchewan, biggest wheat province

Experts speak of substantial changes in "cropping patterns" to produce more coarse grains and oilseeds, heavier commitment to livestock to meet rising demand for protein.

How all these things have to be explored" said Dr. McLeod. "I don't think anyone could give you a blueprint now as to where we go from here."

"A big part of the world doesn't want wheat. It wants rice. Tremendous improvements have been made in rice culture. So our delightful assumption that somehow we should be able to dispose of everything we could produce seems incorrect now."

The consensus of interviewers seems to be that a whole way of life is being plowed under all across the Prairies, perhaps eventually taking down an alarming number of farmers.

But those who survive will not be turnip growers.

Ameliasburg Buys Old School

SS No. 12 in the village of Ameliasburg is in the process of becoming township property. Council is giving consideration to turning the building over to the Seventh Town Historical Society of Prince Edward County for a meeting place and library. The large bell was taken from the belfry and placed in the township museum when the schoolhouse was closed along with other one-roomed schools in the municipality.

The Jesuits closed their mission in Huronia in the Georgian Bay region of Ontario 329 years ago today—in 1650. It had been established in 1623. All that was left of the mission—St Ferechmen and about 300 Indians—set out for the trip home to Quebec. They carried with them the bleached bones of two martyrs, Fathers Jean de Brebeuf and Jerome Lalament, tortured and killed by the Iroquois.

1820—Napoleon was excommunicated.

Travel Overseas Turns A Nominal Canadian Into a Real Canadian

Kingston Whig-Standard

One way to "discover Canada" is to travel abroad. That, at least, is the firm belief of Francois and Louise Prevost of Montreal following their 100,000 - mile trip around the world — a journey which took almost two years to complete.

The couple's itinerary took them from Quebec by way Rimouski across the Rio Grande to Mexico and on into Central and South America. From there they headed to Africa, Europe and across Asia to Australia and finally Japan and their destination, Expo 70. In June, 1968, armed with countless charts, a handful of languages and a lot of courage, the Prevosts had set out in their trusty camper to private "a symbolic link" between Expo '67 and Expo '70. This week, after visiting 18 lands, they returned home with a deeper love and respect for their native lands.

When Francois Prevost left Montreal in 1968 he was a separatist. Many times he participated in demonstrations and attended separatist rallies. Now he says, he is returning a Canadian. "Canada is one of the most liberal countries in the world, in very few countries I visited did you get that type of feeling. Here there is a big future, space to live, liberties for the people."

Mr. Prevost said that when he left Canada in 1968 he thought about Quebec the way Rene Levesque thinks today. But the trip, he pointed out during an interview, taught him the "inherent danger of conflicting nationalism."

"I wouldn't say I am a federalist," he said. "Let's just say I'm a Canadian."

In facing the problems of day-to-day living many of us complain about different aspects of life in Canada. We tend to overlook, or take for granted, the many advantages of being a Canadian. The Prevosts have "discovered" Canada from afar. But a Canadian doesn't have to travel abroad to appreciate the benefits this country provides. All he needs to do is take the time to look around him.

Floating Vote's Influence On British Electorate

Ottawa Journal

In the present British election campaign which ends with voting on June 13 the Conservatives are back to their old theme that Labor diminishes freedom and enterprise.

That criticism elected Conservatives in 1951. The opposition party today says its aim is "to reduce the burden of taxation" and to extend individual choice, freedom and responsibility.

Much the same argument elected the Tories in 1955 and 1959 but failed in 1964 and 1966.

The Tory approach may not be as successful as it was; older people in the middle class who worried about freedoms and incentives in taxes is giving way to pensions and welfare. British elections are not usually won by such cotton-wool talk.

Whoever wins the 1970 election has to have the support of a floating vote that may go to either party. The Tories according to one late poll, are two per cent ahead of Labor, but other polls show the government slightly in the lead.

In appealing to "floaters" Harold Wilson may be expected to be as effective as the Conservatives' Ted Heath who is no Winston Churchill. But the Conservatives promise of long-range call Labor "gimmickry" should be a telling counter trend of riding an economic roller coaster.

So far the election has sparked little great excitement. Those saying he is "the lesser of two evils" must make Harry Labor men vote. British elections are not usually won by such cotton-wool talk.

Two Standards of Behavior

How to Turn the Other Cheek—Japanese Style

Zena Cherry in the Globe and Mail

KYOTO, Japan — Last week we tried to answer the two questions most asked by visitors to Japan. There is also another question which one does not ask: the Japanese but it is in the minds of travellers who remember the official atrocity reports. "How could such charming smiling people turn into such monsters during the Second World War?"

The key is that the Japanese have two standards of behavior.

Anthropologist Ruth Benedict noted in her study of the Japanese mind: "Both the sword and the chrysanthemum are a part of the picture. The Japanese are to the highest degree, aggressive and unaggressive, loyal and treacherous, brave and timid, conservative yet hospitable to new ways."

Rigid codes define proper behavior in virtually every social situation; but unfortunately there are no rodes to cover many modern contingencies. That is why so much pushing, bodychecking and shoving go on and never an excuse me, or a sorry is said. They are extremely ceremonious toward those they know, highly unceremonious toward others.

At home, a smothering overcrowding has led to an iron sense of proper place. It is absolutely necessary that they display requisite manners and consideration for others within their family group, circle of friends, their school, their business.

But when a Japanese person finds himself in a different group, such as a vast public crowd, he is under no such compulsion. He is then able to discharge much of the rage bottled up inside him because he has to curb his feelings most of the time.

No disgrace is attached to this discharge. It is understood and his fellow Japanese sympathize. There's even a proverb to condone it. Take no ball wa kakiuda. Translation — Throw away your shame in whatever place you visit. Translation — Leave your home town and go to one of the resorts. Get roaring drunk. Do anything in the streets roaring obscenities. It's quite all right — but just don't behave that way at home.

It's the result of the shoulder-to-shoulder, most crowded society on earth.

Only 30 per cent of the mountainous land is habitable so the Japanese are packed into the coastal plains at a density of 2,385 to the square mile.

Two thousand people live in one house, there are too many houses in a block. And so the Japanese more softly. They keep their elbows in.

They have prescribed statements and responses designed to calm ruffled feelings. Even their artistic expression is turned inward rather than outward. They do not have picture windows and swimming pools, rather a tiny exquisite walled garden with perhaps a two-foot-high waterfall. They do not paint sweeping whole landscapes, instead a sprig of pine, a flower petal.

Forty Four Finish Bikeathon

PICTON (Staff) — Pedalling for Project Golden Roof, 50 bicyclists participated in a bikeathon here last weekend under the direction of Rev. Robert Jones, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The 30 mile course mapped out for the cyclists was completed by 44 persons. First man across the finish line was Larry Ferguson, Picton, who pedalled the route in about three and a half hours. Despite a ten-minute delay in starting, Larry, who left Picton at 8.10, returned at 11.45. Three eight-year-old children were the youngest participants in Saturday's bikeathon while senior cyclist was Peter Mitchell, 86, a successful finisher.

Rev. Jones, who joined the bikeathoners in their fund drive, expressed a deep sense of personal satisfaction in completing the ride. All money collected from sponsors will be used toward a new roof for St. Andrew's Church, Picton, and additional Sunday school rooms for The Church of the Redeemer, Deseronto. Rev. Jones is the minister of both church congregations.

A new bicycle will be presented later this month to the bikeathoner collecting the most money after completing Saturday's course.

Prince Edward County's first bikeathon can be called successful in Rev. Jones' opinion, largely because of the support and co-operation offered by local organizations. The minister observed that the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, the St. John Ambulance brigade and the Quinte Isle Wireless Tradicevier team all contributed to a safe and enjoyable day.

Timothy Michael Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Doran, 9 Woodland Acres, received his Bachelor of Arts degree June 6 at convocation exercises at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto. He was a graduate of Michael son Catholic College, and will return to the University of Toronto for post graduate studies in September.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed to fractionally higher in lacklustre mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials were up .28 to 154.89 and golds .90 to 144.86. Base metals were down .94 to 91.11 and western oils .54 to 135.23.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 290,000 shares, down from 445,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Gains outnumbered losses 77 to 69 with 108 issues unchanged.

Trading has been languid since the beginning of the week.

Observers say many investors are waiting for a definite direction to be established before buying or selling shares.

The market has drifted fractionally up and down since the sharp three-day rally two weeks ago.

Largest gains were this morning in beverage, industrial mining and pipeline issues.

Sectors with largest losses included general manufacturing and steel.

Among gaining issues, Investors Overseas was up ⅛ to 7¼, Seagrams ½ to 45, Noranda ½ to 27¼, IOS Ltd. 25 cents to 22.50 and International Pipelines ¼ to 20¼.

Hudson's Bay Co. dropped ½ to 13¼, Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil ¼ to 13¾, Southam ¼ to 49¾, and Moore ¼ to 20.

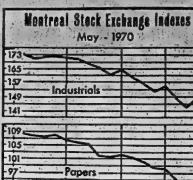
Fractional to moderate gains were recorded at the close of market Tuesday.

On index, industrials were up .62 to 154.62, base metals 57 to 91.15 and western oils 1.30 to 135.87. Golds were down .09 to 143.81.

Volume was 1,553,000 shares, compared with 1,418,000 Monday. Volume averaged over 2,500,000 shares on each day of last week.

Advances squeezed by declines 195 to 194 with 209 issues unchanged.

Observers say the low volume indicates widespread caution among investors.



Analysts said that there is a growing tendency toward purchase of blue-chip stocks with many investors staring clear of speculative issues.

They said many investors are still wary after the sharp price slide which ended two weeks ago. Some observers are predicting further short-term declines.

Largest gains were made Tuesday in food processing, industrial mining, oil refining and pipeline actors.

All indices on the Toronto Stock Exchange dropped during May. Industrials fell from 171.32 at the beginning of the month to close at 154.21. Golds fell from 147.75 to close at 143.66. Base Metals dropped from 151.52 to close the month at 130.70. (CP Newsmap)

Indices on the Montreal Stock Exchange were down during May. Industrials fell from 173.48 from the beginning of the month to close at 155.67. Utilities were down 7.55 to 121.42. Banks were down to 153.42 at month-end. Papers dropped 14.39 to close at 95.10. (CP Newsmap)

Open House Tomorrow

The theme study approach to learning will be in the spotlight at Prince Charles School all day tomorrow, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The school is opening its doors and welcoming all residents who are interested in seeing how learning skills are developed from kindergarten through grade six.

Language, science, crafts, social studies, music, and mathematics will be on display during the day.

Exhibitions will also be shown on themes such as Vandenwater Park, Ossies, 70, the farm and other topics.

Larry MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. "Hamie" MacDonald, 12 Fourth St., has received his Master's Degree in Social Work from the University of British Columbia with honors. During his two years at U.B.C. Mr. MacDonald was twice awarded a Department of National Health and Welfare Scholarship for advanced study in the Welfare field.

Following his graduation Mr. MacDonald is joining the staff of the Children's Foundation in Vancouver.

Columnist Receives Many Requests for Unbaked Squares

By MARY MOORE

Some of you people are legendable square collectors. If the squares (or cookies) are unbaked they are even more welcome. Your requests for copies come in dozens.

Today I have unbaked squares for you and to add to the attractiveness two of its three layers are chocolate.

How's this? — Unbaked Chocolate Squares.

CHOCOLATE SQUARES
(unbaked)—

Base:

2 cups corn flake crumbs (or 8 cups corn flakes rolled into fine crumbs)
¼ cup butter or margarine
1-3 cup sugar.
1-3 cup cocoa

1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup flaked or desiccated coconut (not shredded)
½ cup chopped nuts

WHITE LAYER:

¾ cup butter or margarine (room temperature)
2 cups sifted but unsifted icing sugar
2 tbsps. milk
1 tsp. vanilla

GLAZE:

2 squares (2-oz.) unsweetened chocolate
1 tbsp. butter or margarine

NOTE: If you are using corn flakes crush and roll them finely to measure two cups.

To make Base: Into top of double boiler measure the butter or margarine, sugar, cocoa egg and vanilla. Stir and cook over boiling water until mixture is thoroughly blended and slightly thickened. You must stir all the time. Remove from heat and lift top of double boiler to counter and add crumbs, coconut and nuts and mix very well. Press smoothly into unbuttered 9 x 9" pan. Chill.

To make White Layer (which is simply butter icing) beat together the butter or margarine, icing sugar, milk and vanilla until creamy, smooth. Spread evenly over chocolate base. Chill.

To make Glaze combine unsweetened chocolate squares and butter in heavy cup and stand in small pan of boiling water until melted. Remove from heat, stir to blend, then drizzle over chilled white layer, tipping and turning pan to coat top all over with glaze.

NOTE: If this is not retrigerated glaze will remain glossy for a while.

Ann Landers

Friend Concerned About Bride's Limp

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our closest friends have a very handsome son who will be getting married in a few months. We have watched this boy grow up and he is very dear to us.

The bride had a serious bone infection when she was a child. It left her with a bad limp. Of course she is unable to dance or participate in sports such as skiing, skating, tennis, and so on. But this does not seem to bother her fiance who is a wonderful all-around athlete. (Love must be blind as they say.)

The bride's mother is planning a lavish wedding. We were told of the arrangements last night. The bride will walk down the centre aisle of the church on her father's arm in the traditional manner. Since the girl has such a noticeable limp, wouldn't it be better if she entered from the side of the pulpit and joined her father at the altar?

The girl's parents are accustomed to her limp so of course they do not see it as others do. Would a telephone call from an objective non-relative, such as myself, be in order? — SECOND MOTHER.

DEAR SECOND: The bride and her mother have the right to make this decision, and they have made it. I admire the girl for the remarkable adjustment she seems to have made to her handicap. Apparently she is virtually unaware of it. Stay out of the wedding plans and behave like a guest.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Once someone asked you if the teeth you display in your newspaper picture are your own. You said yes. I knew they were — without reading your answer. You wouldn't be so hardboiled in your advice to people with denture problems if you had been through some of the hell they have.

I have been through plenty these last two years — lost twenty pounds and had to take nerve medicine. Two dentists made teeth for me and neither fit worth a d - - - . I yold for the teeth before I knew they were no good so the dentists just fiddling around trying to make them fit, which they never did.

Finally I went to a third dentist and said I'd pay him only if the teeth fit. The minute he put the teeth in my mouth they felt perfect and I've never had a minute's trouble. So inform your readers that the way to buy dentures is to refuse to pay unless they are perfect from the word go. — SMILING ED.

DEAR ED: Very few dentists will guarantee a perfect fit from the word go. Most dentures need some adjustment. You were lucky — the third time was a charm. Congratulations.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your answer to "Worried Mom" was asinine. I would rather have my 17-year-old daughter wrestle in the back yard with 14-year-old neighbor boys than with a 19-year-old sex maniac in the back seat of a car. Her older sister was an unwed mother at 16. One of those in a family is enough. Get with it. — BAKERSFIELD.

DEAR BAKE: A 17-year-old girl who is still horsing around with 14-year-old boys in the back yard is a little behind schedule. So why don't you get with it?

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "Why did you let Jenny buy that dress? It's too short, and too sophisticated for a 13-year-old."

Mother: "She had her heart set on it, and I didn't want to have an argument in front of the sales clerk."

Talk over shopping plans ahead of time with your younger teen-ager so you can give her a little tactful guidance about what is appropriate for her age. It's easier to present your side of the subject at home than it will be in the store.

Dinner Menu

WEDNESDAY

Chicken in a Bag with Vegetables (see Monday); Mashed Potatoes; Cucumber and Carrot Sticks; Cantaloupe Wedges with Lemon; Tea.

Treatment for Children with Allergic Problems Should Be Based First on Avoidance: M.D.

MONTREAL (CP) — Children who show allergic or asthmatic symptoms should be investigated and "treatment should be based first on avoidance," says Dr. A. H. Elsen of Montreal.

"I'm against plunging injection after injection into a child for a specific allergy when it can be alleviated by removing the cause," he said in an interview.

Dr. Elsen, who heads the allergy and clinical immunology department of the Montreal Children's Hospital, also warned that no allergy should be left unattended—especially hay fever, which if untreated and severe enough, could trigger an asthmatic attack.

He is emphatic about Treatment based on avoidance.

"If a child is allergic to tomatoes, don't give him any. If it's the family pet that's causing the trouble, out he goes. If it's feathers in pillows or stuffed toys, replace them with non-allergenic ones. If it's dust, then keep the house as dust-free as possible."

However, Dr. Elsen's article added that when avoidance is simply not feasible, injection and treatment "over a long period of time does build up immunity to an allergen."

"It's not at all uncommon fr children to outgrow to a large extent their sensitivity to allergens."

An allergy is a condition of unusual sensitivity which certain individuals, and frequently children may develop towards substances ordinarily harmless.

Pollens, moulds, house dust, animal danders—skin or hair shed by dogs, cats, horses, rabbits—feathers in pillows, perfumes and a variety of foods can all produce an allergic reaction in an individual.

"Hay fever, which a lot of people laugh off, is a very real problem, can strike at any age, and if it becomes severe enough and is untreated may lead to asthmatic attacks."

Hay fever is caused by an allergy to the pollen of trees, grasses or weeds depending on the geographical distribution. It may attack in the spring, summer or fall and last until frost.

When an allergen is taken into the body, tiny cells in the tissues produce special substances called antibodies which attack it. Sensitivity may not appear immediately, and usually does only after a person has been exposed repeatedly.

Thus bakers may develop an allergy to flour and furriers to fur, and so on.

The Allergy Foundation of America recommends a country on the ragweed pollen index for the United States and Canada in an attempt to pinpoint areas to be avoided by severe hay fever sufferers.

It also recommended holiday spots surrounded by lakes or other bodies of water.

The foundation's published index for the U.S. and Canada came up with some startling statistics.

It stated that any city or community with a pollen index above 10 is not recommended; between five and 10 is fairly good; below five, good; below one, excellent.

On this basis Canada's provinces rank as follows:

Alberta, British Columbia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan—excellent.

Manitoba was rated good to fairly good with only Morden rising above the level of 10.

Nova Scotia was rated from excellent in most areas to good in such places as Yarmouth, Kentville and Digby.

Ontario and Quebec were worst offenders, with both provinces not recommended.

In Hamilton, Ont., a survey indicated an index of 89, in London 40 and in Toronto 43. Ottawa was relatively low at 11.

Northeast Etobicoke, a Toronto suburb, ran as high as 114 with Etobicoke West showing a rating of 54.

Engagement Notice

Miss E. M. Bodnarchuk Constable K. Taylor

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Bodnarchuk of Binscarth, Manitoba, announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Elaine Marie, to R.C.M.P. Constable Keith William Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor of Belleville. The wedding will take place in the Knox United Church, Binscarth, Manitoba, on July 18, 1970 at 3 p.m.

WATCH THE NEEDLE — Four-year-old Chris Parker keeps a close eye on the situation as Dr. Gordon Donsky administers allergy tests at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Dr. A. H. Elsen, head of Montreal Children's Hospital's allergy department, says treatment for children with allergies "should be based first on avoidance" — removing the cause of the allergy. (CP Photo)

First Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Anthony Green and Barry Brown both graduates of a Montreal teachers' college, recorded their first song, To Love Means to Be Free, in January, 1970. Four weeks later it had already sold 215,000 worth of records — a near-record for unknown Canadian talent. The artists, both in their early 20s, have signed with United Artists for distribution in the United States.

Redecoration Ceremony To Be Held

The 4th annual re-dedication ceremony of the Lieut. B. Pearson Peace Park at the Madoc-Tweed Art Centre, Tweed, will take place this year, according to Roy Cadwell, chairman, on Sunday, July 5, at 2 p.m.

Percy Shaw, a war combat veteran and international representative of youth and citizenship from Kiwanis International, Chicago, Illinois, will be the guest speaker. He will speak on Vietnam and the possibility for peace. Following his address, Mrs. Irene Jones, retired missionary, world traveller and lecturer will indicate the contribution of women to peace throughout the world.

Color parties and the ladies' auxiliaries from the Royal Canadian Legion, an il'orious years, are invited to share with the veterans of the area in this annual ceremony to peace and in honor of Canada's dead. The Boy Scouts Association will be represented by Joseph Irish, District Commissioner, Stirling, and troops from the local area are asked to form an honor guard around the speaker's platform. For the first time this year the Regiment of Hastings County, Belleville, will be represented and will take part in the annual journey of remembrance from the entrance gate to the hill too where the ceremony will take place.

Rev. (Captain) J. H. Thompson, MaDiv., assisted by other ministers in the district will be in charge of the program. The park was originally dedicated on July 1-2, 1967 as part of Canada's Centennial celebrations.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. James O'Hara of RR 7, Belleville announce the engagement of their daughter Bonnie Lee to Danecourt Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Thompson of Belleville. The marriage will take place at College Hill United Church, Saturday, July 11, 1970, at 2 p.m.

* * *

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Wendy Darlene Herman, daughter of Mrs. Beryl Herman of Deseronto and the late Mr. H. Herman to Russell John Brant, son of Mrs. Jean Brant, Deseronto and the late Mr. R. Brant. The marriage will take place Saturday, July 18, 1970 at 1.30 p.m. in the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer, Deseronto.

* * *

Previous to her marriage Mrs. John Uens (nee Constance Moore) was honored at a miscellaneous shower held by Mrs. Ray Emerson and a pantry shower held at the home of Mrs. K. Lewis with Margaret Lewis and Mrs. K. Young as co-hostesses. A rehearsal party was held by the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. J. Uens in honor of the couple.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN UENS

Uens — Moore

Holy Rosary Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Constance Marie Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Moore of Belleville and John Marshall Uens, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Uens, also of Belleville. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Father George.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full - length gown of ligula with fitted bodice and A-line skirt with attached train trimmed with ruffles and daisies. The high ruffled collar was trimmed with daisies as well as the long ruffled sleeves. She wore a shoulder-length bouffant veil with daisy appliques and carried a bouquet of yellow roses and daisies.

Maid of honor was Miss Diane Moore, sister of the bride, wearing a pale blue floor-length gown with an empire Anne Antoin. She carried a bouquet of daisies and white 'mums.

For the wedding trip to Vancouver, B.C., the bride chose a street - length dress in black and white figured dress featuring an empire waist and puffy sleeves, black accessories and a corsage of bronze tinted 'mums.

Upon their return the couple will reside at 27 Murney St., Apt. 5, Belleville.

POPULAR VICTIM

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mary Morgan, 93, has worked at Little Manor restaurant for 16 years. During that time, she told police, she has been robbed 22 times. During the latest one a man fired three shots into the restaurant's back wall while taking $15 from Mrs. Morgan and $3 from a customer.

Organization For Holiday Home Swap

WEST VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — An organization has been started here to provide travellers with cheaper vacations while living literally in a home away from home.

Called Holiday Home Exchange, the plan is operated as a hobby by Tim Hollick-Kenyon, his wife and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Birche. The enterprise started last winter and has received more than 400 inquiries from across North America.

Basically, the exchange provides listings and acts as a central clearing house for people interested in exchanging their homes for a vacation.

For instance, a family in history-steeped Quebec City could swap its home with that of a Vancouver couple and have a seaside vacation on the West Coast without worrying about hotel and restaurant costs.

Holiday Home Exchange merely brings them together. People wishing to participate in the plan get their home and the amenities of life area in which it is situated listed for a $1 fee.

"We are not a rental agency," says Mr. Hollick-Kenyon. "We simply put people in touch.

"The whole thing is based on mutual confidence. It's possible for a lawyer to draw up a document covering the house listed 'mums.

Mr. Hollick-Kenyon says that usually the families simply leave houses ready for the temporary occupants with milk in the refrigerator and instructions for feeding the goldfish.

Often they arrange a half-way meeting place to exchange door keys and emergency telephone numbers.

"They swap everything but wives," says Mr. Hollick-Kenyon.

The exchange plan was advertised by newspaper across the country and California. So far it has resulted in a directory of 87 listings with a fee from Quebec City to Campbell River on Vancouver Island. More listings will be added soon in a directory supplement.

"We have homes, apartments, condominiums, mobile homes, boats, houseboats, trailers—you name it," says Mr. Hollick-Kenyon, who has patterned the operation after several existing in the United States.

Most of the responses have come from British Columbia, Ontario and California. The only area where the plan has failed to catch on is the Maritimes where there are no listings.

Next year Mr. Hollick-Kenyon hopes to extend the plan to include Europe.

He says the plan was started because "we felt the simplest way for Canadians to see the back yards of others was simply to exchange their homes."

"We feel it will take two or three years to build, but we're quite satisfied that it has worked well for the first year."

GIRL GUIDE and BROWNIE NEWS

BUS TRIP

Two city Brownie Packs enjoyed a bus trip to the Department of Lands and Forests Fish Hatchery and Game Bird Farm at Codrington. Those from Pack 2 Christ Church were led by Mrs. Gulliver assisted by Mrs. Gunn and Mrs. Connolly and Pack 13 of Prince Charles School by Mrs. Vickers assisted by Mrs. Towers and Mrs. Hales.

During the day the group viewed fish of all sizes, Canada geese, pheasants, chicks and full grown birds. Later they visited the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Farm at Frankford.

Women's Institutes

PLAINFIELD WI

The June meeting of Plainfield WI was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Treverton with an attendance of 24 members and one visitor. In the absence of the president, the past president, Mrs. A. Legge opened the meeting.

During the business session plans were discussed for an open meeting to be held at Plainfield Hall in September. This will be the 60th anniversary of Plainfield WI.

Club Activities

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

At the May meeting of Parents Without Partners held in Trenton reports were given by the delegates who attended the CORC conference in London.

Guest speaker was an ex-convict who is now endeavouring to prevent people from leading a life of crime. He will be present at one of the parent-child activities in the near future.

At the June meeting held in Belleville, 27 people were present. Pat Merrill presented a talk on pollution and also reported on the recent regional council meeting on social services held in Belleville which she and Marg La Forte attended on behalf of the chapter.

Common Courtesy Goes A Long Way When Dating

By DORIS CLARK

What is courtesy, girls? Is it the same as manners?

When was the last time you thanked your date for holding the door for you? Do you make a point of telling a fellow how much you enjoyed the evening?

And boys, do you help your date out of the car or leave her in front for herself? Do you remember to thank her parents for "that delicious dinner?"

No point in saying, "Of course I enjoyed the date; he knows that." And how much more would a girl's parents think of a man if he stuck his head in the door and told them what a grand time he had with their daughter!

There are other things. Like being considerate of each other. It takes the icing off the cake if either of you flirts with somebody else, brags about some other date, sticks too close to a member of your own sex, doesn't take part in what is going on — or has a tantrum over some minor mishap.

These things are essentially a lack of courtesy. Don't do it if you want another date with your date.

Dear Doris: I was going with a very nice boy for eight months and we had spoken of marriage many times. But as in a lot of cases we carried our love for each other too far, and one day I had to tell him I thought I was pregnant.

He blew his top and said I was just trying to hook him into marriage and said we were through. As it turned out I was not pregnant. It was just a bad case of nerves.

I love this boy very much. I would like to write him and ask his forgiveness, and see if there is any chance of us making up again, but I am afraid he wouldn't believe me.

I told him when he left me I couldn't stop loving him and I can't. Doris, whatever you say goes. — Mixed Up.

Dear Mixed Up: Who is forgiving whom? If there is an honest misunderstanding, there is reason for a letter. Otherwise, no. Better patch up that broken heart and be a little more choosy with your favors.

* * *

Dear Doris: Thanks for boosting postal chess again.

One of the men who wrote to you has begun to play in the club I operate. He has caught the bug, wants the address of an international chess club. Thinks he has cut his teeth on the local play and can't wait to tackle a Russian or somebody.

But he's having fun and that's what the game is all about, so thanks to your effects there is another not who has shown himself.

You don't have to belong to the Brain Trust to play this game, all you have to be is a little peculiar. Some of us don't have enough sense to pound sand and anybody who can play bridge can play chess. — Chess By Mail.

Dear Chess: The fun's the thing. Hope we can soap a few more for you. I'm tempted to try it myself.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE

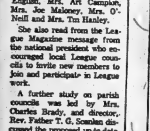
MARMORA — The June meeting of Marmora CWL was held Monday in the parish hall after an evening Mass. Mrs. Joseph O'Neill presided over the business session.

In the correspondence read by secretary, Mrs. Tom Brady, acknowledgment from Bishop Bokenfor of South Africa described uses made of donations from here in assisting with a feeding scheme in the school areas to help the suffering of the hungry.

A diocesan bulletin was read explaining the newly formed Hope Fund, to be used for some deserving project in the diocese each year.

Mrs. Charles Lajoie reported that over 40 boxes of used clothing had been packed recently by members for use at Combermere.

Stockings to be filled with toys for missions in Northern Canada were distributed, and Mrs. Bill Monk plans to forward this parcel on June 12.



Gifts for highest standing to pupils in each grade in Sacred Heart School will again be provided this year by the CWL.

Mrs. Charles O'Connor membership convener, thanked the following members for their assistance in obtaining a membership of 100 to date: Mrs. Dermont Bedore, Mrs. Herb English, Mrs. Art Campion, Mrs. Joe Maloney, Mrs. O'Neill and Mrs. Tim Hanley.

She also read from the League Magazine message from the national president who encouraged local League councils to invite new members to join and participate in League work.

A further study on parish councils was led by Mrs. Charles Brady, and director, Rev. Father T. G. Scanlan discussed the proposed up-to-date changes in the sanctuary of Sacred Heart Church.

Groups 3, 4, and 5 are convening a wedding banquet on June 19 and groups 5 and 6 are catering for one on Aug. 1.

Relief Expected

LIMA, Peru (AP) — President Juan Velasco Alvarado has taken personal command of earthquake relief operations in Peru so they won't get bogged down in bureaucracy.

Alvarado quietly moved relief headquarters from the public health ministry to the executive mansion Tuesday to keep a closer check on the action.

Dozens of doctors and tons of relief supplies have poured in from 17 nations since the quake struck May 31, but there have been difficulties getting the aid to the hardest-hit area, the isolated Huaylas canyon in north-central Peru.

Prisons Boss Will Implement Ouimet Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Leaving a shiny new prison system behind, Allen J. MacLeod has quit as Canada's penitentiaries commissioner to take the key job of ironing the important Ouimet report on corrections into policy.

Under the 51-year-old MacLeod, the number of prisons has grown from nine, when he was appointed commissioner in 1960, to 35.

Grim old fortresses like St. Vincent de Paul, north of Montreal, are being emptied and their more promising occupants farmed to new institutions.

Prison trades, once a joke, are beginning to mean something in the new, well-equipped federal jails. Through arrangements with outside schools, inmates may graduate in sophisticated computer courses, or get trade certificates that mean something outside.

Every prisoner has his own cell now, with wash basin and toilet, comfortable bunk, even windows he can open. The older prisons are still bleak, but their end is in sight.

Even the newer ones may have difficulty surviving if the recommendations of the report on corrections last fall by Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet and an expert committee are implemented.

The Ouimet report emphasized keeping all but the dangerous or professional offender outside through probation, trials interrupted before judgment to avoid the stigma of a record, and other such measures.

Mr. MacLeod drafted the 1955 revision of the Criminal Code, was chief of the remissions service replaced by the National Parole Board in 1959—and chief of the justice department's criminal law section.

Taking over the $34,500 commissioner's job on a temporary basis, until Prime Minister Trudeau announces a successor, is Deputy commissioner James R. Sims, 62. He retired from the army, where he had been provost marshal, to join the penitentiaries service in 1938.

With the $130,000,000 penal construction program well under way, and staff and inmate training programs in operation, Mr. MacLeod says he was beginning to find the commissioner's job humdrum.

"We escaped last night, who assaulted an officer," he said Tuesday talking about his work. "It's quite contrary to my training, which is to deal with matters of policy."

He helped draft current penal policy in 1968—individual cells, no more than 500 men to a prison, an effective rehabilitation program.

Where England still has 9,000 prisoners sleeping three to a cell, Canada has maximum privacy. And where the United States abounds with state prisons holding up to 4,300 men, even the old, dog-for-destruction ones in Canada have far fewer than 1,000 prisoners.

The changeover was given impetus in 1962 when the 1,200 prisoners jammed into St. Vincent de Paul—which now has 400—did $1,500,000 damage in a riot.

The tall, silver-haired Mr. MacLeod describes this as sadly his worst moment in 10 years on the job.

This year's problem is an alarming series of suicides at St. Vincent de Paul, where eight victims have included two teenagers. A special investigation has been launched, and steps are being taken to brighten surroundings at the prison and to hire officers trained to spot depression and withdrawal among prisoners.

The operating budget for the federal system this year is $40,000,000 and the capital budget $20,000,000. About 7,400 prisoners are being held, lower than the 1955 peak of 7,800.

Where a few years ago, one in four was released on parole, these days three out of four are paroled before their sentence is up. Inside good behavior can bring weekend visits at home with the family, and some younger prisoners are released to take university courses.

Most of the prison population is young and noisy, and the old Dorchester prison in British Columbia has been turned into a sort of sylvan retreat for older prisoners who like peace and quiet. Programs for the young include wilderness trips to find whether nature can heal the scars that crime leaves.

"These things are quite new in Canadian penology," says MacLeod, "and they're steps in the right direction."

Zoltan Is Suing Again

TORONTO (CP) — Zoltan Sarkozedi, 35, self-proclaimed traffic ticket consultant and would-be dog, is suing the city, one of its officials and a provincial minister for allowing his downtown apartment to be polluted.

Sarkozedi, who once tried to have himself proclaimed a dog by the Humane Society so he could prosecute a welfare officer for cruelty to animals, skees out a living as a freelance traffic ticket consultant.

He says he has won about half the traffic cases he has taken on for others.

His suit, filed Tuesday, charges that the city of Toronto, the corporation of Metropolitan Toronto, Toronto Transit Commission Chairman Ralph Day, and Energy and Resources Minister George Kerr are:

"Spewing poisonous, noxious and foul-smelling fumes and gas of subway into the apartment of the plaintiff through an-called area (airvent) installed by the TTC on the sidewalk before the apartment of the plaintiff."

The defendants are commanded, in the name of the Queen, to file an answer to the action within 10 days.

Strikes Anger Thatcher

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher, angered at strikes that have tied up construction work in Saskatchewan for two months, has threatened to call the legislature into emergency session.

He said the proposed special session could be asked to pass law "more stringent" than the Essential Services Emergency Act, a controversial labor law passed four years ago.

The premier held an hour-long meeting Tuesday afternoon with representatives of the striking plumbers and pipefitters union and the building contractors and said the situation is serious.

Because of the province's economic position, with a shortage of cash among farmers and sagging international prices for wheat, he said, "we can't let this strike go on much longer."

Plumbers and pipefitters began a strike two months ago across the province after negotiations broke down on a new contract with the Saskatchewan branch, Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association.

The provincial government has responded by systematically cancelling public works contracts, bringing most construction to a standstill.

The plumbers were seeking a 17-per-cent wage increase over the previous rate of $4.65 an hour for journeymen and were met with an offer of six per cent, the figure the province has decreed as a ceiling for wage raises.

In Regina, electricians started a strike eight days later against the Saskatchewan Centre of the Arts, the city's still-unfinished centennial project. The electricians, paid on a similar scale to plumbers, have not made public their wage demands.

W. G. Gilbey, president of the Saskatchewan Federation of Labor, said there are about 800 plumbers and electricians now on strike in the province. Some strikers have returned to work for six per cent and other workers never left their jobs.

Uranium Polluting Stream

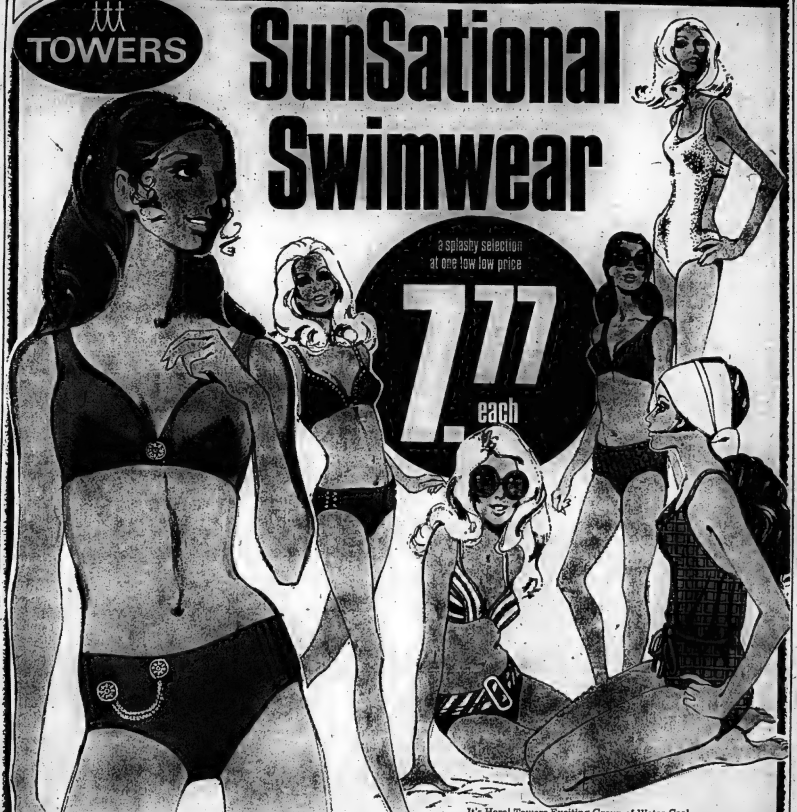
NIAGARA FALLS (CP) — Pollution from uranium mines has drastically affected plants and fish in the Serpent River basin near Elliot Lake, a researcher for the Ontario Water Resources Commission said Tuesday.

Nels Conroy of Hamilton told the 17th Ontario Industrial Waste Conference that tests by provincial officials had shown chemical and radioactive pollution in the area.

He said that after a three-year study it was found that the fish population was consistently lower, that reproduction was reduced because few fish could spawn in the polluted waters, and those fish caught were in generally poor condition.



Mr. Conroy said he had recommended to the government that new mines be banned in the unpolluted areas of the region and that high-quality standards be set to allow the polluted waters to return to the state they were in before the uranium mines opened.

Elections Act Changes Given Tentative Okay

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs gave the government's bill to overhaul the Canada Elections Act their reserved approval in the Commons Tuesday, but promised to offer amendments when the bill is given clause-by-clause study.

The House also passed the government's bill extending Canadian control over Arctic pollution to 100 miles offshore. The bill was later given first reading in the Senate.

The bill on electoral regulation, given second reading, would lower the minimum voting age in federal elections to 18 from 21, allow parties fielding at least 75 candidates to place their labels on the ballot, provide a system of proxy voting for prospectors, fishermen, mariners, students and the disabled, and extend the vote to public servants working abroad.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) voiced approval for the lowered voting age, but suggested that young people should earn their right to vote through compulsory public service. A citizenship test would follow.

Batry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said provisions for proxy voting should be extended to other groups who may be absent from their homes on election day.

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said a study of legislation on election expenses, proposed by Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) would be started by a special Commons committee before the summer recess, expected at the end of June.

The Arctic pollution bill received unanimous Commons approval after unsuccessful Conservative attempts to include a declaration of sovereignty in the bill.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien said the unanimity of Commons approval of the bill had strengthened Canada's stand on Arctic pollution control in relations with the United States.

Douglas Rowland (NDP—Seikirk) said Canada should declare similar control over shipping on the East and West coasts, where the danger of pollution was greater because of the volume of shipping.

Mr. Rowland also urged the adoption of a permanent voters list to reduce the time between the calling of an election and voting day.

Mr. Macdonald said the government—and two Commons committees—had rejected a permanent list because it "risks having fewer voters on the list" than the present system and would cost an estimated $12,000,000 annually.

Only Communist Paper Printed

LONDON (CP) — With the British election only eight days away, a newspaper strike silenced some strong Conservative voices today. But the Tories set out to make campaign capital because Fleet Street's first all-paper walkout in 15 years happened under a Labor government.

Prime Minister Wilson interrupted his campaigning to meet Tuesday with representatives from Britain's nine national newspapers and the printers' union which is demanding a 25-per-cent pay raise. The talks failed, and for the first time in history the papers shut down in the middle of an election campaign. The election is Thursday, June 18.

The Communist Morning Star, which is not a member of the Newspaper Publishers' Association, was the only paper on the London streets today.

The majority of the newspapers are backing the Conservatives, so the strike cut off one source of campaign harassment of the Labor party.

Manufacturers Do More Talking Enjoying It Less

MONTREAL (CP) — For the 99th annual convention of the Canadian Manufacturers's Association it was a case of talking more and enjoying it less.

The 8,000-member association, often called the Parliament of Industry, met in what it called a "serious mood."

In two days of meetings ending Tuesday, delegates heard of the problems facing industry—everything from increasing demands for social involvement to the squeeze on corporate profits caused by voluntary price-restraint and continuing wage demands by labor.

Retiring president L. F. Wills warned that industry, bound by agreement with the Prices and Incomes Commission to hold down prices and budgeted by falling profits, can no longer accept the hefty wage demands of labor.

He appealed for a "little realism" on the part of the unions to help hold down costs and said that labor, no less than Canada, will be the loser if they do not.

Delegates also heard:

—President Charles Neapole of the Montreal Stock Exchange say that federal white paper taxation proposals are "the greatest deterrent to foreign investment in Canada."

—President A. H. Crockett of the Bank of Nova Scotia say that "Canada will have to continue to supplement its domestic savings by relying on investment and borrowing from abroad."

—H. I. Macdonald, deputy treasurer for Ontario, say that foreign investment will continue to be required to maintain an adequate growth rate, but likely with emphasis on increased Canadian ownership and control.

—President R. C. Scrivener of Bell Canada call for a new approach to labor-management relations, saying that the win-lose atmosphere is not necessarily the best nor only approach to seeking solutions.

Labor problems were a key topic throughout the convention.

Mr. Wills, chief executive officer of Inverrl Controls Ltd. of Scarborough, Ont., said labor pressure now "will be far more likely to result in layoffs, short time and fewer jobs."

ISLAND OF ADVENTURE by Rose E. Hutchins

An entomologist, an author, and a wildlife photographer Rose Hutchins is well qualified to take us on a tour of an island in the Gulf of Mexico. Roaming his island alone, he investigates insect - eating plants, watches baby alligators hatch, photographs grasshoppers. A relaxed yet fascinating book of nature study.

DOWN THE WILD RIVER NORTH by Constance Heimericks

The story of an unusual adventure. Armed with maps, a tent and a canoe the author and her two daughters set off to explore the Peace and Mackenzie rivers. Aside from the beauty of the country and the dangers of the trip, their most outstanding experiences lay with the people they met.

READING THE WOODS by Vinson Brown

In his introduction the author says "As one learns how animals, birds, insects, fire, man and other influences are all shaping, building destroying, moving and changing forests how even the earth and the leaf mold that forms a cushion under one's feet tell fascinating stories, he comes to feel himself a part of the great circle of earth and sky and all life, as did the Indians in the long ago." A book for every layman-naturalist.

IN DEFENCE OF NATURE by John Hay

Mr. Hay points out that in this age of science, we can analyze the parts of a flower through the microscope or know what a distant star is made of. But unless we can look upon our natural environment as something of which we are an integral part, rather than something to be used and mutilated we may end by destroying ourselves. The author's poetic style conveys beautifully the wonder of a butterfly's migration or the ripples in a sandy cove.

ONTARIO CALLS YOU CAMPING by Enid Mallory

An excellent book for the camper who is interested in nature study. Not a "how to" book, but rather a guide to camping trips in various parts of Ontario with particular reference to provincial parks. There is also background information on such places as Jack Miner's bird sanctuary and the Bruce Trail.

LIFE AND DEATH OF THE SALT MARSH by John and Mildred Teal

One of nature's great gifts is the string of salt marshes that edges the east coast from Newfoundland to Florida — a ribbon of green growth, part land, part water. We see how these marshes developed how they have contributed to man and how ruthlessly man is destroying them.

Cocaine Worth Million Seized

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A retired seaman accused of smuggling $1,000,000 worth of cocaine into the United States from Canada was held for federal grand jury action Tuesday.

Nicholas A. Sagon, 66, a U.S. citizen of Philippine birth, was bound over on a smuggling charge.

U.S. customs agents said they found six pounds of pure cocaine under Sagon's shirt at Greater Buffalo International Airport last Tuesday after a flight from Canada.

New Approaches to Growth Problems Advocated

HALIFAX (CP) — New and imaginative approaches to solve the growing pains of Canada's cities were demanded by speakers at the annual conference of the Canadian Federation of Lawyers and Municipalities here Tuesday.

David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, warned that further neglect of Canada's urban problems would bring disaster, and urged the federal government to provide "effective and imaginative action before it is too late."

He suggested a thorough revision of the base for municipal finance, a system of regional government, urban land assembly under public ownership and a totally new approach to governmental structures and relationships.

John Steel, city manager of Windsor, Ont., called for a national urban policy involving new approaches by municipal, provincial and federal governments.

Canada's lack of systematic policy of urban development is responsible for a grave housing shortage, a transportation problem, poverty, unemployment and serious regional disparity, he said.

Dr. Eric Beecroft, director of urban and regional studies at the University of Western Ontario, London, said local government needs to be given a responsible role in policy making as well as representation with provincial governments in constitutional discussions.

Transportation, pollution control and urbanization were among topics discussed at seminars Tuesday.

Today's sessions will include more seminars, resolutions, and an address by Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing. The conference concludes Thursday.

Philip Givens, Liberal member of Parliament for York West, asked during a panel discussion why the federalists had not stormed Parliament and demanded stronger pollution control measures.

He said that although lip service is paid to pollution control across Canada, and especially in Ottawa, priority funds are not set aside for control on many fronts.

The possibility of appointing a federal minister to co-ordinate the various agencies involved with pollution control was being discussed in caucus, he said.

Great Lakes Commission Alarmed Over Mercury

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — The Great Lakes Commission, an eight-state advisory committee concerned with the wise use of Great Lakes water resources, called on the United States government Tuesday to increase publicity on the effects of mercury contamination in fish.

"Mercury can affect pregnant women and newborn children," said Al Meserve, Wisconsin commissioner. "It attacks the nervous system and can cause death."

Mercury contamination earlier this year caused a ban on commercial fishing in the lower Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River.

In a resolution, the commission charged that some states haven't taken strong enough action to guard the public against mercury contamination for fear of harming the fishing industry.

At its two-day semi-annual meeting, the commission called on Interior Secretary Walter Hickel to re-evaluate and clarify his decision to permit thermo-clear plants to cause a one-per-cent increase in water temperature.

"The Great Lakes area has nine nuclear power plants located on the lakes with eight more scheduled for completion by 1973," said Ralph W. Purdy of Michigan, chairman of the commission's pollution control committee.

"Authority to regulate thermal pollution and radiological inputs is not clearly defined, he added.

Auto Talks Start in July

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers Union, led by a new president, has made mid-July dates with the big three United States auto-makers to open 1970 contract negotiations complicated by a business slump in the industry.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock is expected to continue a tradition established by his predecessor, the late Walter P. Reuther, by attending the formal opening of the talks with General Motors on July 15, Ford on July 16 and Chrysler on July 17.

Reuther died May 9 in a plane crash in northern Michigan and Woodcock was chosen to succeed him by the UAW International Executive Board May 22.

A work stoppage could be disastrous to the auto-makers in a year when sales and profits are booming.

Quebec Separatists Refuse Oath, Denied Seats

QUEBEC (CP) — Seven separatist members of the Quebec national assembly sat out the opening of the 29th Quebec legislature in the visitors' gallery Tuesday, while Premier Robert Bourassa promised "a young, modern, efficient administration."

Six members of the Parti Quebecois were refused entry into the chamber because they would not sweep the oath of allegiance to the Queen. The seventh, who said he took the oath earlier by mistake, sat with his colleagues.

In his speech on the general policy of the Liberal government elected last April 29, Mr. Bourassa, 36, laid strong emphasis on economic matters. He repeated his campaign promises to get the economy back on its feet and create 100,000 new jobs by 1971.

He also pledged that French would be established as the province's working language, social inequalities eliminated, urban problems dealt with and the education system improved.

While he outlined what the Liberals have in store for Quebec, about 130 employees of Quebec's private hospitals paraded in front of the legislature to emphasize their wage demands.

The Parti Quebecois, which won only seven seats with 23 per cent of the popular vote in the April election, insisted on swearing an oath of allegiance to the Quebec people instead of the monarch.

Mr. Bourassa said his government had done all in its power to accommodate the Parti Quebecois stand. It had agreed to set up a committee to study the oath.

Assembly secretary Rene Hamelin said the British North America Act requires that assembly members swear allegiance to the Queen before they can sit in the house.

In his first speech to the national assembly as a government leader, Mr. Bourassa said constitutional reform, already begun, must be continued at a "more rapid" pace.

It was in the "double interest" of both Quebec and Canada that "our cultural personality finds its largest expression within the federal system."

The 36-year-old premier also repeated a promise to redraft the province's electoral map, which now favors rural ridings over the densely-populated urban centres.

The present map is disputed by the Parti Quebecois, which ran second only to the Liberals in popular vote but elected fewer members than the Union Nationale and the Creditistes.

Jean-Noel Lavoie, Liberal member from Laval, was unanimously elected speaker. Lt.-Gov. Hughes Lapointe read a bilingual, three-minute speech in which the government expressed its intention to give priority to Quebec's "immediate problems."

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette presented a bill that would grant an additional indemnity of $3,000 a year and supplementary allowance of $1,000 a year to each Opposition party leader with at least 12 members in the assembly or at least 20 per cent of the total vote in the previous election.

Some Belleville Adults Facing Up to Problems of Youth

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Kraka once said: "The power of the human scream is so great that it will smash all the iron laws decreed against man."

And now the human scream is being heard with tremendous volume and is falling on some ears that misunderstand, fear and even hate.

Ronald Gary, author of The Rolling Society, published last year, spoke on his views concerning the upheaval of the young and the reaction or apathy of the old concerning it.

"Youth power is in the process of radically changing the patterns of behavior in our society; and the adults are simply unable to meet the challenge of the young and to compete with them, if only because they are physiologically incapable of the same reflexes, vitality, eagerness and freshness of outlook.

"All they seem able to do," he said, "is to call the police."

Mr. Gary spoke, not only of youth's preoccupation with protest, but of its desire to band together in small sects and tribes.

"A large minority of this new class, youth, seeks a deliberate alienation from the rest of society, develops new codes of behavior and reinvents something akin to tribalism.

"The recourse to tribalism — hippies, black angels, psychedelic clans, gangs, sects, such with its own way of living, of dressing, each with its own customs, language, signs and symbols — is a reaction of the individual against the sucking - in pressures of a homogenized society indowed with unlimited power and authority over him."

Using the Paris student riots of May last year as an example, he said, "It was said that the rioting students had no purpose in sight. True enough, they were merely vomiting the world.

"To me," he said, "the most hopeful sign is that our generation of protest and of negation has outgrown national frontiers, races, creeds and ideologies. It's nothing more than one great, big emotional 'no'.

"My contention is that the real danger to our future is not the violent, rioting youth. The real danger is our indifferent masses.

"The pattern of violence is, in my view, insufficient to force our society toward a real change. But its positive aspect is that it may awaken some stupified, apathetic people."

In Belleville that's apathy seems to be disappearing and with that disappearance two separate lines of interested elders appear to be forming.

There is the minority that is beginning to band together to "help" youth, to hear what they got to say and to talk with them. They are also trying to initiate hostels, drop-in centres, help centres and other youth-filled and more important, youth-run organizations.

But discussions with young people reveal that even this band of adults will continue to have problems communicating with the young people.

They say, perhaps, that it's very desire to help and their very optimism will make the adult mission fail.

Youth says it does not need help as such. Instead it needs an audience to listen to in not always verbal assault against society. In effect, an individual who does not think he is ill or actually is not ill, does not need to visit a physician.

Yet Belleville's young people and probably Canada's, feel that the effort to create hostels and the like can only do some good. They feel that someone is listening finally, to a certain degree.

The Anglican Church is a recently spoken of a cross-Canada effort to construct youth hostels for ever-increasing numbers of youthful transients. The mass media have predicted one of the largest summers of youthful migration in history.

This is an example of adult authority and power, financial and organizational, giving the young people a tangible voice in detailing what young people want.

Youth feels it is not greed, but practical common sense, that allows them to tell adult organizers that they will take their money and original ideas but run the project themselves in the end.

The adult failure to accept this, is one of the yet unsolved stumbling blocks remaining.

The other adult line of non-apathy is the reactionary — the band of adults that see youth as nothing but a "filthy", "irresponsible" pack of troublemakers out to ruin the rules of all that is sacred to their elders.

In Belleville the attitude of this faction is seen in a growing number of complaints by merchants in Belleville of youth on the city's main street.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey told The Intelligencer that she and others are looking for places to tell youth to go should they be asked to move along by city policemen.

There are threats that the petty trespassing bylaw in force in Belleville may soon be enforced.

Belleville's merchants want prosecution of the young people standing in front of their stores.

From the city government's point of view that is all barring the recreation commission's facilities, that is being discussed about youth — not their problems, but the problems of maintaining the status quo.

George Wilson, president of the Mental Health Association in Belleville is trying to initiate a youth hostel with the city's assistance.

"It's one of our projects," he said. "We recognize this large movement of teenagers and it's in line with the Canadian Mental Health practices to prepare for this sort of thing."

In the hope of establishing a hostel that can accommodate young people for two or three days, Mr. Wilson has investigated and examined several houses in the area.

The hostel would be controlled by a "responsible person" someone Mr. Wilson feels who is mature because he is more "establishment - oriented".

"The adults in the community had better take an interest," he said.

The hostel will be come reality if Mr. Wilson can obtain one of those houses and can raise the money. He already has a staff for it.

As one young person in Belleville put it, "To the city we've become so much litter, rather than people with minds and with problems."

It is not difficult to assess what Belleville has for young people and how it affects the community.

It has a recreation program made up primarily of sporting activities, something which Belleville's Mayor Hall is "a hassle robbing them of the personal freedoms of appearance and non-conformity."

It has no youth hostel yet. It has no youth committee made up of youthful members.

It has a drop-in centre, a particular object of the negative public opinion and ridicule to the point that its existence as a cross section of youth and as a focus for good in youth is next to impossible.

One adult summed up his feelings about the drop - in centre stating that all its members were "doped up" and that its female visitors were "pregnant".

Youth feels that all the adults are doing is talking.

Rev. Lake Ketchum, past president of the Belleville Ministerial Association, says he and the association are willing to help in financing projects for youth.

He said the young people at the drop-in centre shouldn't have to take others home who have been kicked out of their own homes.

And again, there is a fear by the adult population that this summer, with its pop festivals and its lack of summer employment and its tremendous increase in transient youth, will result in unknown horrors.

Youth admits there should be hostels and even they help centres such as the one in Trenton, a centre where the people can go to discuss their various problems.

But beneath it's sadness, a sadness of isolation between two generations involved in conflict.

Young people feel that gap is unbridgeable and actually have no desire to close it.

All they wish is to live their particular lives free of adults and they be "hassled" because their life style is different. They are not asking for understanding or "help", but merely requesting tolerance and freedom.

They want their own music. They are not asking that it be understood or appreciated by their elders. They want to be able to enjoy it themselves, without comment.

Don youth even admitted, "we'll take what adults can give but we won't commit ourselves to returning something that we haven't already give or lose. That's freedom and a search for spiritual happiness."

Last weekend three adults and 15 young people (actually two of them were over 21 years of age) hostered themselves at a pair of cottages on a lake 30 miles north of Kingston. All were from the Belleville area.

The orientation session involved young people interested in organizing and initiating a youth help centre in Belleville to allow young people an opportunity to discuss their problems.

It was also designed to allow the various young people involved to get to know one another. All this was accomplished in short order.

Still, at first, there was a gap between youth and adults, but even this was resolved enough to allow the organization to take place. The plans for the help centre will be acted upon.

But here was a bounty of understanding and awareness for youth and adults alike to grasp if it is so desired.

The young people spoke of "help" and the connotations it must hold. General consensus among the young people revealed that help meant to them a sympathetic ear, not a grasp on the wrist to pull young people towards the straight and narrow".

The young people revealed their thoughts to the adults and to one another when inhibitions were annihilated.

At least one stated that they had made a "decision to participate to some kind of communal living to "get things together" and, in one case, to unabashedly "find God".

There was long hair and short hair at the cottage, but it didn't matter to the young people.

So anxious were the individuals getting to know one another that the first night rolled into the second day with very little sleep.

Five individuals stayed up to watch the sunrise as if it would bring new awareness from out of the east.

The result was the creation of a youth help centre and it probably will succeed.

It will be handled and run by youth, a fact that will be a practical application that they will take assistance but run the end product on their own.

Young people have admitted they will take assistance. They will not ask for it. They will take it and use it, but more importantly, they will have no strings attached.

"We got no freedom; intolerance and no easy road to individualism. We want it, though," one youth said. "Is that so very wrong?"

And what of the youthful person who has no shelter and no place to sleep at night?

Belleville has no hostel yet. The help centre will offer temporary shelter in some cases but it will probably not be sufficient, due to its size, for much accommodation.

There are a number of individuals in Belleville who turn over their homes to these people, but they can be counted on one hand.

In Belleville, the teenager on the street is almost confined to the street unless he decides to move on to Toronto and is surprisingly many cases, to Vancouver where organizations such as Kool-Aid have been set up.

The hostels and help centres will come but they are coming slowly and with conflict.

"Time is running out. Somebody's got to burn," one youth said.

Youth - - - Search for Freedom

The waters of a serene lake and the cool 'and shady woods offer some communication with nature for this young man who is formulating a philosophy in the world — a search for freedom from the crush of modern living.

New Tax Legislation Explained to Kiwanis

By 1975, tax assessment in Ontario will be based on the market value of properties rather than at a fraction of their value.

This was pointed out by G. Leighton Thompson of Hastings-Prince Edward regional assessment office in his address to the Belleville Kiwanis club yesterday.

For 175 years, there has been tax assessment in the Quinte area on the portion basis, he said.

Only a handful of municipalities have been in the practice of assessing property at amounts approaching real value. Others have assessed property at various fractions of that value.

This makes assessment difficult for the public to understand, Mr. Thompson maintained.

Now, there will be provincial standardization and, as a first step toward realization of an equitable assessment structure, Mr. Thompson explained, regional assessment areas came into effect January 1, 1970.

Hastings and Prince Edward counties comprise one of these regions and replace municipal and other local assessment operations.

The department has its central office in Trenton with a sub-office in Bancroft. Telephone inquiries may be made from other points in the twin-county area free of charge.

Mr. Thompson explained that just because assessments will increase does not necessarily mean that individual tax bills will go up.

Mill rates will continue to be controlled by the local municipalities and generally these will go down in the proportion that assessment goes up.

However, Mr. Thompson pointed out that in the massive assessment program, which has been embarked upon by the province, many people will end up paying more because they have gotten away with paying less than their share in the past.

Revised assessment policies could also bring about a situation in which summer cottages are assessed at their market sale value also.

In these ways a revamped system may bolster revenues of local governments which administer many essential services, Mr. Thompson also pointed out that exemptions may eventually be removed from certain non - taxable institutional properties.

Rather than relying so heavily on provincial grants, municipalities will be able to rely on a more adequate and equitable tax base.

Dauntless Trio Planning Trans-Atlantic Voyage

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Setting sail from Picton harbor next month, three men in the same boat will chart their course for a trans-Atlantic voyage. This trio of sailors yearning to visit faraway places on economy fares has devised a sink or swim scheme to do just that.

Boarding the "Undina," a trimaran built by Prince Edward Collegiate Institute teacher, Jurgen Ropking, the adventurers plan to cross the Atlantic Ocean in from two to four weeks.

Navigator for the sailing expedition will be James Denbrook an English teacher at PECI. Third crew member is Daid Watts.

The Undina, named for a watersprite who, in mythology, gains a soul by bearing a child to a mortal, was built "on a shoestring" says her owner, Jurgen Ropking. Eager to build a boat for several years Ropking began the Undina's construction about two years ago, basing it on an old Polynesian design.

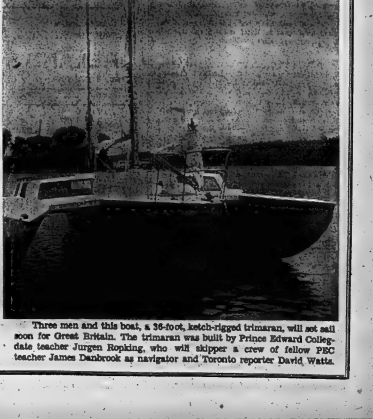
A trimaran features a main hull and two small outrigger hulls and is described as a ketch rig (three sails and two masts).

Of plywood and fiberglass construction the 35-foot ketch has a 20-foot beam- and records a draft of two feet of water. A sailboat of comparable length, notes Ropking, draws from four to six feet of water. The trimaran's shallow draft is, in his opinion, one of its advantages over other craft. Since the boat's vessel carries no ballast it is therefore faster if using the same sail area.

Set up to be sailed by a one man crew, a trimaran can prove difficult to dock on a breezy day owing to its light construction.

To offset this disadvantage, Mr. Ropking has equipped the Undina with an outboard motor to facilitate landing.

Ropking's decision to sail the Atlantic is not a spur of the moment idea. "I have intended to try to cross the Atlantic for some time but the final decision was not made until two months ago. I have never taken any sailing lessons but I don't plan to take any unnecessary chances on this trip. I will be taking an inflatable rubber dingy, a wooden dingy, an emergency radio transmitter and flares. We have full confidence in the boat since a trimaran cannot sink," he adds.



The sailing enthusiast explains that trimarans possess "tremendous lateral stability" and will not sink if capsized. It would be impossible, however, for such a boat to right itself should it overturn.

When his two man crew signs on aboard Ropking plans to sail down the St. Lawrence, making St. Johns, Newfoundland his last stop for provisions and repairs before skipping over "the pond." In about a month, with favorable weather conditions, the Undina will dock in Oban, Scotland, a point about 50 miles north of Glasgow and also the entrance to the Caledonian canal.

Upon arrival in port, Ropking has no set plans for sightseeing. His crew members, however, expect to visit Moscow in August. Travelling on the Trans-Siberian railroad, Danbrook and Watts will continue to Vladivostok, then to Japan to visit the World's Fair. Leaving Japan, they may extend their vacation to include trips to Australia and New Zealand.

Asked why he has chosen to sail the Undina to Scotland instead of booking passage on a more conventional ship, Ropking replies, "I love the freedom of the sea, a freedom that begins in Picton harbor."

He explains that a man call

Three men and this boat, a 36-foot, ketch-rigged trimaran, will set sail soon for Great Britain. The trimaran was built by Prince Edward Collegiate teacher Jurgen Ropking, who will skipper a crew of fellow PEC teacher James Danbrook as navigator and Toronto reporter David Watts.

Farewell to Priest

TWEED — On Sunday, May 31 1970, the congregation of St. Elias' Church, Kaladar, bade farewell to their pastor, Rev. Father Murphy, prior to his departure to assume his new duties at Madoc and Ormsby.

An address was read by Wayne Manion and a purse was presented by William J. Hermer.

Following the address and presentation, Father Murphy spoke briefly on the band of faith which united pastor and people. He expressed his sincere thanks and appreciation for their co-operation and desire that he could be worthy of the magnificent things said about him, and an endeavor to put the sentiments into practice.

He also commended his successor, Rev. Father Carey, who comes to Ardoch from Belleville.

Friendship Kicked Out Window with Quarter-finals at Hand

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soccer's World Cup, billed as the grandest-ever festival of professional sport and international friendship, kicks friendship out of the window today and gets down to the business of sorting the men from the boys.

This is the critical stage of the Jules Rimet Trophy preliminary group matches, the stage where the nice guys don't even come second.

Only two teams are certain of the future bricks. Those 11 inclods defending champion England and, despite two wins in its first two matches, Peruvian champion Brazil.

Only two teams are definitely through to the quarter-final round of eight teams that opens Sunday, West Germany and Peru. They meet today at nearby Leon in Group IV of the preliminary contests, and the only thing at stake is top spot for their group. The top two teams from each of the four preliminary groups advance to the quarter-finals.

In the quarter-finals, the winner of Group I plays the second-place team of Group II at Mexico City; the top side from Group II takes on the second-place finisher from Group I at Toluca; the winner of Group III plays the second of Group IV at Guadalajara; and the winner of Group IV goes against the second from Group III at Leon.

In other games today, El Salvador faces the Soviet Union in Group I; Sweden goes against Uruguay in Group II, and Brazil plays Romania in Group III.

In the final games of group play Thursday, Belgium meets Mexico in Group I, Italy plays Israel in Group II, England goes against Czechoslovakia in Group III and Bulgaria is pitted against Morocco in Group IV.

Seals Take Over NHL's Centre Ring

MONTREAL (CP) — Controversial baseball owner Charles O. Finley's bid for the troubled Oakland Seals franchise threatened to jam today's already crowded schedule at the National Hockey League annual meetings.

Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics of baseball's American League, was to make his pitch to NHL governors today to take over the Seals for an estimated $3,400,000.

Providence Rein of the AHL indicated confidence in Oakland's future when they renewed a one-year working agreement with the Seals Tuesday.

Today's agenda is already crowded with the expansion draft in which two new clubs, Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres, will get 18 skaters and two goaltenders each for their $6,000,000 entry fees.

Each of the 12 existing clubs is allowed to protect two goalies and 15 other players against the intrusion by the newcomers.

Other unfinished business includes meetings between the American Hockey League, the Western Hockey League and the NHL to declare limitation fees to be paid to the minor leagues for their displacement at Buffalo and Vancouver.

Tuesday's intra-league draft among the existing 12 clubs didn't stir much action. Fewer than 20 players were shuffled, with another four being drafted by Buffalo in the inter-league draft which followed immediately.

Major move of the intra-league affair saw defenceman Ted Harris move from Montreal Canadiens to Minnesota North Stars. That indicated a further exchange was in the works between the two clubs following today's expansion work.

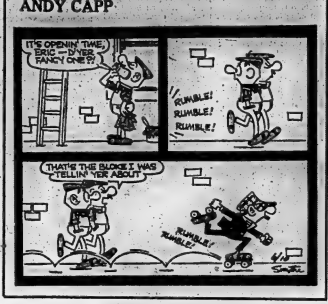
In addition to Harris, Montreal lost defenceman Paul Curtis to Los Angeles Kings. It brought to four the number of players the Kings have obtained in recent weeks from the Montreal organization's AHL farm club, the Voyageurs.

Other moves saw Toronto Maple Leafs draft Guy Trottier, a high-scoring centre with Buffalo Bisons, from New York Rangers. In return, the Leafs had to drop veteran right winger George Armstrong from its protected list, but there were no takers at the $20,000 draft price.

Detroit Red Wings drafted former Canadian national team member Tom Martin from the Leafs, but later loan Gary Croteau to Oakland. Lowell MacDonald, a right winger, was chosen by Pittsburgh Penguins from Los Angeles Kings with a later grabbing Craig Cameron in return.

Each club could lose only one player in the intra-league draft. Goaltenders and first-year professionals were exempt.



Earlier, NHL president Clarence Campbell said the league governors had agreed to recognize the referees and linesmen's association and that the group headed by senior referee Bill Friday will be able to bargain for officials at all levels of professional hockey.

Previous failure by the league to recognize the officials' organization led to a strike by a number of officials last fall.

Punch to Get Perreault

MONTREAL (CP) — Punch Imlach, famed for taking a gamble, was in good steed Tuesday in the lottery that preceded the National Hockey League's annual intra-league draft.

A wheel-of-fortune type lot was conducted by Clarence Campbell, NHL president, in order to determine which club — Vancouver Canucks or Buffalo Sabres — was to have the first choice in today's expansion draft and Thursday's amateur draft.

Campbell first flipped a coin to see who would get first call on whether they wanted high or low numbers. Imlach won the toss and agreed to take the high numbers, leaving Bud Poile, Vancouver general manager, the low side of the 16-number wheel.

Imlach got an eight on the first spin, giving him first rights in expansion draft. He had 11 on the second spin which Campbell first misread as one. Vancouver was overjoyed, but the NHL president soon realized his error.

"I feel much better now," Imlach said. "There's no doubt who I'll take as my number one pick in the amateur draft—Mr. Perreault."

He was referring to Gilbert Perreault, star centre with Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. Perreault is rated the best pro prospect in Canada.

"I saw Perreault play seven or eight games and he only played well once," Imlach said. "In that one game, though, he was exceptional."

Imlach said he would decide whether to pick a skater or a goalie in Thursday's expansion draft once he sees the protected lists of the 12 existing clubs. The lists become available to Buffalo and Vancouver at 10 a.m. today.

Enters Can-Am After 90 Minutes

TORONTO (CP) — Gord Dewar's car weighs about as much as a Volkswagen and has more than 600 horsepower perched in the deck behind his head.

And when the 35-year-old Ottawa driver trundles it to the Can-Am grid at nearby Mosport Park on Sunday, he will have spent a maximum of 90 minutes learning to handle it.

Dewar is one of a handful of Canadians in the 30-car field and a member of an exclusive breed in the Canadian who makes his living behind the wheel of a fast machine.

He is a member of JNO Racing, a shadowy group of Ottawa men who shun publicity.

"JNO is not a big-bucks operation," Dewar says. "In fact, we're completely unsponsored.

"We have a one-storey, cinder-block garage on Dalhousie Street in Lower Town in Ottawa. The floor is so uneven we can't even do our own wheel-alignment."

Dewar's face is seamed with scars, a legacy from the days when he raced motorcycles. His right hand has a large blister and raw patches, gouged when he had to hammer the shift-lever by the engine revs after losing a clutch in a recent race.

"The clutch went on lap seve. I had difficulty shifting gears for the next 10 laps until the transmission linkage fell out and I had to pull out."

Dewar is an electronics technician by trade and worked at it during the winter—quitting to race during the summer—until this year, when the company that employed him folded.

Now he works at racing full-time as a driver and as a mechanic preparing his Group 7 car for the Can-Am series and a Camaro for the Trans-Am competition in the United States.

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Australian tennis ace Rod Laver, preparing to make his bid for a third-straight Wimbledon title, crushed India's Jaidip Mukerjea 6-4, 6-2 and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., brushed aside Britain's Paul Hutchins 6-2, 6-3 Tuesday in the Wills Open Championship. Laver, the world's reigning professional, easily advanced to the third round of this Wimbledon tuneup, which carries a first prize of $3,840, but admitted he found it awkward playing on grass.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Valiant evened the score Tuesday in the preliminary trials for America's Cup yachting candidates, beating Intrepid twice on Long Island Sound. Valiant won the first race over a 10.8-mile course by one minute, 22 seconds, and she took the second race over a 15.2-mile course by 16 seconds. Gear failure and a few tactical errors had been costly to Valiant Monday in the first two races of the series, both of which went to Intrepid.

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian equestrian team named five riders to its jumping team Tuesday and two others to the dressage team to compete in Europe this summer. Named to the jumping team are Tom Gayford, Gormley, Ont., Jim Elder, Aurora, Ont., Jim Day, Oakville, Ont., Moffat Dunlop of Newmarket, Ont., and Barbara Simpson of Calgary. Christilot Hanson, Sharon, Ont., and Ines Fischer-Crabb Pripple, Vancouver, make up the dressage team. The teams will compete in Europe June 12 - Aug. 9. Also named was a seven-member second team, which will compete in the United States during the final week of June and late July.

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders have traded tight end Tom Pullen to Montreal Alouettes for negotiation rights to a former New York Giants quarterback, Gary Woods, it was announced today. Woods is a veteran of five seasons with Giants of the National Football League and one year with New Orleans Saints. He is expected in Ottawa tomorrow to begin contract talks. Pullen played two seasons with the Riders.

American League Looks South

MONTREAL (CP) — The city of Norfolk, Va., was awarded a provisional franchise by the American Hockey League board of governors at a meeting Tuesday.

The franchise will become operative in the 1971-72 season, provided Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League work out a suitable arrangement

Galloping Grapes Not in Jam, Ready for Second Season

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

While it appeared for a while that the "Galloping Grapes" would be in a jam, the Belleville Kinsmen Track Club now appears certain to respond to this season's starting pistol.

Lack of coaching personnel has plagued the purple-suited club at its organizational meetings this year, and for a while it appeared that, despite a healthy interest by Belleville trackstars and financial assistance from the Minor Sports Association and the Kinsmen Club, the team would fold.

"We're a little late getting started," says head coach Gord Smith, "but there will definitely be a team this year. Registration will be held Thursday night and we plan our next practice for the following Tuesday."

The Moira Secondary School phys ed instructor heads the current three-member coaching staff which also includes Bill McConnell and Mrs. Elsie Jokinen. Anyone interested in assisting the group should contact one of the coaches, as more, capable supervisors can still be used.

Last year the club provided summer training for 60 competitors and according to one instructor, "there seem to be even more kids interested this season." Minimum age for joining the club is 10 years while several of the older members are in their 20s.

"I think that the summer track program should be run on a more - or - less recreational basis and that you should stress the fact that the competitors enjoy themselves," claimed Smith.

"There are two different levels," he added. "In one group we have the 'newcomers,' whom we just try and introduce to the sport and provide healthy competition. On the other hand you have the serious trackstars who are interested in hard work."

Some measure of the team's success can be gained from the fact that of the five local athletes who set OSSA records this year, Dave Rutherford, Mario Brais and Frank Johnston wore the team purple colors that earned the Belleville club their Galloping Grapes' alias.

"Track and field in this province has reached the point where you just can't train for a couple of months and expect to compete with the top athletes from other areas," claimed one mentor of city high school coach.

"It's a year-round proposition."

The Kinsmen team will be hoping to match their successful record of last season when they competed in eight Southern Ontario meets and placed second as a team in their opening venture at Almonte on July 1st.

Club members Marie Brain and Dennis Bowman won six ribbons between them including three firsts, at the July 18th all - Ontario meet in Bancroft.

Registration will be held Thursday night at 7 o'clock at the Moira Secondary School track. Practices are planned for Tuesday and Thursday nights throughout the summer season and the executive is currently living up the schedule of meets that the team will compete in.

Read Proving Power

Read continued to cut a wide swath through the South Hastings Baseball League as they bombed the Belleville Kinmen Juniors 10-3 in the second game of a doubleheader at the Fairgrounds last night. The Kinsmen had played to a 6-6 tie with Shannonville in the first contest.

The Juniors came up with a four-run explosion in the fifth inning to gain a 6-3 lead over Shannonville only to see the visitors retaliate with three runs the next inning.

A double by John Noakes, Glenn Carleton's single, two overthrows at first, a hit batter and Rick Meagher's base hit were good enough to give the Juniors their four runs.

Shannonville evened the contest on three walks by starter John Noakes and a two-run single by Dennis Goodbrick. The final tally came on a fielder's choice as Leo Baker replaced Noakes. Neither team managed to score in the final inning.

The two Belleville hurlers allowed six hits, walked four batters and struck out an equal number. Glen Barberstock got relief help from brother Bill, as the pair gave up seven hits, walking two and striking out 11 men.

John Noakes was the top Belleville hitter with a double and single. Joe Hastings doubled and Carleton, Moe Hunter, Brian Coughlin and Rick Meagher each had single.

| Kingston | 011 040 0 | 6 | 7 3 |

Read smashed a nine-hit attack, scoring runs in all but two innings to record their seventh win in eight games.

Frank Farrell pitched the win for the league leaders allowing five hits, walking a pair and getting five men on strikes.

Joe Hastings took the loss, giving up seven of the winners hits before giving way to Leo Baker. The pair walked three batters and struck out four.

Belleville's only runs came in the third inning, when Joe jumped into a brief 3-2 lead.

Steve Moore opened with a one-out single followed by Glenn Carleton's double and an RBI single by Barry Colkin. Brian Coughlin came through with a base hit to score both runners and Rick Meagher added another safety, before Farrell could get out the fire.

Pete Enright had a pair of doubles for Read, with Carm Milligan coming up with a brace of singles. Paul Handley doubled and Steve White, Gerald Brennan, Ken Abrams and Ed Lester all had singles.

The Kinsmen's only hits came in the third inning.

In the only other South Hastings action, Latta edged the Reserve 15-14 in a 20-hit slugfest.

Lorne Cronkwright, Bob Smith and Doug Geen saw action on the Latta mound as they were touched for 14 hits.

Scott McLaren led the winners' hitting spree by banging four safeties. Dickey had a pair of hits and Bob Smith a homer in the 15-hit attack.

Wayne Brant clobbered two triples and two doubles for the Reserve, while Murray Maracle had a homer and single.

Commercial Lightning Late

Last-inning lightning struck Point Anne and Rollins Construction last night, as City Hotel and Corby's came up with runs in their final at-bats to earn one-run Commercial League victories.

Neil Campbell clouted his third extra - base hit of the game to provide the big blow in the bottom of the seventh as Corby's edged Rollins 5-4.

As error, Campbell's double, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly provided Corby's with two runs and the win.

Pat Scollard was the winning pitcher giving up nine hits, striking out six batters and not walking a man. Wayne McConnell took the loss. He allowed eight hits and five walks, while setting three men down on strikes.

Rollins had counted four times in the second frame to take the early lead. Wes May led off with a single and Bill Goodfellow followed with a two-run homer. Wayne McConnell was hit and scored on RBI - double by Brian Harder provided the other run of the inning.

Campbell smacked a triple and two doubles to pace the winners' attack. Terry Wellesley had a pair of singles with Bob Wannamaker, Gary Goyer, Larry Mavety and Steve Rexe each picking up one hit.

Goodfellow bothered and singled for Rollins, while May and Ralph Plane each had a pair of base hits.

Last Thursday night at 7 o'clock City Hotel, who have lost their share of close games this season, got some, measure of revenge by coming up with a loss tally in the eighth inning to beat Point Anne 3-1.

An error, a single by Bob Ehler and Lyle Wannamaker's RBI-double scored Larry Potter for the second time in the game as the league cellar-dwellers hung the loss on Don Holoway.

Ehler picked up the win after relieving starter Mark Sheridan in the fifth inning. They were touched for six hits, fanning 14 and giving out five free passes. Holoway pitched a four-hitter, while walking two and getting 12 men on strikes.

The Point Anne hurler had set nine of the first ten City batters down on strikes.

Lyle Wannamaker was the big gun for City, coming through with a double and two singles. Cliff Hinesman doubled and Ehler singled for the other safeties.

Posties Deliver Goods

A special nine-run delivery just before closing time enabled the Post Office to pull out a 13-9 Industrial Softball League win over the CN Turbos Tuesday. Their loss, after they had almost tied it and edged into the sixth inning, cost the defending league champions a first - place tie with The Intelligencer and Mead-Johnson.

Three - hit contributions by John Jobson and Gerry Reynolds helped the Posties to their upset win. Neil Goyer and George Hall had scoring chores for the winners, striking out four and walking 12 Turbos.

Brian Plumbe, Ron Conlon, and Rod Bennett toiled for the Turbos, with Bennett picking up the loss after weathering most of the limited nine-run sixth inning. The trio only managed two strikeouts in the face of a 17-hit Post Office attack.

Mill Bell, Lane Plumbe, and Cam McKenna each hit safely twice in a losing cause.

Meanwhile the Five Department overcame 4-3 and 6-4 deficits to hand the new Usemore Consumer Association entry an 11-7 setback.

Bullit George Woodhouse and Perry Dale pitched for the Firemen, fanning five and walking nine, while each giving up six hits to even the club's won-lost record at 3-3.

Grant Parks paced the winners with a triple, a double, a homer, double and single. Larry Fritz (three singles) and Ralph Boomhower — two singles and a double — were also hot for the Firemen.

Kingsley went the route for the losers, bearing the brunt of 17 hits while striking out one and walking a pair. Collins and Chase were the only UAC batters to hit safely more than once.

Bowerman Misses Open

The pressure of continuous qualifying overcame Belleville native Gary Bowerman Tuesday, as the PGA tour novice failed in his bid to play in the plum of the pro golf tour — the United States Open.

Bowerman failed in his qualifying bid for an open berth at Chicago, while three other Canadians were having better luck in sectional play at Detroit Golf Club's North Course.

George Knudson and Al Balding, both of Toronto, carded 144 totals for 36-hole qualifying round to earn berths in the U.S. Open field. Windsor's Bob Panasik also made the Open grade, shooting 143.

Goyette For Grabs

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the biggest surprises today as the 12 existing National League teams prepared for the afternoon expansion draft was the dropping of centre Phil Goyette from the protected list by St. Louis Blues.

Each of the 12 clubs was allowed to protect two goaltenders and 15 players against draft by Vancouver Canucks and Buffalo Sabres.

Goyette, winner of the Lady Byng Trophy last season, joined newly-appointed coach Al Arbour, Larry Keenan, Terry Crisp, Bill McCreary and veteran Jean-Guy Talbot on the Blues unprotected list.

New York Rangers failed to protect such well-known names as Ron Stewart, defenceman Tim Horton, forward Don Marshall and Orland Kurtenbach along with young defencemen Al Hamilton and Mike Robitaille.

Montreal Canadiens went into the draft without veteran right winger Claude Provost and defenceman Jean Gauthier.

Veteran defenceman Bob Baun was left off Detroit Red Wings' list as was Paul Popell and veteran forwards Billy Dea and Larry Jeffrey.

Toronto Maple Leafs decided to go without defenceman Pat Quinn, veteran forwards Floyd Smith and George Armstrong and goaltender Marv Edwards.

The Stanley Cup champion Boston Bruins did not protect defencemen Bill Speer and Gary Doak, along with young forwards Tom Webster and Ernst Bailey, while Chicago dropped Lou Angotti.

Big Birds Boss

The juniors proved to be top birds in the Falcon soccer family as they handed their bantam counterparts a 4-0 whitewashing Tuesday.

Jim Thompson scored four goals for the Junior Falcons, with Bill Leitch adding the other two.

In the peewee division, the Falcon peewees edged Belleville United 4-3. Peter Crawford, Brian Towers, Keith Parry and Bruce Keller scored for the winners. Paul Kirby (2) and Alan Rutherford replied for United. Uptown Billiards came through with a 4-2 win over the Ponton Park peewees.

Tony Donovan (2), Bob Barrage and Dario D'Anna scored for Uptown.

Artistic Win

Artistic Ladies Wear came up with two runs in the final inning to take a 6-5 decision from Cosy Grill in Tuesday night's Women's Softball action.

A triple by Sharon Brown and Judy Isaac' base hit were the key blows in Artistic's last - inning rally.

Sue Morton pitched the win, allowing ten hits, walking none and striking out 11 batters. Sandra Clare took the loss, giving up 16 hits. She issued two bases on balls and fanned nine.

Lacrosse Gets Food for Thought

Bud Gill bantams may have led to a re-structuring of the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association by battering Towers Food City 11-0 Tuesday.

Roy Payne, president of the association announced that the group plans to re-align players from some of the various teams in order to prevent such top-sided scores. "It's nothing drastic," he claims. "We just feel that there should be a little more balance in some divisions."

Rick Barbeau paced Bud Gill's with a four-goal effort. Wade Grier added a hat trick, with Red Mallory and Rick Belanger picking up two apiece.

In the other bantam contest played Simpson Sears blanked Queens Motor Hotel 6-0.

Chris Kaitsy fired two goals for the winners with singles going to Danny Murray, Eric Powell, Mark Walmsley and Mike Hall.

In the novice section, the T-Birds stopped the Dairy Queen 4-2. Mike Reynolds had a pair of goals for the T-Birds followed by Doug Baldwin and Stuart McKonkey with one apiece. Jeff Hayward and John Guthrie scored for the losers.

Grapes Alive!

Middle distance runner Dave Rutherford takes a baton pass from Karina Jokinen, a fellow member of the "Galloping Grapes." The Belleville Kinsmen track and field club, who picked up the alias because of their flashy purple uniforms, will hold their registration Thursday night at Moira Secondary School.

Phillies Continue Making Silk Purses

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Success continued to grow from misfortune for Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday night as Doc Edwards, an emergency replacement catcher, produced hits for the third game in a row helping the Phillies to a 3-1 National League win over Atlanta Braves.

Deprived of regular catchers through a rash of injuries, Philadelphia manager Frank Lucchesi was forced to dip into his bullpen and activate Edwards, a 32-year-old coach.

Edwards drove across both Philadelphia runs with a single Tuesday for his fifth hit in 11 at bats since joining the active roster last Saturday.

In other National League action Tuesday, Cincinnati Reds dropped Montreal Expos 4-1, New York Mets nipped Houston Astros 3-1, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-0, Chicago Cubs downed San Diego Padres 7-3 and Pittsburgh Pirates trimmed San Francisco Giants 8-1.

Earlier this year, Philadelphia catchers Tim McCarver and Mike Ryan both suffered broken hands in the same inning. The injury jinx hit their replacements as Mike Compton hurt his back and Del Bates his hand.

This opened the door for Edwards.

He not only slugged in both runs Tuesday, but picked pinch runner Sonny Jackson off first base in the ninth inning.

The heroics haven't turned Edwards' head. "If I was the manager," he said, "I'd put McCarver and Ryan back as soon as I could."

"I'm relaxed. When this is over, I only have to travel back to the bullpen."

The Cardinals reached into the bullpen for Chuck Taylor, who made his first start after 20 relief appearances and shut out the Dodgers on five hits.

Lou Brock, Joe Cardenal and Joe Torre had two hits apiece for the Cards, who ended Claude Osteen's personal five-game winning streak.

Tom Seaver throttled Houston on three hits and pitched the Mets to their fifth straight victory over the Astros. Wayne Garrett homered for New York and Denis Menke connected for the Astros.

The victory was Seaver's first since May 15 and ended a four-game spin for the 1969 Cy Young Award winner.

Steve Blass batted an even bouncy ball, pitching Pittsburgh past San Francisco. It was his first victory since April 23—a seven weak span in which he had lost seven games.

Expos' Injuries Not Serious

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League announced Tuesday that injuries suffered by Cora Laboy and Ron Brand in Monday night's exhibition game with Boston Red Sox of the American League were not serious.

Laboy, the team's regular third baseman who has hit safely in his last 10 games and clouted a homer in each of the last three games, was helped from the diamond in the first inning of Monday's contest when he fouled a pitch off his left ankle.

He was taken to hospital where x-rays indicated there was no fracture.

Brand, Expos' ace utility player, was struck under the left eye while playing shortstop in the second inning when a hard ground ball took a fresh hop.

Considerable swelling under the eye will hamper his sight for two to three days and he will be out of action until the weekend.

Regular first baseman Ron Fairly, injured two weeks ago, was examined by club doctor Monday and x-rays showed a slight fracture of the sixth rib on his left side.

Although he is uncomfortable, the club said, he could be pressed into action if necessary.

Kansas City No Lemons For New Pilot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Lemon's managerial debut was a success Tuesday night as his Kansas City Royals downed Washington Senators 8-1 on a two-hitter by Dick Drago, snapping a six-game losing streak.

Earlier in the day Lemon, the Royals' pitching coach and former star pitcher for Cleveland Indians, had been named manager. He replaced Charlie Metro after Kansas City had lost eight of nine and were tied for fifth place. 16½ games back of Minnesota Twins, West Division leaders in the American League.

In other games, Willie Horton hit three home runs, including a grand slam, and drove in seven runs as Detroit Tigers zipped Milwaukee Brewers 8-3, New York Yankees topped Minnesota 5-2, Oakland Angels downed Baltimore Orioles 7-5 in 11 innings, Chicago White Sox beat Boston Red Sox 4-2 and Oakland Athletics trimmed Cleveland 3-2.

Drago got all the support he needed from Bob Oliver, who rapped three hits, a homer, a triple and a single. A four-run first-inning was keyed by Amos Otis's two-run triple, Oliver's triple and a sacrifice fly.

Horton ripped his grand slammer in the first, wiping out a 2-0 Brewers' lead, then connected for a two-run shot in the sixth and added his 18th of the year in the eighth, a solo blast, sending Milwaukee to its 19th consecutive road loss.

Jim Bibby mastered four hits and Gene Michael hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to help the Yankees edge to within 4½ games of Baltimore, leaders in the East.

Yankees On Block

LONDON (AP) — Jerome D. Hoffman, president of a London investment company, confirmed today that he is going to try to buy the New York Yankees baseball team.

"We also want the real estate of the Yankee Stadium," he said.

Hoffman said he was leaving for New York today to meet with former mayor Robert Wagner before completing details of the offer to the Columbia Broadcasting System, which owns the American League team.

CBS purchased the Yankees in 1964 for $14,000,000. There have been rumors that the network would be willing to sell the team.

Asked how much his company was offering for the Yankees, Hoffman said: "No comment."

The Old Man and the Lunker

By ARNIE HAKALA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The adventure reminded one of Ernest Hemingway's novel The Old Man And The Sea.

But there was one major difference—the ending was happy, not tragic.

The old man, tired and with the joints of his fingers bleeding from the tight cuts of the line, managed to land a giant marlin after a struggle that lasted more than two hours.

However, sharks found the blood of the marlin and eventually found it and cleaned the big fish to a skeleton.

Gilbert Grawbarger, a big man who has hooked many a gaided most of his life, hooked a 37-pound lake trout last week and it took him five hours and 15 minutes to land it.

The big fish, like the marlin, went into the deep and Grawbarger had to follow it with his line—he couldn't force it up because he was using light spinning tackle and four-pound test line.

But Grawbarger landed the fish and will mount it.

The lunker—measuring 43 inches in length and with a girth of 22 inches—was taken in Restocle Lake, about 25 miles south of North Bay, on a homemade jig which has a yellow head and white feathers as a tail.

Grawbarger, 44-year-old vice-president of the Ontario Trappers Association who lives at Restocle on the lake's south shore said in an interview:

"I couldn't get him up from the bottom. There was no way I could force him on that tackle."

Mr. Grawbarger, who was guiding two American tourists at the time, said:

"We were jigging in about 50 feet of water when he hit. I knew there were big fish in the lake but [37 pounds—so sir, I didn't think it was possible."

Mr. hooked the fish at 11:45 a.m. and at 3 p.m., it came to the boat and rolled over on its side, exhausted.

McLain Files For Bankruptcy

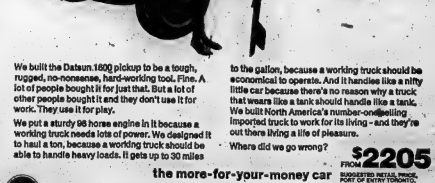
DETROIT (AP) — Admitting unsecured claims of about $400,000, suspended Detroit Tigers pitcher Denny McLain filed for bankruptcy Tuesday.



William Aikens, McLain's lawyer, said his client has virtually no assets and he advised him that "bankruptcy was the only course which would enable him to straighten out his tangled finances."

McLain, who won 31 games for the Tigers in 1968, had invested in a number of businesses which Aikens said are of questionable value now.

Aikens said $275,000 of the unsecured claims against McLain are contested by the pitcher, who is scheduled to return to the Tigers July 1 after a three-month suspension for alleged involvement in gambling.

DATSUN 1600 PICKUP
the most misunderstood truck in the country

We built the Datsun 1600 pickup to be a tough, rugged, no-nonsense, hard-working tool. Fine. A lot of people bought it for just that. But a lot of other people bought it and they don't use it for work. They use it for play.

We put a sturdy 96 horse engine in it because a working truck needs lots of power. We designed it to haul a ton, because a working truck should be able to handle heavy loads. It gets up to 30 miles to the gallon, because a working truck should be economical to operate. And it handles like a nifty little car because there's no reason why a truck that wears like a tank should handle like a tank. We built North America's number-one-selling imported truck to work for its living - and they're out there living a life of pleasure.

Consumers Told Labor Techniques Can Be Used to Exert Power

SASKATOON (CP) — The same techniques used by unions in industrial relations can be applied by consumers, union leader W I l l i a m Dodge said Tuesday.

Mr. Dodge, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, told delegates to the Consumers' Association of Canada annual meeting that consumers are learning that boycotts, "or buyers' strikes", are effective means of exerting power.

He said consumers have not paid attention to their responsibilities because they have been brainwashed by advertising campaigns.

"We'll see you on the picket lines," he told about 200 association delegates and guests.

Mr. Dodge was one of four panelists responding to an address by freelance writer and broadcaster John Fisher who said consumers must organize and use their power.

Mr. Fisher, author of The Plot to Make You Buy, said the consumer organization will have to tackle broader aspects than just advertising, packaging, marketing and sales promotion gimmicks.

"Instead of tinkering with the so-called free-market economy, and telling people how to beat the system, we should be educating Canadians and Americans to the basic folly of our wasteful way of life."

Present-day consumerism in North America is built around relative abundance, he said. "But . . . our children's world will be one of scarcity—either self-imposed or externally-imposed."

Not all panelists agreed.

Jean de Grandpre, executive vice-president of Bell Canada in Montreal, said he believes in co-operation and a more rational approach to the problems of consumers.

Ernest Steele, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers' of Canada, said that as the system for supplying wants and needs in society become more complex, there is greater need for consumer participation and concern.

Organization and power are needed, he said, but it must be responsible.

Assessment Not Concern

Spending Said Board Priority

KINGSTON (CP) — Delegates to the Ontario Public School Trustees' Association convention decided Tuesday that property assessment still is the best basis for educational taxation.

They decided that boards of education should concern themselves with priority spending instead of trying to change the educational taxation basis.

This was the position taken Monday by Prof. Brock Rideout of the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education, main speaker at the opening meeting meeting.

Robert Saunders of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation told the discussion group that the Ontario government would have to raise $800,000,000 from other sources if the property-assessment taxation basis was changed.

Surveillance and Publicity Keys to Price, Wage Control

TORONTO (CP) — The federal prices and incomes commission plans to initiate a "system of surveillance" to bring to public attention price and wage increases it considers excessive, a member of the commission said Tuesday.

George E. Freeman said the commission plan will be outlined at a news conference within a few days.

Mr. Freeman's comments were made in an interview expanding on his speech to the annual conference of the Retail Council of Canada.

Mr. Freeman said the commission does not have authority to force changes in price or wage increases, but it could publicize names of business or labor groups that exceeded guidelines.

In his speech, Mr. Freeman said it appeared the consumer price index was now at a rate of increase of about four per cent a year, compared with five per cent in early 1969 and six per cent now in the United States.

"It is noteworthy that such progress as has been achieved to date in moderating the rate of price increase in Canada has been made possible mainly through the squeeze on profit margins and not at all by any easing of labor cost pressures," he told the audience of about 100 retail merchants, including representatives of major department stores and chains.

Mr. Freeman said a commission objective "is to achieve an early and marked change of trend in the size of increase in future labor contracts."

He said the six-per-cent wage increase limit announced at the recent federal-provincial conference in Winnipeg considers two factors:

—A projected annual rate of increase in productivity between 2½ and three per cent.

—An assumption that the increase in the consumer price index over the next 12 months will be between three and 3½ per cent.

He said recent wage increases have been averaging about 7½ per cent.

Youths Take Over Hotel and Serve Selves Beer

SASKATOON (CP) — Between 250 and 300 young people took control of the downtown Bessborough Hotel Tuesday night and served themselves beer after management closed off the taps.

The demonstrators, protesting the hotel's new rulings on appearance and dress, stood on tables, taunted police and tore windows from their hinges in the barroom.

City police and RCMP were on hand but made no arrests. A police spokesman said no police action could be taken unless requested by the management.

Shortly after the young people marched on the hotel — about 8 p.m. CST — George McCabe, hotel manager, ordered the bar shut down. But the crowd, which overflowed into the lobby, helped themselves to pickled eggs, opened the beer taps and formed a beer line.

The demonstrators left at 11:30 p.m., promising to return for a "sleep-in" tonight.

Monday night about 200 young people invaded the beverage room and the Upper lounge after some persons were ejected for not conforming to dress regulations.

City police Supt. Jack Wood said such protests may make the provincial government reverse its April decision to lower the drinking age to 19 from 21.

Mr. McCabe, who sat quietly in the beverage room during the demonstration, has said hotel patrons have objected to youths with unwashed hair and dirty clothes drinking in the barroom.

"There's an unhealthy group in the beverage room and I intend to clean it up," he said.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Will "Man and His World" be presented again this summer in Montreal and if so when does it open?

ANSWER: Man and His World will open this year on June 12 for its third summer and will cost $19 million. It will close September 7 and officials expect about seven million people will visit it. It will be the greatest show this side of Osaka. Even if you have seen Expo the first time, this fair is all new, a whole and is in many ways a much different show.

At least 50 per cent of the fair will be new every year. The pavilions will all be the same on the outside with, of course, a few coats of fresh paint to make them look new. Some 30 countries will participate this year. The U.S. is back after a two-year absence. Hungary is making its first fair appearance on this side of the Atlantic. Spain, which was such a hit last year, will be back again this year. So will Taiwan, Luxembourg, France, the Soviet Union, West Germany, Mexico, Thailand, India and Belgium among others. Visitors will see Tony Bennett, Trini Lopez, Paul Anka, Peggy Lee, Dionne Warwick, Johnny Mathis, Henry Mancini, Sonny and Cher, The Temptations, Bobbie Gentry and some 100 other performers during the show's 80 days. The acts will take place outdoors at Place des Nations and at the Canada Bandshell.

La Ronde, the fair's 135 acre amusement park, is already open on weekends. It will open seven days a week as of June 13 with several new rides. The most notable is the 12-car foot - high continuous loop bell known as the Zipper.

The former German Pavilion is now the children's pavilion, with puppet shows, cartoon shows from several countries and a detailed model of Noah's Ark.

The former Netherlands pavilion will house one of the expected hits called Spectrafonia. Here the visitor is bombarded with sound and light effects.

The British pavilion will house a science fiction show that will let you walk with robots, plus other interesting shows.

The Canadian pavilion will have a sports theme and show Montreal's plans for the 1976 Olympics.

The Space pavilion should be better than Expo's because of the moon landings which have taken place since.

Admission is $2.50 a day, youths and children 6 to 18 pay $1.25, younger children get in free. After 8 p.m. admission price is $1.00.

Pavilions open from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

La Ronde open from noon to 2:30 a.m.

There is still plenty of parking around Man and His World but the best way to arrive is by subway from downtown Montreal direct to the Islands. You can also get there by boat and park at the Ronde Marina. There is still free express service around the Islands and a network of minirails.

QUESTION: I hear there are places in Toronto from which I could deliver a new car out to Vancouver, B.C. and it wouldn't cost me anything. Do you know anything about this?

ANSWER: The big three in Toronto who handle this type of car delivery are — Western Driveaway, Toronto Driveaway, and Auto Driveaway. These have all been checked out by the Ontario Motor League and Better Business Bureau. Their application forms require such basic information as licence numbers, age and number of years of driving experience. Minor repairs along the way are paid by the driver who is reimbursed at the end of the trip. Thousands of people are intrigued by the thought of cheap transportation to the coast. Some $,500 of them each year find the terms suitable and make the trip. But it isn't entirely free. Depending on the time of the year it may cost you $25 to $50, some or all of your gasoline, your meals and accommodations and your fare home from the delivery point. In the summer you make a $100 deposit when you pick up the car and receive $50 back when you deliver it in good condition. You must be over 21 and have a good driving record. It is better if there are two qualified drivers to share the driving, especially on a trip of this length. You will have a time limit to make this journey. If you are going to Vancouver you will have nine days. This gives you a chance to stop in Banff and Jasper and see some of the outstanding scenery along the way. Or you could go by way of Chicago and visit the Badlands and Yellowstone Park in Wyoming.

Car Sales Are Lower But Production Higher

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

North American car manufacturers, currently rushing to produce new small models, suffered a drop in Canadian sales of about 25 per cent during the first five months of this year.

Although car sales are off generally this year, almost all foreign manufacturers have increased sales in Canada and sales by Ford Motor Co. of Canada and General Motors of Canada Ltd. of cars produced overseas have held firm.

Production figures for Canadian plants, however, show an overall increase during the January-May period. By the end of May, production was more than double sales. Labor contract negotiations are coming up this summer and while strikes might not make new cars scarce they could delay introduction by GM and Ford of new subcompacts.

Figures supplied by Ford, GM, Chrysler Canada Ltd. and American Motors (Canada) Ltd. showed sales for the first five months of 1970 totalled 259,872 vehicles compared with 344,379 for the same period last year, a drop of 24.5 per cent.

Sales for the January-May period of 1970 break down into 212,008 cars and 47,844 trucks while comparable figures for the previous year were 284,229 and 60,000. Car sales were down 25.4 per cent while truck sales were off 20.4 per cent.

The latest figures available on foreign-car sales were those compiled by R. L. Polk and Co., Toronto, for the first four months of this year.

Foreign-car sales were up 24.9 per cent and at that time sales of North American cars—and including trucks—were down 19.9 per cent, showing there was a further decline during May.

By the end of April, Polk's compilation showed, foreign cars had 19.5 per cent of the Canadian market, or one sale in five.

American Motors' subcompact, the Gremlin, started coming off the assembly line in May. GM's Vega 2300 and Ford's Pinto are scheduled to appear with the 1971 models. Chrysler is not expected to introduce a subcompact this year.

She Bruises Very Easily And Her Fiance Is Fussy

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In this world when so many are suffering from heart disease, cancer, rheumatism and other illnesses, I feel a sense of guilt in complaining of what seems to be a minor problem.

I am terribly plagued by black and blue marks. Every day I discover new bruises, most of which I am not able to relate to an injury. Some are the size of a dime, some a quarter and this morning one the size of a half dollar. (If I were in a joking mood I'd call it inflation). Otherwise, I have flawless skin and am therefore particularly upset by these marks.

Also, to make matters worse, I plan to be married in two months; and my fiance is neurotic about any imperfections, especially on the skin. He cannot stand the sight of bruises, scars, scratches, etc. Knowing this, I am fast becoming a nervous wreck. I think of myself as the black and blue bride.

One doctor told me not to be concerned about it, making very light of the whole situation. Another suggested I take ascorbic tablets and drink a lot of orange juice and tomato juice. Well, they haven't done any good. Can you help please? Must I resign myself to being a black and blue bride — or, perhaps no bride at all? — Miss P.

Comment: If your fiance is neurotic about any imperfections, suppose your black and blue marks disappear and you develop acne? Or some more serious imperfection? How will he react? You will be in a dither for the rest of your life.

But enough of that. In answer to your main query: What to do about the black and blue marks?

As you undoubtedly know, many people have fragile veins and the slightest bump or injury will produce black and blue marks. We suggest, as your doctors have, that they take vitamin C on the assumption that it will strengthen these veins. But it doesn't always work.

Not being effective, the only suggestion we can give is to be careful and try to avoid injury to the skin — and use coverup preparations to lessen the discoloration.

But there is another important suggestion. Have your doctor do a complete blood investigation. Sometimes these "purpuric" spots are caused by some abnormality with "blood platelets."

Meanwhile, better have an understanding with your fiance that none of us is perfect.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We have one granddaughter just turned 3, who is a very bright child. Yet for the past year she has had the biting habit. She just walks up to any child or baby and bites it.

My daughter has even bitten her back to try to break her of the habit, as soon as she bites someone. She is very upset as it is causing friction with the neighbors. And she is afraid to enter her nursery school because of her habit of biting. Will you advise? — Mrs. O.

Comment: It's not unusual for a child between the ages of 1 and 2½ to take an occasional friendly bite out of a playmate — or even a parent. But if it continues until the age of 3 and over, it may be due to a high-strung state caused by being bossed or disciplined too much. Is she jealous of another child in the home? Does she feel threatened?

Look into these possibilities. Chances are she will soon be over this habit. Meanwhile, I suggest that your daughter stop biting back. The youngster will only bite back more.

Estate Tax

Province Ready to Opt Out

TORONTO (CP) — Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said Tuesday Ottawa is ready to negotiate a federal takeover of estate taxes in Ontario and provide compensating alternative revenue to the province.

Mr. MacNaughton told the Ontario legislature he hopes to meet early next month with federal Finance Minister Edgar Benson to discuss proposals to eliminate the current system whereby both governments collect death taxes in Ontario.

Mr. MacNaughton made the remarks while participating in a debate that led to second reading of a bill to amend the Succession Duty Act. Mr. MacNaughton said the amendments are designed to provide temporary relief from "a rather punitive piece of legislation."

Revenue Minister John White, who introduced the bill, said the amendments were drawn hastily to fill a void that will exist until the federal government takes over the succession-duty field.

Implicit in the amendments is Ontario's intention to vacate the death-duty field as promised in the throne speech Feb. 24 that opened the current sitting.

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury), who is opposed to the province abandoning the death-tax field, walked angrily out of the house during the debate, but returned after the bill passed second reading.

His departure came after a heated exchange between members from both sides of the house, ending with Mr. White accusing Mr. Sopha of contributing nothing to the debate and "not doing your homework."

"It pains me to have to sit here and listen to his nonsense," Mr. Sopha said.

Women's Rights Protected

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to prevent job discrimination against women was approved in principle Tuesday in the Ontario legislature over the objections of the New Democratic Party, which called the legislation deficient and inadequate.

Steven Lewis (NDP—Toronto Scarborough West) said the bill contains "built-in discrimination" by excluding women employed by firms with fewer than six workers, and by providing that maternal leave benefits not apply to firms with fewer than 25 workers.

Clifford Pilkey (NDP—Oshawa) said these exceptions mean that the legislation won't apply to a "great number" of the 118,072 workers employed in Ontario "manufacturing plants that employ five or fewer workers. He said at least 50 per cent of these workers are women.

The bill passed second reading on a 64-to-17 vote, with the Liberals supporting the Conservative government. Ron Knight, Independent Liberal from Port Arthur, also supported the bill, calling it "a first step in the right direction."

The bill now enters committee-of-the-whole where the Liberals hope to present major amendments.

The bill also prohibits discrimination in recruitment, hiring, training and promotion for the province's 1,000,000 female workers.

Advertisements that limit job applications on the basis of sex or marital status are banned. Fines are provided for violation of the legislation.

D. M. De Monte (L—Dovercourt), his party's chief spokesman on the bill, said the legislation was deficient in that it failed to provide income provisions for women during maternal leave.

New Criteria For Water Use

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Water Resources Commission has introduced new criteria for the quality of water used for agriculture, industry, recreation, public water supply and propagation of fish and wildlife.

In a report tabled in the legislature Tuesday by George Kerr, minister of energy and resources, the commission specifies that the responsibility for proving that a waste effluent is harmless rests with those producing the effluent.

Without such proof, "all effluents containing foreign materials should be considered harmful."

When the criteria are applied to water uses throughout the province, they will set the degree of treatment needed for controlling water pollution.

The report specifically forbids boated discharges into the Great Lakes because the best might stimulate growth of vegetation, thereby depleting the oxygen supply at the expense of other marine life.

Heated discharges are also forbidden for inland waters unless they can be proven beneficial. Once again, the proof must come from those responsible for the discharge.

Waste Disposal

Sites to Be Licensed

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to give the Ontario government control over all waste-disposal operations in the province after Sept. 1 was given second reading, approval in principal, in the legislature Tuesday.

George Kerr, minister of energy and resources management, told the house one of the main provisions of the bill would provide appeal procedures for disposal-site operators.

Answering opposition criticism that a similar bill had been introduced in 1967 but never became law, Mr. Kerr said the lack of provisions for appeal procedures was one of the main reasons why the bill was dropped.

The new bill requires that operators of all waste-disposal sites obtain certificates of approval from the government to operate.

Where a site has received a certificate and is later ordered to shut down because of a health hazard, the government will pay compensation.

The new legislation provides for appeal against both certification decisions and compensation awards.

Cities Can Buy Outside Land

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said Tuesday he believes municipalities can buy land outside their boundaries for housing purposes if they use procedures in the Housing Development Act.

Not many municipalities have used the procedures, even though they supercede the Municipal Act which prohibits municipalities from buying land for housing, he said.

Strike Rules To Be Reviewed

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Dalton Bales inferred Tuesday he does not sympathize with the hiring of new workers during a legal strike but there is nothing in the Labor Relations Act to prevent it.

He refused to say whether amendments to the act, expected to be presented to the legislature soon, will include steps to curb strike-breaking.

Mr. Bales said references in the act to a legal strike do not stipulate that management cannot operate its plant or that employees cannot work.

"That is up to them," he said.

"It is up to individual companies or unions or employees as to whether they wish to engage other employees or whether an employee wishes to seek other work."

The Rand report on labor relations in Ontario, released almost two years ago, recommended steps to curb strike-breaking and also to prevent strikers from taking alternative employment during the life of a strike.

School for Scandal Delights Audience

By ROBERT TANNER
Special to The Intelligencer

STRATFORD — After a rather disappointing opening with the Merchant of Venice, the Stratford company made a strong comeback last night with a rollicking performance of Sheridan's School for Scandal, which received a standing ovation from a delighted audience. A biting attack on the late heartless fortune mongers of Eighteenth Century London, the play tells two stories, first of an elderly bachelor recently married to a young girl from the country, and secondly of two brothers with expectations from a wealthy uncle, who returns from the Orient to determine which of the two is the more worthy. The elder brother, Joseph Surface, and the young bride, Lady Teazle, are miscast up with a host of second-rate rangers, with such typical Sheridan names as Lady Sneerwell, Mrs. Candour, Crabtree and Sir Benjamin Backbite, all true indications of their respective characters.

The crisp production is directed by Michael Langham, making a welcome return to Stratford. It is greatly helped by the music of Stanley Silverman, which combines the charm of Mozart with the psychism of today, and includes one song which would hardly seem out of place in "Hair!" The costumes and set design by Leslie Hurry and Jack King are attractive and true to the period, and the numerous changes of properties and scenes are flawless.

The presentation, presumably by design, lacks the mannered style in which Sheridan is usually played, a fact which places the actors at a somewhat disadvantage. This is overcome best by Robin Gammell in the role of Joseph Surface, a revolting hypocrite who is determined to ruin his brother's reputation, shut not only making himself his uncle's heir, but also, as he hopes, marrying Maria, the wealthy ward of Sir Peter Teazle. Mr. Gammell plays him with zest and conviction, ending up in complete disgrace. But, as the lights finally dim, a slight smile crosses his face, as a further devilish scheme enters his fertile brain. Barry MacGregor, as his good - hearted wasted brother Charles, gives another excellent performance in a much more straightforward role as he wins his uncle's affection, as well as the hand of the beautiful Maria. Sir Peter Teazle is a central role on whom much of the action depends. Unfortunately, Stephen Murray seems to lack the necessary authority to carry it off with complete success. More petulant than angry over his wife's extravagances, he fails to lose the sympathy of his audience, a sympathy which his considerably misfortunes make his due. On the other hand, Helen Hay as Lady Teazle is vivacious, outrageous and charming, bringing in little touches of her own as she so recently left, yet maturing as the play progresses and she becomes the maker of the circle in which she moves.

Mervyn and James Blendick give their usual reliable and expert performances as Sir Oliver Surface ( the brothers' uncle) and Rowley, his late brother's servant. But it is to the scandalous group of gossips that the play owes much of its humor, and all of these roles are in very safe hands. As on the previous night Jane Casson excels as Mrs. Candour, always delaying how much she detests gossip, yet never so happy as when she is retailing the latest dories of the men, and of course women, about town. Bernard Behrens, gouty fool, bloodshot countenance and all, is a delightful Crabtree, wallowing in scandal as a pig wallows in mud. His nephew, Sir Benjamin Backbite, is obviously a cap off the old block, and the role gives Eric Donkin another opportunity to portray a malicious fop to perfection.

Altogether this was a most entertaining evening during which the fun seldom faltered. Anyone planning to visit Stratford this summer should be sure to include School for Scandal in his list. He is unlikely to be disappointed.

NOTICE

ONTARIO

DEPARTMENT OF MINES

GOVERNMENT NOTICE — UNDER THE MINING ACT

LANDS AND/OR MINING RIGHTS TO BE PROSPECTED FOR AND STAKED AS MINING CLAIMS

PURSUANT to the provisions of The Mining Act, R.S.O. 1970, Chapter 274, as amended by the Statutes of Ontario, 1973, Chapter 72, Section 2, notice is hereby given that the lands, including soil cover as defined in Section 134, 1968, designated by the said Act are two years or more in default, notice is hereby given that unless the said lands will be staked on or before December 31st, 1974, on the day following shall be deemed to be open for staking at 9 o'clock in the forenoon. Lands which are staked on or before the said date will be open to staking at one hour or "THE OPTABEL CLAIMS" which is not a bar sale. The lands cannot be purchased by paying the taxes.

These lands and mining rights covered by the said Act, the Crown, and purchased in the name of "THE OPTABEL CLAIMS" during the month of June, 1974, are described as follows, and are situated in the Township of Sidney, in the County of Hastings.

Commencements regarding this matter should be directed to the Recorder's Office at the Provincial Building, 70 Foster Avenue, Belleville, Ontario.

May 3, 1974.
Honourable Commissioner of Mines
Toronto, Ontario

No Place for Mere BA

Colleges of Education Find New Students Highly Qualified

TORONTO (CP) — Incoming students at Ontario colleges of education are so highly qualified this year that almost no room will be left for university graduates with a general BA, the dean of the college of education at the University of Toronto said Thursday.

Dean Douglas Dadson said the incoming group is the most highly qualified in the history of the province.

The Toronto college has 1,300 places to fill and has received applications from 1,150 students who are graduates of four-year honors courses, holding at least B averages.

The Toronto college received a total of 2,600 completed applications by the June 1 deadline, compared to 2,000 applications by Sept. 30 last year.

The number of four-year students who will be trying for an "A" certificate leaves only 250 places for others to study for a "B" certificate, said Gerald Whyte, the college's assistant registrar.

The situation for three-year BA graduates is not as critical at the University of Western Ontario although colleges of education at London, but the standards there have risen.

Registrar William Nediger said 68 per cent of the incoming group of 900 would be four-year graduates, compared with 40 per cent of this year's 676.

He added that Althouse has a number of applicants who hold PhDs and "many more" with master's degrees.

Registrar A. J. Dando of the province's third English-language college of education, McCarthy College at Queen's University, Kingston, said the situation there will not change.

Enrolment is restricted to 340 and the college began two years ago to select according to a high standard.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Basic Words Defy Definition

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Science is by no means free of this problem. We use the term "life" every day, and we can all roughly agree on what it means. But to a biologist it is impossible to agree on a satisfactory definition of "life." There are blurrings, and gradations, and sometimes even contradictions as to what is a "living" creature and what is not.

And real education consists not so much in "knowing" a subject as in understanding the limitations of our knowledge — not limitations because we are still ignorant, and will learn more, but because of the finite mode of minds.

"If no one asks me what 'time' is," said St. Augustine, "I know what it is; but if someone asks me, I do not know what time is."

Lawyers, or philosophers, cannot really define the essence of "justice" any more than psychiatrists can agree on a definition of "normality". And "happiness" is a word that eluded even Aristotle; at best, he clarified for us what happiness is not, and how it differs from mere pleasure or satisfaction or enjoyment.

It seems to me that the human race is condemned to what may be called "negative knowledge" in such basic matters. The most we can do is collect "non-answers" to questions of life and love and liberty and justice and happiness. By trial and experience, we can learn which paths are dead-ends or which lead us around in circles.

We cannot define "liberty" for a social order, but we can agree that certain systems will only produce non-liberty. We do not know what "love" is between persons, but we can see how certain acts of or attitudes create only conflict and dissonance. History is the art of collecting non-answers, and philosophy is the art of avoiding the same mistakes that have been made in the past.

But it seems to be an inextricable part of the human condition that the more deeply we delve, the less sure we become of what we are talking about. This is not an argument for remaining ignorant — but for using all the knowledge we can get as humbly as we know how. Maybe this, finally, is what all Bibles are trying to tell us.

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Crawford and Mrs. John Crawford stayed over the week-end with Mrs. Key McCoy, after attending the funeral of Mrs. Charles Crawford on Saturday.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 11

Your birthday today: Nothing very spectacular is promised in your coming year. Begin now to find out how to redevelop your resources and discover more productive uses for your energy. New social contacts emotional liaisons are slow in developing. Today's natives are nearly always quick-witted and good at figures.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Ask no favors today. Your best results come through getting old matters settled, unfinished work out of the way. Then seek light entertainment.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Nobody wants to know how things got this way, so just go on—from here. Personal enterprises are favored. A missing ingredient is suddenly available — be alert for its arrival.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Carry your own responsibility and take the credit — nobody higher up is likely to help. Hold onto the good qualities of your home.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): This is one of those unsettled days in which you can make progress in personal matters but little at work. Any expression of your views is likely to draw contradiction.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Business conditions smile on your ventures, but bad advice is standard today; the more illustrious the advisor the less the advice applies to you. Follow your own intuition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Whatever you do now lasts rather well. There is no point in asking approval yet; just do what your training and judgment indicate as best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You survive better by minding your own business and keeping your own affairs to yourself. Some long-standing questions finally are answered, with less turmoil than anticipated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You almost have to go it alone today. Pay attention to details to avoid later confusion. Friends have complex schemes that you might well stay clear of.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Make special efforts to keep smooth co-operation going with your mate and associates. Take the initiative once you see what is to be done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): The affairs of young people come to your attention, and you may be able to do something of lasting good. Rely on your own resources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Older people, long-standing friends are helping in making changes at home. Don't let the flurry of personal concerns interfere with your career.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): There is no marked for complaints today. Proceed the best you know how. Postpone the urge to push your family into changes of any kind.

Department of Transport employees go over this vehicle at the department's safety lane, set up with the assistance of the Belleville City Police Department at the Belleville Fairgrounds. The lane will be closed at noon Friday after having averaged 50 cars a day during the past two weeks. (For story, see Page 3.)

Diesel and Aviation Fuel Spilled Near Arctic Sea

OTTAWA (CP) — About 250,000 gallons of diesel fuel and aviation gasoline have spilled out of five storage tankes near the shore of Hudson Strait.

Details were sketchy here Wednesday and it was not known how much of the fuel went into the sea. Investigating teams from various government departments were preparing to go to the scene, near the mouth of Ungava Bay.

The spill was first revealed in the Commons by Paul St. Pierre (L-Coast Chilcotin) who asked Fisheries Minister Jack Davis about the pollution in Ungava Bay. The minister said he understood there was "real concern" about it.

Outside the Commons, Mr. St. Pierre said he had just heard about the spill and had no further details.

An official of the energy department said he understood most of the oil went into the sea but a spokesman for the transport department said his information was that most of the oil was still in pools on the land.

The investigating team, including a representative of the Quebec government, was expected to arrive at the scene today.

Iroquois Passport Accepted

BRANTFORD (CP) — Chief Emerson Hill of the Six Nations Iroquois confederacy said Wednesday the confederacy has been recognized as an autonomous nation by immigration officials in Great Britain, Sweden and Finland.

To prove his claim, the chief displayed at a press conference his Iroquois Confederacy passport bearing entry stamps of the three countries, which he visited during a recent trip.

Chief Hill said he was delayed for 75 minutes on entry into England but was finally admitted without having to ask for help from a lawyer who met him at the airport.

Although not the legal governing body of the Six Nations Reserve, near Brantford, the confederacy claims it is recognized by more than half of the reserve's 8,000 Indians.

The confederacy was ousted from power in 1924 and replaced by an elective band council.

Firefighters Winning Battle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Firefighters wearily continued to wage war on 132 forest fires in northern Alberta and Saskatchewan Wednesday and for the first time this week they appeared to be winning.

Cool weather and rain reduced the fire hazard, prevented new outbreaks and raised the hopes of 2,000 men that they could contain most of the fires before they burned much further.

Alberta reported 62 fires, 49 of them out of control. Saskatchewan had 70 burning with all but a few under control.

Union Feud Threat To CN

By Lenny Williamson
Staff Reporter

Canadian National Railways operations here may grind to a halt June 17 at 4 p.m. if conflict between railway officials and yardmen, resulting from an intra-union feud, is not settled by then.

But acting Rideau Area manager G. A. Van de Water said this morning the Belleville yard will continue to operate after that deadline, using qualified supervisory personnel to replace yardmen if necessary.

June 17 at 4 p.m. was the deadline given yesterday by top Rideau Area officials to the 14 local yardmen for paying their dues to the Cleveland - based United Transportation Union.

If the dues are not paid by then, the officials said, the yardmen would lose preference of service — they would go on a spare list and be called as needed, with no regard for the rights of senior men to the preferred daytime shifts.

"If this happens, we will all book sick and not turn up for work," said Albert Lentini, spokesman for the Belleville yardmen.

Right Diet Can Improve Brains

MONTREAL (CP) — A Mexican nutrition expert said Wednesday that better diets could be used to produce better brains.

Dr. Joaquim Cravioto, chairman of the department of nutrition at the Hospital Infantil de Mexico, said in an interview that researchers around the world are trying to determine what nutrients the brain needs to develop fully.

Postal Strikes Cover Region

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Post office workers in Belleville, Trenton and Picton walked off their jobs early today — joining a lightning 24-hour strike which has tied up the mails in at least 87 Ontario centres.

The strike pattern — involving at least 5,000 workers — spanned an area from western Quebec to Northern Ontario.

In Ottawa, a Canadian Council of Postal Unions spokesman said almost every Ontario centre that had not previously staged a walkout, would join today's massive demonstration to support contract negotiations.

In Belleville, the only mail available was in postal boxes in the post office lobby — a service primarily used by business.

Postmaster Roy Wainwright said rural mail would still be delivered in the Belleville area.

Rural carriers operate under federal government contracts and are not involved in the strike situation, he said.

Threat Is Made To Blast Hotels

By The Canadian Press

Leftist Arab guerrillas threatened today to blow up two hotels in Amman in which 58 foreigners are being held hostage if Jordanian troops continued shelling Palestinian refugee camps.

The threat by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine involved one hotel in which 38 persons were being held and another in which 20 were under detention. Canadians were reported to be in both hotels.

The report on the guerrilla threat to blow up the hotels came from Dennis Neeld, Associated Press reporter in Amman.

In Beirut, Lebanon, Reuters news agency quoted a spokesman for Al Fatah as saying heavy artillery was shelling the southern sector of Amman.

Neeld said there was no independent confirmation in Amman that the Jordan army was shelling refugee camps today.

In Beirut, Lebanon, however, Western diplomatic sources said there were reports today of some tank fire on the camps. Palestinian sources there said tanks were shooting at anything that moved in the streets around the camps.

The hostages were held Tuesday night by a band of 60 guerrillas who occupied the American-owned Intercontinental Hotel.

Later another group occupied the Philadelphia Hotel, about two miles away.

The front told the hostages Wednesday they would be released but the decision was reversed when, a guerrilla leader said, the army resumed shelling the camps.

Some of the non-Western hotel guests were allowed to leave Wednesday.

Two American reporters also got away but the remaining hostages include more than a dozen correspondents.

The new crisis in the Jordanian capital came after King Hussein said the situation in his country was "improving rapidly" after the three days of fighting between his army and the Palestinian guerrillas. Amman radio had said "normal life had returned completely" although there were reports of shooting even before the threat to blow up the hotels.

Nixon's Cabinet Shuffled

WASHINGTON (AP) — New titles have been dealt to some Nixon administration loyalists, and an outspoken dissident has been fired, in the latest round of shakeups in the United States executive offices.

President Nixon announced Wednesday he is switching George P. Shultz, who is making $60,000 a year as labor secretary, to head of a super agency to handle domestic spending programs.

As leader of the new unit—to be called the office of management and budget, an expanded version of the old bureau of the budget—Shultz will keep his cabinet rank but at only $42,500.

Just last Saturday, Robert H. Finch, accepting a similar salary slash in leaving his $60,000 job as secretary of health, education and welfare, became the first Nixon cabinet member to move elsewhere. Nixon named him to the White House staff as a presidential counsellor.

Nixon, who moved into the state department for Undersecretary Elliot Richardson to succeed Finch at HEW, stayed within the labor department in hopping Undersecretary James Hodgson as successor to Shultz.

After the disclosure of the Shultz switch, word came that James E. Allen, a critic of administration policies ranging from school desegregation to the military move into Cambodia, was fired as commissioner of education.

Finch announced he "asked for and received" the resignation. He gave no explanation for the step.

Dirt Strip in Peru Village Continent's Busiest Airport

ANTA, Peru (AP) — Earthquake relief operations were slow getting started, but they are moving along now, and a dirt strip at this village in the Huaylas Canyon has become the busiest airport in South America.

From dawn to dusk every day, planes haul food, medicine and other supplies into the canyon from Lima and the port city of Chimbote. They fly out with survivors of the May 31 quake, which killed 50,000 persons.

Peruvian authorities reported the third loss of an aircraft in a week of relief flights. The national information office said a Peruvian air force helicopter crashed near the town of Cajacay and three persons aboard were killed.

Earlier in the day, an Argentine Fokker F-27 with seven persons aboard was reported missing en route from Lima to Anta. Last Saturday a United States helicopter flying into the canyon was smashed against a hillside by a strong downdraft.

Participating in the airlift are U.S. Air Force helicopters and transports, Canadian twin-engine Caribou transports, Peruvian air force DC-3s, and aircraft from Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Peru and the United States.

Five Canadian Armed Services Caribou cargo planes which arrived here earlier this week are based in the earthquake devastated city of Huaraz and the port of, Chimbote. They are being used to carry supplies and evacuate injured.

The Canadian embassy announced that a ship with 110,250 bushels of wheat would arrive in July in addition to economic and other aid given earlier to help an estimated 800,000 survivors of the earthquake.

Viet Cong Slaughter Civilians

DA NANG (AP) — In two hours of killing, the Viet Cong attacked a South Vietnamese village south of Da Nang early today, killed at least 70 civilians and wounded 31 others, United States officers reported.

Villagers said the Viet Cong raced through the streets of Ba Ren "shooting anyone they saw" and hurling fragmentation and phosphorus grenades into houses and shops.

A U.S. officer who flew over the hamlet 17 miles south of Da Nang said about 90 per cent of the huts were destroyed or damaged.

Youth and dancing know no boundaries, and the fact was celebrated with a tree planting yesterday at Zwick's Island. Water from the Thames and Mississippi rivers and from the Bay of Quinte was used in the ceremony.

Jaci Smith from Webster City, Iowa, and Sally Leach from Cambridge, England, accompanying British square dancers touring Canada, performed their part of the ceremony. Canada was represented by Daniel Cochrane as Mayor J. Russell Scott and other civic dignitaries watched the sugar maple tucked into its spot on the knoll as a living reminder of international goodwill.

McKeough's Proposal Okayed by Council

Hastings county council has agreed to the proposal of Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough for the setting up of two planning areas in the county — Hastings and Quinte areas — but the four municipalities with dual membership have financial misgivings.

Under the Minister's proposal made to county council earlier this year, the Quinte Planning Area would consist of Belleville and Trenton and the four rural municipalities of Sidney, Thurlow, Frankford and Stirling.

The Hastings Planning area would take in the balance of the county with the four municipalities in the Quinte area also members and required to pay fees into both bodies.

The county planning and industrial committees at the April meeting of council recommended the Hastings area be asked to define the Hastings area and set out a proposed constitution and membership.

To ease the financial burden on the four municipalities with dual membership, it was recommended that they be rebated 50 per cent of their membership fee in the Hastings area.

But the four municipalities objected to the dual fees even with the proposed 50 per cent rebate from the county area and despite an amendment to increase the rebate to 75 per cent, the committee report was laid over until the next session.

Yesterday council was told that estimated expenditures for the first full year of operation of the two planning boards would be $76,600 for the Hastings area and $188,800 for the Quinte area.

To get the county planning area under way, the Municipal Affairs minister said the province would subsidize its operation by one third of its cost for three years up to a maximum of $25,000 per year.

Yesterday, at the request of county Warden John Wilkes, Mr. McKeough came to Belleville to further discuss the proposed planning areas with council. The minister's meeting with council was held in camera.

Following council's meeting with the Minister, Warden Wilkes said Mr. McKeough had not offered any alternatives to his earlier proposals and that present arrangements for between member municipalities would have to be worked out at the local level.

Yesterday, Sidney Reeve Jack Bush asked county council to give consideration to paying the levies of the four southern county municipalities into the Quinte Planning Board.

On an estimated expenditure of $126,000 the Quinte area levy to the four municipalities would be $22,800, he said.

Under his proposal all municipalities in the county on an assessment basis would be paying the same planning levy rather than having the four municipalities with dual membership paying into both planning areas.

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey said the Sidney reeve's proposal was "reasonable."

Marmora Reeve William Shannon said, however, that the county would have to first accept the minister's proposal or reject it.

Border Forsythe, Thurlow deputy Reeve, said if council wanted to maintain the county as a county basis, Mr. Bush's proposal was the only way to do it. Everyone then would be on an equal basis.

He asked if the four southern municipalities were to be used as a "grab bag" when the county wanted something done.

Reeve Donald Rodgers of Stirling brought the discussion to a head with an amendment calling for the four county municipalities in the proposed Quinte area to be rebated 100 per cent of their county planning dues.

This was defeated and the original planning committee recommendation with its amendment for a 75 per cent rebate for the four municipalities was carried.

Following the vote, Reeve Rodgers said his stirling will make application to the minister, to withdraw from the Quinte Planning Area and be accepted in the Hastings area.

"I don't know whether we will be accepted or not, but we will make the application.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM
IN WOH: In loving memory of our dear father, Wilfred Howard Woh, who passed away June 15th, 1970.
"Dear Dad, just a memory today,
Time may fade, but memories less are,
But it cannot fill the longing
For the love we had for you.
Who shall say the grief is lessened,
Or the heart is healed by time,
Memories keep the wound still open
Despite the passing of the years.
Sadly missed by his wife, Jessie and Dad.

Tyendinaga Tax Rate Up 12-plus Mills

The 1970 tax rate in Tyendinaga township is up more than 12 mills over that of last year.

Mill rates approved by the township council for this year call for 82.8 mills for farm and residential assessment — up 12.3 mills from last year.

The rate for commercial and industrial properties is 105.4 mills — up 12.6 mills from that of 1969.

The rate for township purposes remains the same as last year at 17 mills on farm and residential and 24 mills on commercial and industrial properties.

For county purposes, $87,861 is required from the township as compared to $69,894 in 1969. The mill rate for this purpose is 35.4 mills, up 2.3 mills from last year.

For education, an amount of $103,043 is required to be raised this year in the township as compared to $103,980 last year. The secondary school mill rate is up 3 mills to 23.7 mills on farm and residential assessment and the elementary school mill rate is up 2.3 mills on farm and residential properties.

The residential property tax reduction is allowed again this year and the reduction ranges from $49.72 to $47.10.

The 1970 taxes again this year become due in two instalments, on July 31 and December 1. The tax notices are expected to be mailed out during the latter part of June.

Rates Increased For County Homes

Today's rising cost of living is being passed along to the residents of the county's old people's homes at Belleville and Bancroft.

The report of the county homes for the aged committee read to council yesterday by its chairman Jack M. Bush noted that a per diem rate of $7.80 for the Hastings County Manor at Belleville and the Hastings Centennial Manor at Bancroft had been established.

This compares with a 1969 rate of $5.50 at the Belleville Manor and $6.50 at Bancroft.

The report said the increase in the per diem rate could be mainly attributed to pay increases granted to staff members.

At the same time the committee said the new rate compared favorably with other homes throughout the province and with nursing homes which are now charging a minimum of $10.50 per day.

There are now 341 residents at Hastings Manor, of whom 96 are from Belleville and four from Trenton. There are 91 residents at Bancroft's Centennial Manor.

There is increasing demand for accommodation at the county's two manors, and, since the April meeting of council, the committee has considered approximately 50 applications for admission. 81 applications were received, five of them from outside the county and one from a nursing home.

Figures Corrected

Figures on the Hastings-Prince Edward separate school board pupil-teacher ratio were incorrectly reported in The Intelligencer yesterday on page 2.

The correct figures follow. The ratio for the 1968-69 school year was high — 25.4 to 1.

The ratio dropped in 1969-70 to 22.3 to 1.

The projected ratio for next year, 1970-71, is 24.5 to 1, as reported.

Yardmen Fight Their Union

Because yardmen switch cars and assemble trains at freight and passenger terminals, their refusal to work could suspend operations out of the Belleville terminal and to a chain reaching almost half-twice in the key Central Region and across Canada.

Mr. Lentini said that other railway employees may also look sick in a sympathy move if the yardmen refuse to work, thus halting other vital services.

Yardmen in the Central Region, heartland of the publicly-owned railway system, have refused to pay union dues for more than three months, because of a dispute between them and trainmen — running crew on the main lines.

Under a closed shop agreement with the union, CN management is required to suspend, without pay, any employee not in good standing with the union. Until yesterday, management had ignored the non-payment issue.

This morning, the acting area manager said this is the only terminal in which yardmen are delinquent in union dues.

Of the 54 yardmen employed here, 16 are paid up, 21 had until last night at midnight to pay their dues "and since we have not heard otherwise, they are technically paid up" and 17 are two months delinquent, said Mr. Van de Water.

Mr. Van de Water question-ed Mr. Lentini's qualifications, under the circumstances, to speak for all the yardmen, and added "this is not a union-shop here."

He said the grievance concerning interchangeable rights has been referred to the UTU board of appeals for resolution in September and other yardmen across Canada have been satisfied with this action."

Mr. Lentini said the grievance has gone to the board of appeals for review only and a decision in September on whether or not to hold a re-hearing.

He added that as of yesterday, 40 yardmen here had not paid their dues and they said they had no intention of doing so.

The others who have paid up have pensions with the union but which they are fearful of losing, the spokesman said. Mr. Lentini and Ted Brunton, local lodge chairman, have also continued to pay their dues in order to represent the men here and maintain liaison with the Cleyland headquarters.

Core of the internal union dispute is a 1963 wage agreement, making seniority interchangeable for both yardmen and trainmen.

Interchangeable rights, when implemented, were to be retroactive to 1962. But last September, the CN signed a contract with the union making interchangeable rights effective in September, 1969. The new data was the result of representations made by the trainmen to the executive of the international united in Cleveland.

In a protest move, the yardmen in the Central Region agreed in April to withhold their union dues until UTU agreed to make interchangeable rights retroactive to the 1962 date of 1963.

At stake is seniority and protection positions on the railway. As the union now stands, a trainman hired in early 1969 could "bump" a yardman with 20 years' experience from a running crew job, which carries higher pay.

Mr. Lentini said today that yardmen at other CN terminals are keeping a close check on the actions of the Belleville group. The 2,200 yardmen in the Central Region, extending from Richmond, Quebec, to Windsor, Ont., and north to Capreol, outnumber trainmen by 600. The 54 Belleville yardmen, who took the initiative in April by carrying their grievance personally to Cleveland headquarters of UTU, have assumed leadership in buckling their union's actions.

Pointing Out Some Facts

Ronald Lee, president of the Hastings County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association, learns some facts from Dr. E. L. Ritcey, guest speaker at last night's annual association meeting.

County Committee's Report Wary of Regional Government

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Members of the Hastings County Municipal Reform Committee are apprehensive about becoming involved in a large regional government structure which could see the abolition of many small local municipalities.

This was frankly stated in a committee report read in county council yesterday by Madoc village reeve Thomas Burnside.

The committee report indicated there was a lack of co-ordination between municipalities in such services as recreation, by-law enforcement, personnel services, equipment sharing, refuse disposal, water and sewer services, fire protection, canine control and industrial development.

Small urban centres were providing services to an area larger than their corporate limits but felt they are not receiving sufficient compensation from their rural neighbors.

But in spite of the foregoing, the committee said it was apprehensive about a large regional government structure, noting that there appeared to be some degree of dissatisfaction with some of the present regional services such as assessment, public health, education and hospital matters.

"We feel that much of this is due to the fact that these services were removed to a great extent from the sphere of local influence," the report said.

The committee said that after ellcouraging the county to establish a county assessment commission, the province then assumed the assessment function.

It was admitted by the committee new provincial assessment department has had little time to prove its effectiveness, but stated current assessment practices and the use of the provincial equalization practices are far from satisfactory.

Similarly, the committee said, the county had been urged to establish larger areas of administration in education and then, after this had been done to the satisfaction of county people, the province introduced legislation to form county boards.

The committee said it was not critical of the county board of education, but at the same time felt that much had been lost in the way of representation from local municipalities.

"Certainly the system appears to be more expensive and less responsive to local opinion."

The committee said the same thing had happened with the county health unit. After forming a county unit, Hastings had been persuaded to go into a district unit.

"Your committee certainly questions whether anything is being achieved by forming these larger areas of administration and, in fact, it appears we have lost control."

The health unit budget is no longer established at the local level but must be approved by a provincial budget review board.

Reference was also made to the Belleville hospital to which the county is committed financially.

The committee feels that to a great extent it appears the hospital board is little more than a rubber stamp for the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

"Once again we seem to have little authority, even though we raise a good share of the money."

With the foregoing in mind, the committee recommended that the Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs be advised that the county wishes to retain its autonomy and remain as a unit of government until proof is presented that the county is unable to control its own destiny and that regional government would be more effective.

At the same time the committee did not rule out the fact that the county should continually attempt to update its present form of government to provide better services to residents.

The committee report was adopted by council but not before some errors disputed the suggestion of lack of co-operation between rural and urban municipalities.

eyes to the fact that rural

Rawdon Reeve Burton Morton said urban municipalities should close their areas had lost their schools with children now being bused to composite schools.

This, he said, brought money into the villages and towns. He said his township's fire department was prepared to fight fires in other communities, while it was also ready to share its road equipment.

"If you look closer I think you will find we are contributing," he said.

Fairgrounds Check For Older Cars

Some of the older vehicles in the Belleville area are being put through their paces at the Belleville Fairgrounds this week, all in the name of safety.

The Department of Transport and Belleville City Police have set up a safety lane that is primarily compulsory.

The officials have been at it since June 1 and the whole thing winds up Friday at noon.

Const. John O'Donnell of the Belleville City Police told The Intelligencer that an average of 50 cars a day had gone through the safety lane.

The safety lane is designed to check all the safety aspects of a vehicle and this year the safety officials are concentrating on cars from the years 1964 and under.

Const. O'Donnell explained that if a car is found unsafe, the licence plates are removed and the vehicle is towed away to be repaired.

Once a mechanic has signed a form stating that the vehicle is safe by Department of Transport standards, the owner may buy new licence plates and drive his car once more.

Const. O'Donnell added that in special cases if it is warranted, drivers may be charged with driving an unsafe vehicle.

Major Project of TB Group Is to Discourage Smoking

Members of the Hastings County Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association met in the Hotel Quinte last night for the organization's annual meeting.

Members heard guest speaker, Dr. E. L. Ritcey who spoke on newer aspects of chest disease, and reports from various executive members of the organization.

Mrs. Margaret Hallam, executive secretary of the association, outlined the program made by the organization over the past year.

She spoke of a package and information kit for school principals of the association's interest in discouraging students from smoking before they start and of all materials available from the association for health education teaching.

Also in the field of health education, the organization purchased six mechanical smoker machines of which four were given to the Hastings County Board of Education, one to the Hastings and Prince Edward County Separate School Board, and one for the Health Education Chairman.

Mrs. Winnifred Donaldson, chairman of the Respiratory Program Committee, outlined some of the projects the association is undertaking in the field of rehabilitation.

She said that a Mark 7 respirator would be purchased for the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital. June is also "kick the habit" month in Hastings County.

"We are hoping in the future to have a nurses' symposium on respiratory diseases and a health education day for the community," the report stated. "It is our hope to rent space at the Tweed and Belleville Fairs for a display on respiratory diseases."

Financially, the organization ended its year with a balance of $5,734 as of March 31 of this year, $1,134 more than was prepared to a balance on the same date last year of $7,287.

A new slate of officers was elected last night at the annual meeting.

Ronald Lee, president of the association, was re-elected to that position for another year. Dr. A. Weatherbee and Mrs. Winnifred Donaldson were elected vice-presidents. J. J. Wood was re-elected vice-president and Hastings' representative on the Ontario Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

R. F. Foran will be treasurer for the coming year, with Mrs. W. Donaldson acting respiratory disease program chairman, M. J. Dales, health education chairman, Mrs. Mary Long, rehabilitation chairman; F. A. Middleton, chairman and Dr. J. B. McSherry, medical advisor.

Rodney S. Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Reid, 36 Henry St., Belleville, received his bachelor's degree in Physics and Mathematics at Queen's University convocation, held recently at Grant Hall. Rodney is a graduate of Quinte Secondary School and has accepted a position with Northern Electric Co. in Montreal.

Postmen on Strike

The swiftness of the walkout even took mailmen by surprise.

James Campbell, president of the Letter Carriers Union Belleville local, said orders for the walkout came late last night from council headquarters in Ottawa. Postmen were to keep the move quiet until the 8 a.m. deadline today.

The first intimation Belleville mailmen had of the walkout was when they reported for duty shortly after 6 a.m. — to find union officials already on picket duty.

They were informed by Mr. Campbell and local strike chairman George Johnson Sr. of the union's order. Several donned strike signs and joined the picket line around this city's federal building.

Letter sorters who reported for duty at midnight were per-mitted to stay on the job until their shift finished at 8.30 a.m.

Local union organizers expected the demonstration to end tomorrow morning.

"We were told it was for 24 hours," said Mr. Campbell. "If there was any change they'd let us know."

The Belleville workers won instant sympathy from one source.

Mr. Campbell said plumbers, now installing an air-conditioning system in the federal building, told him they would not cross the picket lines.

The parliament involves five postal zones from Buckingham, Que., to the Windsor area and north to Gravenhurst.

Although Windsor city was called out by national strike headquarters today, workers there have been off their jobs since Monday, protesting the use of casual labor in clearing a mail backlog. It is the second walkout by Windsor workers since the current negotiations began.

Those Jumbo Jets

The Boeing 747 "jumbo" jet is by all accounts a very fine airplane or aeroplane (it seems to be "in" nowadays to call flying machines by either name, while "aircraft" is rather strange).

An interviewer on a recent television program asked all the right questions of the captain of Pan-American's first 747 flight to London. He also asked some that were naive if not plain silly, like one suggesting there might still be "bugs" to be ironed out of the plane when any such would surely have been eliminated following exhaustive test flights.

Admittedly he had to work hard to worm much out of the captain, who might have been the original for Shelley Berman's "This is your captain speaking" routine. This taciturn fellow presented a rather "Don't bother me — I only fly the thing" attitude but did say all the right things from the cabin crew and company viewpoint. It was a very fine airplane, he said in effect, at one point terming it "docile," or as he pronounced it, "dosil," allowing himself a thin smile when he said the only non-routine aspect of the flight was the press publicity.

Even the passengers were agreed the plane was a great engineering achievement (they were not so happy about the in-flight service, about which more later), and two civilian engineers among them estimated that the 747 was the end-product of all that went before in the aircraft industry. One, a gentleman in his 80s, had known the Lockheed brothers. It would have been pertinent at this stage perhaps to have mentioned such luminaries as Sir Frank Whittle, British inventor of the jet engine and the fact that Britain, as in many other spheres (like radar and television) pioneered jet travel. But today most of the world's long-distance air transports are of United States manufacture and the 747 too is a strictly American product, in the tradition of the smaller 707 with which Quinte-area residents are now familiar.

Probably cabin service has been improved by now in the few 747 flights being operated at present, but this flight isn't something to be desired in this regard. There were 14 stewardesses to serve more than 300 passengers, but nevertheless all them were complaining of slow service. The passengers themselves contributed to this situation by wandering up and down the aisle. Then again, the aircraft has 15 washrooms but one fellow said the 747 was over Ireland before he was able to find one vacant. Inevitably, too, there were delays on the ground at London airport although the traffic managers there said London was ahead of other airports in gearing to the era of multi-passenger handling.

Soon the 747s will be operating from Canada (Air Canada has three on order) and there is talk ultimately of 3,000-passenger aircraft. But it will be a while yet to run in this matter. For one thing, we shudder to think of the inevitable suits among such an aggregation who might want to try and hijack a 747 to Havana or farther afield.

Aid for Peru

Canada and the United States are in the forefront of international aid to earthquake-stricken Peru. In the case of the U.S., it once again demonstrates its compassion and generosity to those in need, with money and aircraft in excess of that provided by any other nation. Such aid of course will be lost upon anti-Americans at large, but it is a fact that the Americans are always quickly at the scene of every natural disaster, with all the aid they can muster, and transcending all political differences. For instance, relations between the United States and Peru in recent years have not been of the best, being marked as we recall by disputes over fishing rights and the boundaries of territorial waters.

"Detective" Shulman

Sherlock Holmes had nothing on Dr. Morton Shulman who has flown to Sicily to bare the Mafia lion right in its very own den. You cannot keep Dr. Shulman down; not as long ago he worked himself into such a state of exhaustion that he collapsed, but recovered nicely and flew off to Mexico for a week's rest. Toronto's fearless former city coroner and NDP member for High Park in that city is now pursuing a lead in his investigation of an alleged link between the Mafia and the Ontario Provincial Police. While he is at it he might ask the authorities in Sicily to keep their Mafia, at home. We have enough problems in this country as it is.

Well-groomed...Polite Into the Bargain

The Army (Or What Is Left of It) Still Turns Out Men

BY RICHARD JACKSON

Interesting how opinions of the decision-makers can change.

The decision-benders being those consultants and advisers in higher echelons of the Department of Civil Service to whom the decision-makers of the Cabinet often turn for facts, figures, background, forecasts and often guidance.

This particular decision-bender was no former World War Two tank commander, nor yet a regimental sergeant - major. In fact, never in his life had he heard a shot fired in anger.

Yet here he was, as he put it, suddenly a "shady farming fan of the military."

And this was some switch.

For he had been among the faceless men — the anonymous senior Civil Service hands — whose opinion and advice to the Government's decision-makers had been an influence in the cutting back of the Armed Forces to 82,000 men, the disbanding of many of the famed militia regiments, the partial pullback from NATO, and the siphoning off of funds for many vitalized auxiliary services from the Defence Department.

And here he was, sitting at a luncheon table in the huge, Government-run cafeteria in the West Block on Parliament Hill, proclaiming to his friends that he had to be "the luckiest guy for miles around."

His daughter had a new boyfriend and for the first time since she had begun dating, he was hoping something would come of it.

The new boyfriend was a second-year cadet from Royal Military College at Kingston.

And it was plain to see he had left the girl's father in a happy state of military-induced, unbelieving shock.

"You never saw anything like it," he related. "I come into the room and the lad is up on his feet.

"My wife kisses and he holds a chair for her.

"He is what we all owe me all over the place.

"I reach for a cigar and he is there with a light.

"He is sharp, clean, brushed, combed and so polite you would not believe it.

"What a refreshing change from the long-haired, flippy louts who were hanging around the girl before he showed up. I say God bless RMC and the Defence Department, too."

And that, for the time being, has bear reports coming in from Camp Petawawa where The Queen's own Cameron's Fort of Oliver's and the Grenadiers from Montreal — are training for the summer ceremonial of the Changing of the Guard on Parliament Hill.

The year there will be no regular active service Guards under the shaggy busbies and scarlet tunics, only university students.

Students?

Yep, undergrads.

But worry not. Instead, be happily surprised.

On the word of a World War Two colonel of the Cameron Highlanders who has been up to Petawawa to see for himself, the kids are "going great guns," doing just fine, keen and looking again are going into the Forces as their career after graduation.

Don mess point . . . and this is not such a plus.

Down at Defence Headquarters there is a file of letters, now gathering dust, that came in from pleased parents in other years about the way the Services gave high school students summer training.

That program is dead now, killed in the cutback that has been going on for some years in the Armed Forces.

But the memory lingers on . . . and those letters full of paeans attuned by "the new boy" who came back from camp . . . hair cut, shoes shined, starched, and, clean . . . who keeps his room tidy, hangs up his clothes, even makes his bed . . . and of course is the apple of his pop's pleased eye and the pride and joy of his ecstatic mother.

Too bad, isn't it, the kids do not get that summer training, lopped by the cutbacks? Maybe any more because the government thinks there are better ways to spend your taxes?

Deficit of Nearly $500,000

Separate School Figures Queried

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was very concerned when I read about the Separate School deficit in Tuesday's paper. As a ratepayer, parent and taxpayer I had requested an opportunity to see the 1969 audit of the Hastings and Prince Edward County Separate School Board, and at the time wrote down what I considered important items. This right belongs to every ratepayer and should be accorded. Mr. Buckley's statements regarding 1969 bear little resemblance to the Auditor's Report of March 20, 1970.

Since school board funds are public monies held and used in trust, it should be the concern of all, when there are major discrepancies between the public statements and the actual case.

I quote as some examples the following comparisons: 1969 business administration costs of $138,020 (Auditor's Report stated $126,743); 1969 capital expenditures $75,222 (Auditor's report stated $119,885); 1969 deficit of $117,012 (Auditor's report indicated a deficit of $116,235, of which $112,800 is from 1969 boards). 1969 teachers' salaries of $1,152,150 as compared to the Auditor's report of $968,235; 1970 tax income of $312,480, compared to 1969 tax income of $630,181 in the Auditor's report, and so on.

No mention has been made of the surplus of $106,977 in the capital funds account. Should this not be reflected to the ratepayer in reduced mill rates?

As teachers' salaries for 1970 have not been negotiated, is the board offering a 20 per cent increase to start? With no new programs, reduced building, increased work load on staff, and salaries being the major part of a board's expenses, it would mean that the large increase in budget would have to go to salaries, or somewhere.

Also, the board released its mill rates some weeks ago and now its budget — does this mean it sets its rates first and then the budget?

And finally, who is right in these matters, the chairman or the auditor?

It is quite clear to me that the parents and ratepayers of this board need some clear answers to the above questions and actions of this board, and I certainly is time to apply the Public Inquiries Act or something of that nature.

Our children deserve the right to have their education guided by men — and women of high principles, and such people do not need to hide or distort the truth.

Ontario's Beneficence
U.S. Cottagers Get Tax Rebate

Brockville Recorder and Times

The attempt by Liberal members to keep municipal tax rebate grants from American cottage owners has ended in failure in the Ontario Legislature. The rebate of a portion of the residential property tax to these owners applies to summer cottages as well as year - round homes and about 12 per cent of the cottages in this province are owned by Americans.

The original purpose of this legislation was to ease the burden on Ontario's hard-pressed home owners and tenants. The wisdom of extending the tax rebates to cottages was seriously questioned from the outset granting the rebates to American cottage owners, too, is nonsensical. People financially able to maintain a summer home in another country are not in need of a property tax rebate — they are well off.

The American cottagers themselves are baffled and amused by the cheques they receive from Toronto. Liberal Leader Stewart Goodfellow suggested that he has four American neighbors in his constituency of Wentworth North, who "laugh all the way" when they think it's a big joke." Bernard Newman, the member for Windsor - Walkerville, says the American cottagers in his riding are completely puzzled by Ontario's generosity and wonder how the province can afford to "give away money" like that.

Premier Robarts' only concession to the strong Liberal argument was his statement in the Legislature that he does not regard the system of grants to American cottage owners as permanent. "Trying to sort out all the foreign owners is difficult indeed," he said. "Give us time and we'll see what we can work out."

Why does Mr. Robarts think it would be so difficult to end separate non-resident cottage owners from Canadians? The Liberal Party of Canada adopted which the Conservative majority voted down, would have removed the rebates to aliens living in Ontario for less than six months of the year. Premier Robarts has let it be known that this stand by the Opposition in the strong Liberal Caucus was also defeated. Surely the Premier can find some way to close this loophole?

I am looking for information about my grandmother who lived in the Belleville area many years ago.

Her name was Mary Webb and she had brothers and sisters: She married Peter Pitman in Canada and they came to Michigan to live. They had one daughter, Martha, and she married my father, Albert Jennings of Kitchen, Michigan. When my grandfather and grandmother came to Michigan they settled first near Wyman.

I was born in 1898 and am the last of the family. My mother died young and she left brother myself, a half-brother,

Formerly in charge of the Picton detachment, Officers of the OPP, and for several years stationed at Belleville, Cpl. Harry Caldwell has been transferred to Brighton.

In an event unique in religious annals of the county, the combined congregations of Bridge Street, Tabernacle and Holloway Street United Church joined in mass worship to commemorate the silver jubilee of world union.

Irish Girl's 400 Million TV Audience

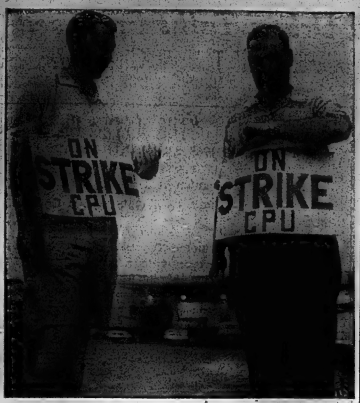
Ottawa Journal



Here's the CBTC saying Canadians must have more Canadian music and drama in broadcasts and here's a multitude of mourners asking how can Canadians do it.

Well, an 18-year-old Irish schoolgirl from Derry, Rosemary Brown, went to a European festival and won it with "All Kinds of Everything" composed by two Dubliners. She was seen and heard by an estimated 400,000,000 television viewers in Europe, Canada and the international jury gave her first place among the contestants from 13 nations.

If 2,900,000 Irish can make their mark with 1/137 of 1% of Canadians? An insistence on more Canadianism may well develop rare talents.

More Than A Family Affair

Belleville post office strike chairman George Johnson (right) and son George Jr. — also a postal employee — countdown 6 a.m. walkout deadline, while waiting to pass the word to fellow workers early today. The move was no family affair. Postal unions suddenly ordered massive walkout involving 5,000 men across the province.

Effective Immediately

Whitney to Parks Board

TORONTO — Premier John Roberts has announced the appointment of Norris Whitney, MPP for Prince Edward-Lennox, to the St. Lawrence Parks Commission.

His appointment to the 10-member commission is effective immediately.

Mr. Whitney, 52, has been a member of the Legislature since 1951. He operates a 400-acre sheep farm near Consecon, south of Trenton, and has a long-standing interest in parks development.

His special interests have included the park at Adolphustown, which includes the site of the original landing of the United Empire Loyalists; the Fairfield House near Millhaven; and the Mabel Fairfield-Outerbridge House in the Village of Bath.

The St. Lawrence Parks Commission operates a 175-mile chain of parks, camp and trailer sites along the St. Lawrence River, extending from Adolphustown to Lancaster, east of Cornwall.

The system embraces 8,000 acres and includes Old Fort Henry at Kingston, Upper Canada Village near Morrisburg, and the championship-calibre golf course at UGV.

Mr. Whitney's legislative experience includes service on four select committees of the provincial parliament. He was also chairman of the 1966 committee on agriculture and food, the first standing committee of the legislature to ever deal with departmental estimates.

Tri-level Urban Talks Proposed

HALIFAX (CP) — Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, said here Wednesday he will recommend to the federal cabinet a forum for federal-provincial-municipal consultation on urban affairs.

He said he will ask the provinces whether they will agree to a formal framework within which the three levels of government would meet to discuss federal policies and actions affecting the cities.

The discussions would help co-ordinate federal policies and actions and provincial-municipal needs. Mr. Andras told the annual conference of Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

He said he would leave the question of a department of urban affairs "hanging in the air." A forum for federal-provincial-municipal consultation was "a higher, more important immediate requirement."

One urban problem—housing—was discussed earlier at a seminar. The housing crisis was caused by the unsound financial base of Canadian municipalities, A. B. Campbell, chairman of Toronto's metropolitan council, said.

If municipalities were on a sound financial basis, land could be serviced much faster and more houses could be built. Consistent federal and provincial programs and an even flow of mortgage money would also help ease the housing situation.

Farm Marketing Bill Goes to Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's farm marketing bill was marched from the Commons to the House agriculture committee Wednesday after the opposition agreed to limit debate on second reading.

But before the bill received second reading, the government and the New Democrats defeated a Conservative motion which would, in effect, have killed the measure.

The legislation would provide for a national farm products marketing council and national marketing agencies.

The council, comprising between three and nine government - appointed members would advise the government on the establishment of marketing agencies and hold public hearings on the merits of establishing each agency.

The agencies would be established for interprovincial or export purposes for all farm products except grain and dairy products, already covered by legislation now in force.

William Knowles (PC—Norfolk-Haldimand) said the opposition would have readily supported the bill if the government had ensured producer participation.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said farm organizations have generally favored the bill in principle. But they have sought assurance that appointees to agencies be nominated wherever possible from producer organizations.

Hees Wins Trudeau's Consent To Meet with Labor Leaders

OTTAWA (CP) — George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) won permission in the Commons Wednesday to invite the leaders of organized labor to the home of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Hees has frequently urged Mr. Trudeau to meet labor leaders in an effort to persuade them to accept wage restraints. Usually Mr. Trudeau has turned aside the question with a reference to the cabinet's annual meeting with labor in the winter.

This time, however, when Mr. Hees referred to the rejection by labor of the government's recently endorsed six-per-cent wage-increase guides, Mr. Trudeau replied that perhaps Mr. Hees would like to arrange the meeting.

"Will the prime minister circulate?" Mr. Hees asked.

Mr. Trudeau nodded and Mr. Hees gleefully announced he would attempt later in the day to make the arrangements for a meeting at Mr. Trudeau's official residence.

Wages Not Only Inflation Factor

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey warned the Commons Wednesday that organized labor must not be singled out to bear the blame for inflation.

"I'm hoping labor will not be isolated because it would be erroneous and unfair," Mr. Mackasey said.

Without referring to the government's new six-per-cent wage guides, Mr. Mackasey said wages are only one factor in the rising costs which cause inflation. He noted that executive salaries, among other things, are also a cause.

The minister's statement, made in response to prodding by New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas, came after Mr. Mackasey told the House that a settlement was reached Wednesday in Vancouver in the lumber strike which has tied up the British Columbia economy for a month.

Details of the settlement would not be released until Friday, when the 1,300 members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild are to vote on it, he said.

Dollar Gap Wide

OTTAWA (CP) — Alfred D. Hales, chairman of the Commons' public accounts committee, said Wednesday there is an exceptionally wide spread between what Canadian chartered banks are paying for U.S. dollars and the price at which they sell them.

Mr. Hales, Conservative MP for Wellington, asked in the Commons for an investigation.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson promised to look into the matter.

MR. AND MRS. KONRAD KAPSA

Kapsa – Taylor

St. Thomas Anglican Church, Belleville, was the scene of the recent marriage of Bonnie Lee Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Nelson Taylor of Belleville, and Konrad Stanley Kapsa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jan Kapsa of Don Mills. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Peter M. Tutt and organist was Donald Davenport.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an original imported white moss crepe floor-length gown with empire waist and a full train attached to the waistline with a deep lace bow and trimmed with embroidered rosettes. It also featured a scooped neckline with a front panel of French Chantilly lace and full length sleeves. Her headpiece was a matching white moss crepe bow attached to a finger tip silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Maid of honor was Miss Jean Anne Taylor, sister of the bride. She wore an empire style, floor-length gown of buttercup moss crepe featuring a scooped neckline. A deep inverted pleat in back was trimmed with embroidered rosettes and her headpiece was a matching buttercup moss crepe bow. She carried a nosegay of yellow and white mums.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Kathy and Linda Jansen of Sarnia, cousins of the bride. Each was dressed identically to the maid of honor in a seafoam shade, and carried a nosegay of seafoam and white mums.

Flower girl was Carolyn Austin of Belleville wearing a floor-length gown of white imported moss crepe similar to that of the bride. She carried a white basket of red baby sweetheart roses and white mums.

Best man was Zygmunt Kapsa, brother of the bridegroom which may be difficult to attach.

Spits and motors now appear on many barbecues. Check the length of cord and insulating details. An on-off switch is essential. Make sure the spit is sturdy enough to hold a medium-sized roast or fowl and that it fits into place easily.

Suggested basic accessories include oven mitts, a long fork with a wooden handle, long food tongs, a pastry brush for sauce and a long spatula.

Also handy is a salt-and-pepper device with a long handle. A balloon clothes sprinkler or water pistol is useful for douting cooking flare-ups.

Most brands of charcoal of medium or higher prices have "licked the smell problem on the nest," the article says.

It also recommends a heavy plastic cover to protect the barbecue from the weather.

There article also gives safetyhints for using a barbecue which it says is a potentially dangerous article, especially if children or pets are nearby.

The barbecue should be kept well clear of brush and buildings. Lighter fluid should never be added to a fire that is going.

The cook should avoid wearing loose, flammable clothing while barbecuing and the barbacue should be completely stable.

The charcoal should be extinguished after use.

Charcoal stored in an enclosed space is subject to spontaneous combustion.

Graduate In Medicine

Margaret Vivian Tait and John Howard Tait both graduated with degrees in medicine from Queen's University convocation exercises June 6 in Grant Hall. Both doctors will be interning at the University of Alberta Hospital, Edmonton, Alberta. The former is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glynn Michael of Ottawa, while the latter, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tait of Belleville, is a graduate of Quinte Secondary School.

Sturdy, Safe, Simple Barbecue Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — With the cook-out season at hand, buy a barbecue that is sturdy, safe and simple, the Consumers Association of Canada advises in its publication, Canadian Consumer.

A person can have just as tasty a morsel from the most basic equipment as from the most complicated, the article says. And there are hundreds of prices, sizes and designs on the market.

"Just as good results can be obtained with a metal grill supported by concrete blocks or bricks over a fire area as from purchased equipment," the association says before launching into its suggestions for buying barbecue sets.

The consumer should look for:

—A heavy metal firebox that is rustproof.

—Strong supports attached firmly to the firebox.

—An easy-to-operate method of adjusting the grill to the fire.

—Assembly ease, especially

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Abel of Belleville announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan Margaret Martin to Gary Paul Rutherford, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rutherford, also of Belleville. The marriage will take place in Holloway St. United Church, Belleville July 11, 1970 at 1 p.m.

* * *

Previous to her marriage Mrs. Konrad Kapsa (nee Bonnie Lee Taylor) was honored at a shower held at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Audrey Gilbert of Sarnia. A luncheon was held with her coworkers at the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Co., Toronto. Mrs. Elizabeth Austin held a shower at her home in Belleville.

Engagement Notice

Mrs. Sheila Richardson of Belleville, announces the engagement of her daughter, Marilyn, to Harry Wayne Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Brooks, also of Belleville. The marriage will take place on Saturday, July 18, 1970 at 3 p.m. in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Trenton.

Sharon Sweet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Sweet of Belleville graduated from Queen's University with a general BA. Miss Sweet majored in French and Psychology and she plans to attend a College of Education in the fall. She is a graduate of Quinte Secondary School, Belleville.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

STIRLING WI

Mrs. Alex Ford gave the report of the district annual held at Turners with Mrs. Ward reporting on the election of officers at the June meeting of Stirling Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. Harry Jones. Present were 24 people.

Three new members were welcomed, Mrs. Burley, Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Bronson. Mrs. Everett Cook, president, then opened the meeting in the usual manner.

During the business session it was noted that the WI has been invited to a tea at Wellman's and it was accepted. Dishes will be rented to River Valley for a banquet and the old cupboards at the community hall will be advertised for sale.

Mrs. Reid, in charge of the program read "Who is Delinquent?" and Mrs. Foster read "Understanding".

Jobs for Full Time Professional Models Are Scarce in the West

CALGARY (CP) — To be a model in Calgary 4 girls needs one important asset — husband to support her, says one model hopeful.

"There isn't enough work here to keep a girl fed—although she might survive on the Mayo Clinic diet," adds a fashion co-ordinator at one store.

Work is seasonal, rates are low and there's price-cutting among models desperate for work and exposure.

Calgary now has about 30 full-time models—some of whom make a living at it—and about another 200 who model irregularly.

But people who're going to have to get together if modelling is ever to become a full-fledged professional industry, said Ron Hayes, 36, a fashion commentator.

She'd like to see agencies, schools, models and commentators united. Until that happens, a either-or philosophy standards nor pay are going to improve, she said.

The situation here has improved immeasurably in the last 10 years, however, she added. Most local advertising features Calgary models, small stores that have never before had fashion shows are starting to hold them, hotels are showing an interest in fashion-show luncheons and local television is providing more work.

"People are beginning to realize professional models do a better job than anyone else," model agent Gloria Staten said. "Things can only get better."

Most communities have modelling agencies, but everyone says the fastest way to lose money here is to try to operate an agency without a modelling school.

Anne Miller is one woman who tried. When she first moved to Calgary three years ago she found all the models making the rounds themselves.

She decided to take that job off their hands. She'd find the jobs; all the girls would have to do was show up for work on time.

For 3½ years she covered Calgary, "knocking on doors, which they kept shoving in my face."

"And selling, selling, selling," she said.

It didn't work out. Although she says other businesses prosper, she's now out of debt. She admits the agency was "a non-profit organization."

Agencies claim their money back from employers and employees—10 per cent from stores, 20 per cent from models. Stores here simply refuse to pay the agency fee, she said.

"I'm just facing the fact that Calgary is a small-fishy-big city."

The only way to keep an agency going, it is to run a school as well, said Mrs. Hatten, who runs Savoir Faire, an agency and school. She calls her classes on self-improvement the bread and butter of the business.

Many models refer to their business as a hobby. Sometimes it may even cost money.

Mrs. Miller said that a married model with children and living in the suburbs probably loses money on a single assignment.

By the time she pays a baby-sitter ($5 cash an hour), buys lunch, drives nearly to lower her hair does (unknown

Points for Parents

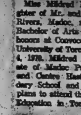
By MARY HEXTON

Mother: "Jenny is so eager to feed herself, but I know he won't get enough to eat unless I spoon it in. So much of the food gets spilled."

Grandmother: "He's only a year old. He has plenty of time to learn to use a spoon."

Let the year-old baby have a spoon and he'll imitate your actions, though awkwardly at first. He tires to help before he becomes tired—and frustrated. Children learn skills by practising them.



Mother: "Jenny doesn't get all the food to his mouth, but he tries, and he'll soon learn to handle a spoon easily. He does fine on finger food, of course, and he enjoys being a little independent."

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Blueberry Pudding Quick Dessert for 6

By MARY MOORE

One of our readers, Barbara J. M., has sent in and a recipe for one of those quick pudding desserts and we tested and liked it. Other readers will love it if anywhere that popular step of pouring a cup of boiling water over the whole business just before baking, which gives the finished product a soft sauce texture.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING
(Serves 6; courtesy Barbara J. M.)

BASE:
One 11-oz. pkge. fresh frozen blueberries (or fresh raw in season)
2 tbsps. lemon juice

BATTER:
¼ cup margarine (room temperature)
½ cup brown sugar (first amount)
1½ cups whole wheat flour
3 tsps. baking powder
1 cup milk

TOPPING:
¾ cup brown sugar (second amount)
1 tbsp. whole wheat flour
1 cup boiling water

Into an 8 x 8 or 9 x 9" sq. pan tip the blueberries and spread to make level. Sprinkle lemon juice over them evenly.

To make batter beat together the margarine and ½ cup brown sugar (first amount) until creamy then beat in the whole wheat flour, baking powder and milk until blended. Spread batter evenly over blueberries in pan.

To make topping mix ¾ cup brown sugar (second amount) with the 1 tbsp. whole wheat flour and sprinkle evenly over top. Slowly pour boiling water all over top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 45 min.

Barbara J. M. adds: "... can serve with whipped cream but my family likes it with vanilla ice cream or just plain." My secretary Betty and I liked it plain. It is good cold too.

NOTE: If using fresh blueberries in season agree with ¾ cup sugar before cowering with batter.

Ann Landers

Invitational List A Difficult Task

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have just gone through Hell Week. I wish I had written to you and asked for advice two months ago, but I thought I could handle it. Now I am writing in the hope that you will print my letter, along with some answers. Maybe you can help the graduating class of 1971.

Do you realize that one-third of all the students in our high schools and colleges are the children of divorced parents? We are allowed to invite a limited number of relatives to graduation services. Sir, to be exact. So who does a person invite?

ANN LANDERS

My mom has been married three times and my dad is on his fourth wife. I like my real dad very much but Mom doesn't even want me to mention his name. Mom's second husband isn't allowed in our home, but he pays for my support, so I feel I owe him something. Mom's present husband is a creep but I have to treat him like he's my father because he is married to my mother.

As if this isn't enough, both grandparents on my mother's side have remarried so there are several others there. To put it in a nutshell; Ann, I have three "fathers" four "mothers" and so many step grandparents I can't even count 'em. I was such a wreck trying to decide who to invite to my graduation that I asked the dean to mail the diploma and I didn't even go to my own graduation.

I realize now it was a dumb solution. What should I have done? — SORRY NOW.

DEAR NOW: You should have invited the people you felt most warmly about and made no excuses. Parents who put their children in such a difficult position because of multiple marriages should keep their own wishes and suggestions to themselves.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Big problem: Last month we entertained several couples in our home. (Most all were executives of the firm.) A few days ago the phone bill came — a staggering $83. I had the calls checked. It seems one of our inebriated guests called a couple of his former secretaries — one in Honolulu. What should we do? — MRS. ? ? ! ! ! !

DEAR ? ? ? ! ! ! ; Send him the bill with a note saying, "You forgot to put this on your credit card."

Miss Catherine McEvoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard McEvoy of Belleville received her Honors Bachelor of Arts degree in French and Spanish at the University of Toronto convocation exercises held June 8, 1970. Miss McEvoy is a graduate of Nicholson Catholic College, Belleville.

Couple Celebrate 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Manley Mitchell, RR 6, Belleville were honored recently at their residence when their children and relatives joined together to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

The couple sat at a lace covered dining table centred with a three-tier wedding cake and Mrs. Milton read an appropriate address followed by the presentation of gifts by Mrs. Gary Ross and Ronald Mitchell on behalf of the family and relatives.

One Should Test His Reasons for Smoking

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

Did you know that there are now self-tests for smokers? The idea is that the smoker who wants to drop the habit should find out first why he smokes. This helps him figure out his own best way of breaking the habit.

Sample questions on the test are: (1) What do you think the effects of smoking are? (2) Why do you smoke?

There are places for a smoker to indicate whether he thinks smoking is harmful to health or sees it as a messy habit. He chooses from a list of reasons for smoking, like: "It's pleasant," "It stimulates me." "I watch the smoke." "I smoke when I feel blue."

Some are stimulated, some relaxed, some seem truly addicted. The approach to quitting differs according to the state of mind.

Self — analysis is just like research. You find out what your problem is, then you tackle it with your eyes open.

There is a limited number of these tests at the office of the Canadian Cancer Society, 25 Adelaide Street East, Toronto 218, Ontario.

* * *

Dear Doris:

(1) Do you think 15 is too young to go out with a boy

(2) When the boy asks us to dance, (my girl friend and I), he doesn't give any other boys a chance to dance with us; he acts as if he owns us. We don't want to go steady. How can we politely tell him that we would like to dance with other boys also?

(3) Do you think it is wrong for a girl to go out for a beer, if he asks you to, and if you know him from a friend?

(4) What should you do if you are out with a guy and someone else drives the car instead, but drives like a fool? — Just Wondering. What To Do?

Dear Just Wondering:

(1) Not as a rule.

(2) How does he dance with both of you at once, 36 time? Sounds like quite an operator. Better introduce him to some more girls and head for the powder room to help him get lost.

(3) Yes, for various. Sprat, and fool's palindrome.

(4) With a dangerous driver, ask to be let out, near a store or telephone. Telephone Dad or Big Brother to come and get you. Daredevil teenagers are responsible for far too many fatal accidents.

Confidential to Meek and Mild: At least your thoughtless quarter - century husband doesn't drown himself in alcohol or chase around after women. I'd say you've been too blessed. Meek ain't submissive — and silent.

Could be he has no idea of a woman's need for romance. He might gape in astonishment if he could know what you have written to me, a stranger. He is no mind reader and may be repeating his father's offhand behavior.

Start talking. I'm sending my 19 - cent leaflet, "Why Suffer In Silence?" to give you the insight — and the nerve — to communicate your feelings.

Wage Restraints in Fall Would Have Cut Unemployment - - Young

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's high unemployment rates would have improved by now if labor had accepted wage restraints last fall, John Young, chairman of the federal prices and income commission, said Wednesday night.

He said he is still hopeful that trade unions will realize the six-per-cent guidelines are in the interests of the unemployed and adopt them voluntarily in time to bring a drop by the winter in the present spiralling unemployment rate of 4.7 per cent.

"You would think it would be possible for these people to see clearly now we all have a joint interest in avoiding unnecessary unemployment and this is the way to do it," the commission chairman said.

During an hour-long interview on the subject of labor's complaints against commission policies, Dr. Young returned time and again to a position that came near to blaming labor attitudes as a main factor in uncontrolled unemployment.

But t the same time he rejected as "unfair" accusations made by Donald MacDonald, president of the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, who has made a series of speeches recently saying labor is being made the "scapegoat" of inflation fighting.

Dr. Young said business, which has accepted some restraints, is perhaps more of a scapegoat at present. And he lit dicated a "slashed possibility" that the commission may move into curbs on the very areas labor has criticized it for neglecting—profits, rents and forms of unearned income.

Pressed on the question of profit controls, he refused to say whether voluntary wage restraints must come first before the commission moves to put further curbs on business.

Labor leaders argue that they are being asked to lock themselves into wage restraint over two or three years through labor contracts, while business is being confined only by the verbal agreement 300 business leaders made at a February conference in Ottawa to restrain prices this year.

Earlier Wednesday, Mr. MacDonald said the CLC will continue to oppose the guidelines as unjust and unworkable.

But asked whether the congress would modify its position if the commission moves to place curbs on profits and unearned income, he was less definite.

"We are not committing ourselves to anything now but we are prepared to discuss anything with Dr. Young at any time," he said.

Dr. Young said labor is reacting to his announcement of the six-per-cent guidelines in Winnipeg last week as if the guidelines applied only to hourly-rated workers. In fact, all incomes, including those of highly-salaried managers and professionals (and including his own income) will also be subject to the restraints.

The commission chairman's linking of the labor attitude on wage restraints and rising unemployment was like this:

Initially, he hoped to hold a conference last fall at which labor and business leaders would have been asked to accept voluntary guidelines as part of a total restraint package in which other aspects, such as profits, might have been included.

But labor leaders adopted a public posture of flatly rejecting wage restraint, blaming the government for badly managing the economy and throwing the burden of curing inflation on the government.

Without wage restraints, the government was forced to fight inflation by applying demand restraints through tight money policies. The result was rising unemployment as companies moved to ease the pinch by laying off workers.

Dr. Young refused to say how long he will wait to see whether voluntary restraints on wages will be accepted by labor.

So far the commission has officially announced only the six-per-cent guideline on wage increases applying over the next 12 months, but a figure of five is expected for next year and four the year after.

The commission staff will be built rapidly to 30 or 35 to run the program of surveillance on wage restraints. It will investigate reports of increases above the guidelines, then make public its views.

Universities Should Not Be Political Tools

HAMILTON (CP) — Radicals urging reform must not be allowed to turn universities into political tools, the president of the University of Western Ontario said Wednesday.

D. Carlton Williams of London, Ont., told administrators and faculty of Ontario's community colleges at a seminar that universities stand in danger of becoming "social service stations," directed solely to scholarship and research of a "relevant" nature.

He said the demand of today's students for relevance and social commitment could dilute the university's role as a sanctuary for scholarship.

The university must preserve its objectivity and its reputation as a neutral ground on which anyone can express his views, he said.

"Concern for men must not swamp concern for man. Each must be there."

The conference, called Threshold '76, ends today.

In another address, Dr. Arthur Bourns, acting president of McMaster University, said universities and community colleges must share their facilities to avoid wasteful duplication.

The colleges of applied arts and technology and the universities must be working partners, said Dr. Bourns.

Fish Safe

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says the amount of mercury contamination found in fish so far in Canada represents "safe, safe levels" for humans.

He told the Commons Wednesday that the contamination level is far below that found in Japanese fish some years ago when humans were affected.

Senators Consider Arctic Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Unilateral action by Canada in legislating to prevent pollution in the Arctic was imperative, Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the upper chamber and a former external affairs minister, said Wednesday.

The Arctic is an unspoiled area of vast potential riches and unique dangers, he told the Senate in introducing debate on second reading of a bill to prevent pollution of arctic waters. The bill has been passed by the Commons.

The problems involved were so complex that it might take years to get multilateral agreement on rules for the area so Canada had to act alone, Senator Martin said.

"The unilateral action we are taking does not rule out future international agreement, but conversely, can lay the foundations for such agreement."

Although it had always been the Canadian contention that the waters of the Arctic archipelago are Canadian, the proposed legislation provided for only a limited form of jurisdiction. It set certain standards and regulation to which the world's ships desiring to enter the area must adhere in order to prevent pollution.

The bill prescribes prohibitions and penalties for the deposit of waste in arctic waters or on the islands or mainland under conditions where waste might enter these waters.

It would establish shipping safety control zones where ships would have to comply with a series of technical requirements.

To meet unforseen pollution incidents, the bill would impose civil liability on the polluter and set out procedures for recovering cleanup costs.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1970

Dave Thomson, who is organizing the junior section of the "I Beat the Champ" competition consults senior organizer John Hull before lining up a putt on the practice green of the Bay of Quinte Country Club. Competing golfers will match their scores against those of the Canadian champion in their division. Proceeds will go to aid the junior golf program.

Thousands Trying To Beat Golf Champs

While Tommy Aaron and Marlene Streit are currently leading the "I beat the champ" competition, the Canadian Open winner and the Canadian Women's Amateur titlist are facing the challenge of a field of thousands.

Held in connection with National Golf Week, the objective of the competition is to raise funds to promote junior golf throughout Canada, and at the same time give Canadian golfers a chance to beat the best in their field.

Each contestant pays a registration fee of one dollar and must better the score shot by the champions at the London Hunt and Country Club, June 5.

Senior men will be matching their net score against the one turned in by Aaron at the London course. Women golfers will use the same formula to attempt to beat Marlene Stewart Streit's mark of 77.

Junior golfers will match their net score against the net total of the male and female Canadian junior champions.

Junior golfers will match their net score against the net total of the male and female Canadian junior champions.

Dale Talkin, who also performs as a member of the Toronto Marlboro Junior A hockey team, has a net mark of 79 for would-be champs to shoot at. while Lisa .King's net score was 84.

Bay of Quinte Country Club member John Hull is organizing the senior event and reports that already about 25 local golfers have registered for the competition.

"It's a different kind of tournament than the usual one," he claims, "because you know beforehand what total you have to beat to win. I guess you could say that there's some added pressure."

Last year, about a half-dozen Belleville golfers were able to earn the "I beat the champ" golf bag towel and free subscription to Golf Canada Magazine, that goes with beating the required total.

Hull points out one of the difficulties in beating the champions. "Most members haven't played enough rounds to determine their handicap solely from this year," he claims, "so they are forced to use scores from late last summer, when they were playing their best. It means you have to shoot pretty good golf to win."

One surprising aspect of the local competition is that, despite the considerably easier marks to shoot for in the junior section, registration is lagging far behind that of the seniors.

Policeman Available to Mo-Hawks

by Maurice Switzer Sports Editor

Despite talking as a policeman's life as his livelihood, Maclean Bonnar would just as soon give up the role in a hockey uniform.

"I've been assigned the policeman's duties on the last couple of clubs I've played for, and I think I'd like a change," said the trim six-foot, 190-pounder, a new member of the Belleville provincial police detachment and a possible windfall for Belleville's Senior A Mo-Hawks.

The 22-year-old Fredericton native was "scouted" by Mo-Hawk defenceman Lionel Boily, who happened to be the real estate agent who located him, his wife Mary, and 12-month-old Chris on Charles St. this week.

Bonnar was playing junior hockey in Ottawa by the time he was 15 and capped his fifth junior year by winning the Western Ontario Junior league's most valuable player honors with St. Thomas Barons.

Maclean Bonnar

That caught the eye of Boston Bruins, who picked the right winger as their first-round draft choice in 1967, the same year, incidentally, that Mo-Hawk goalie Steve Rene was drafted by Pittsburgh, Penguins.

"I wouldn't regret it (Kitchener, Ont. (Boston's Central League farm club)," says Bonnar. "I was offered as much money to play in Dayton."

Since '67, he has piled his hockey talents in the International League with Port Huron and Des Moines, where he picked up 32 points in 39 games last year despite sitting out part of the season recuperating from a knee operation.

"That's three years in a row I've had that knee (left) operated on," says Bonnar; "I had cartilage removed from it this time. I first hurt it when I was with Port Huron — you might know, in a practice.

"But I just got a report from the doctor and he says it's in great shape."

Bonnar also has the go-ahead from his OHP superiors to go out for Belleville's senior Mo-Hawks, although he doubts he could work a complete schedule into his shiftwork.

He joined the provincial police in Ottawa May 11.

But his rugged outlook on hockey has led him to be less than satisfactory for considerably longer.

"I always manage to pick up over 100 minutes a year in penalties," the quiet-spoken Bonnar says, almost sheepishly.

And a little bit of aggressiveness goes a long way in senior hockey.

Amateur Draft an Exercise in Futility After Early Picks

MONTREAL (CP) — The 14 National Hockey League clubs move today into the amateur draft in which they will pay a possible $20,000 fee for the privilege of drafting the top junior hot shots in North America.

A lot of money? Not when you consider that Buffalo Sabres and Vancouver Canucks paid out $260,000 for each of the 30 players they picked up in Wednesday's expansion draft in which they were allowed to protect 11.

Each club paid $8,000,000 to enter the NHL for the coming season. They found their way barred to most of the top pros as each of the 12 existing clubs was allowed to protect 17 players from the newcomers. First-year professionals were exempt.

The $18,000 price structure that will likely send top junior prospects Gilbert Perreault of Montreal Canadiens and Dale Tallon of Toronto Marlboros to Buffalo and Vancouver was revised downward from $3,000 Wednesday night.

Now the professional clubs will pay $2,000 for each amateur claimed, plus an additional $2,000 if the draftee signs a pro contract. The bonus and a bonus of $4,000 if the player performs in 25 NHL games in the season.

The new agreement is a revision of the current pro-amateur agreement between the NHL and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. The CAHA, in turn, funnels the funds it receives back to the clubs, which figured in the amateur's development.

Buffalo's Punch Imlach won the right in the first choice in the amateur draft and has stated he will pick Perreault. His Vancouver counterpart, general manager Bud Poile, said Wednesday night he is still undecided between Tallon, a defenceman-centre; Pulle needs at centre, or right winger Reg Leach of Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Perreault and Tallon are graduates of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A Series.

From then on, the amateur draft becomes almost an exercise in futility for the two new clubs and many of the 12 others.

For example, Buffalo, after its initial choice, picks 18th and 29th; and Vancouver, 19th and 30th.

Boston Bruins, who won the Stanley Cup this spring for the first time in 29 years, control four draft choices in the first round, one of them their own, and those originally owned by Los Angeles Kings, Philadelphia Flyers and St. Louis Blues.

Montreal Canadiens are in similar shape as they take first-round choices of Oakland Seals, Minnesota North Stars, and Pittsburgh Penguins, in addition to their own.

The already-weak Kings draft fifth for their first crack and again 31st, with the others following in sequence.

Also scheduled today is the reverse draft in which the American and Western Hockey League clubs draft players from the NHL, but in which the National League clubs are allowed to protect 21 players including a maximum four goaltenders. Each players' costs the drafting club $15,000.

Prominent in Wednesday's activities was a major agreement between the owners and the NHL Players' Association:

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive director of the players' group, said that a change in waiver rules governing players on the 18-man protected list of NHL clubs is significant.

The new agreement says that any player who has served two years in professional hockey at any level and appears on a protected list may not be sent to the minors without the team first asking waivers on him from the other members of the league.

An exception will be made when a player is sent down for disciplinary or conditioning reasons.

The annual Hockey Hall of Fame selections were announced with three former players and one hockey executive in the builder category elected.

Players selected were the late Cecil Henry (Babe) Dye, whose scoring feats were legendary with Toronto hockey clubs as far back as 1926; Bill Cowley, a defence stalwart with Chicago Black Hawks, New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings and coach of the Wings last season; and Tom Johnson, another defenceman, now coach of Boston Bruins.

Bob Le Sel of Montreal, a former president of the CAHA, was named as a builder.

Pit Martin, Chicago Black Hawks goaltending centre, was named winner of the Bill Masterton Trophy by the NHL Writers' Association.

The award commemorates the late Bill Masterton of Minnesota who died Jan. 13, 1969, as a result of a head injury suffered in an NHL game.

The award goes to the NHL player who best exemplifies qualities of perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to hockey.

Imlach Admits He's Happy

Montreal (CP) — Buffalo Sabres and Vancouver Canucks now are $8,000,000 poorer and 26 players richer after a busy Wednesday's National Hockey League expansion draft.

The two newest clubs were allowed to pick two goaltenders and 18 other players from the existing 12 teams. The clubs were permitted to protect 17 players, including two goalies, each.

"I'm satisfied with the way it turned out," said Bud Poile, general manager of the Canucks.

"I think I got the best young goalie today in Dunc Wilson. I think he's just as good as Seattle Parent was at the same stage."

Punch Imlach, general manager-coach of Buffalo Sabres said: "Happy? I have to be happy.

"We have two very capable performers in Phil Goyette and Don Marshall. If we can get a few of the draft picks to score a few goals we'll move up in this business faster than you think."

Buffalo had first pick in the draft and took forward Tom Webster from Boston Bruins.

After the draft, Webster was dealt to Detroit Red Wings for goaltender Roger Crozier. Buffalo also bought Ted Hodgson from New York Rangers after draft was completed.

Sabres draft picks from six

ROGER CROZIER

existing East Division teams were: Paul Terbenche from Chicago, defenceman Jim Watson from Detroit, Marshall and defenceman Al Hamilton from New York and goaltender Ricky Ferguson, defenceman Francois Lacombe from Montreal Canadiens. They did not

OTTAWA (CP) — Russ Jackson, retired star quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders, is a free agent through a club oversight. The football club apparently failed to send Jackson a routine form that would make his Ottawa property this year if he came out of retirement. The club unaccountably missed the June 1 deadline. This means that any other Canadian Football League club could sign Jackson for 1970 if he wants to play again, without dealing with Ottawa. Although Jackson has agreed to play in the Ottawa Touch Football here July 3, he has been otherwise adamant that his retirement is final.

Italy, England Under World Cup Gun

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The preliminary round-robin of World Cup soccer competition winds up with four games today — and the aspirations of eight of the 16 teams are riding on the outcome.

Italy and defending champion England are among the soccer giants whose advance to the quarter-finals hang in the balance.

Brazil, the Soviet Union, Uruguay, West Germany and Peru have clinched places in Sunday's sudden-death quarter-finals. Three teams—El Salvador, Bulgaria and Morocco—are definitely out.

Eight teams have a chance to fill the three undecided quarter-final spots: England, Italy, Mexico, Belgium, Sweden, Israel, Czechoslovakia and Romania. The fate of Sweden and Romania, which have completed their three games in round-robin play, depends on what other teams do.

On Wednesday, West Germany got three goals from Gerhard Muller to beat Peru 3-1 and clinch top spot in Group IV, with Peru second; Sweden matched a 1-0 win in Group II over Uruguay; the Russians went to the top of Group I with five points by beating El Salvador 3-0, and Brazil grabbed its third straight victory in Group III, downing Romania 3-2, with Pele getting two goals.

Today's schedule: Belgium vs. Mexico; Italy vs. Israel; Czechoslovakia vs. England; Morocco vs. Bulgaria.

Two teams advance from each group.

Belgium must win its Group I game to qualify. Mexico needs only a draw in the game before a huge home crowd in Aztec Stadium which will look upon a defeat as a national disaster.

In Group II, Uruguay has clinched either first or second place with three points from three games. Italy must get at least a draw with Israel's amateurs to be certain of a quarter-final place.

Standings in the four groups of round-robin World Cup soccer after Wednesday's matches:

Mead Johnson Walks Into First

Mead Johnson "walked" into sole possession of first place in the Industrial Softball League with a 20-12 win over Deloro Stellite, while bases on balls were costing the Intelligencer a 10-6 loss to Union Carbide.

Intel starter Ron Culloden allowed only six hits in the five and two-thirds innings he worked, but fanned 10 free passes. Dave Feeney finished up allowing two hits and no walks.

Ken Osborne hurled the win, giving up nine hits, walking five and striking out four.

A four-run rally by the losers in the top of the seventh fell just short after Union Carbide had built up a five-run lead at the end of one inning of play.

Dorsa led the winners with three singles, while Ron High had a homer and Wayne Brown a triple. Other safeties went to Garnet Bird, Bill Barberstock and Ray Lucas.

Bill Hoard was the top batter for the Intell with three base hits, while Ron Culloden and Harold Redquist each had a pair.

Mead Johnson and Deloro Stellite banged out a total of 30 hits as the new league leaders took a 30-12 decision from Deloro.

Steve Wicks and Larry Marshall worked on the mound for the winners allowing 19 hits, walking one and striking out 11 batters. Paul Trumpour and P. Switzer took the loss as they gave up 26 hits and seven walks, while fanning 11.

Reg Bennett had two triples and a single for Mead Johnson, while Blaine Young and Percy Greenwood each tripled and added two singles. Ray Tickle was good for three doubles with Marshall adding a homer and triple.

Wayne Cosby rounded two triples and a pair of base hits for the losers. Paul Trumpour had a double and two singles and Dennis Lane chipped in a triple and single.

Dairy Queens No Treat

The Dairy Queen proved to be anything but a treat to Artistic Ladies wear, last night, as they won their Women's Softball League contest 7-1.

Barb Brendzer went the distance for the winners, fanning six batters and packing the team batting attack with three singles.

Susan Morton took the loss, throwing third strikes past four Dairy Queen hitters.

Cathy Brown homered in a winning cause, while Beth Palmer and Barb McCracken each had doubles. Lois Papke counted the only Artistic run.

Trenton Bantams Taking Lumps

Belleville bantam baseballers continued their domination over their Trenton counterparts as the West Hill bantams took a 10-7 decision from Gilbert Hotel, while the East Hill team buried Trenton Lions Club 11-1.

Ron McTaggert pitched the win for West Hill allowing 12 hits, walking two and striking out eight. Jim Baker, Jim Conley and Curtis McLean all saw action on the losers' mound.

David Drake homered for Belleville, while Ron McTaggert had a triple and two singles. Terry Madden added a pair of doubles and Don McTaggert an equal count of singles.

For the Gilbert, Curtis McLean had a home run, while Don Armstrong added three hits and Harold Roberts a pair.

Tom Coughlin and Pat McKenny pitched two - hit ball in leading the Belleville East Hill team to their lopsided win. Jim McGeechy was shelled for 15 hits and 11 walks for the Lions Club.

Leading the Belleville attack were Greg Bradshaw and Tom Coughlin with three singles apiece, while Ken Kerik, Peter Britt and Wally Dumond had two each.

Jim McGeechy and Peter Yates collected the only Trenton hits.

In tyke play, Harvey's Hamburgers won a 14-11 hitting contest over Alhambra 199.

Mike Burke and Terry Kingman burled the win with 15 strikeouts between them, with Billy Sills and Gary Stapely taking the loss.

Mike Burke added his pitching with a triple and two singles followed by Andy Lupenette with a double and single and Jeff Kingsman with a pair of base hits.

Greg McEachern tripled and Marty Henderson had a double for the losing Alhambra team.

Mahoney's tadpoles got 19-strikeout pitching from Wayne Deighton and Shawn Mulroney to lead them to a 12-3 win over Crawford Metals. Mark Carson and Curtis Labelle were tagged with the loss.

Shawn Mulroney had a field day for the winners with a grand slam homer and three singles. Larry Deighton had a triple and single and Wayne Deighton singled. Shawn McDonell with two hits and Brian Green with one collected the losers' safeties.

O'Neill Keeps Parsons Ship Afloat

John O'Neill showed why he is captain of the Parsons soccer team scoring with only three minutes remaining to give his club a 3-2 win over Belleville Eagles in their Bay of Quinte Soccer League match Wednesday night.

Parsons opened the scoring on a high shot by Bob Rutherford from six yards out.

The Eagles came back to tie the game as Peter Hilliard cashed in a rebound off netminder Brent Gallupe.

Mike Evans pulled ahead with five minutes to play in the half as O'Neill connected for his first goal of the game on a 25 - yarder that went just under the cross - bar.

The Eagles came on strong in the second half tying the contest on a goal by Tony Gonsalves and preventing Parsons from gaining control of the game. Only some fine work by the winners' defence prevented the Eagles from pulling ahead.

O'Neill scored his winner on a passing play from Peter Koutsoulis and Lloyd Rose.

Graham Forster was a standout on the Parsons' defence, while forward Tony Gonsalves played a strong game for the Eagles.

Penguins Swat United

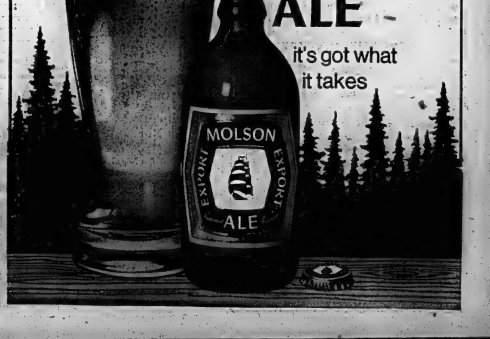
The peewee Penguins were still big enough to squash the peaky Belleville United Mosquitoes, taking a 4-3 Belleville Minor Soccer League win last night.



Glen Woodley paced the Penguins with a pair of goals, while Ross McLeod and John Ross added singles.

Mike Evans pulled two goals for the losers with Tony Meagher getting the other.

Pepitone Thought Lineup Was Upside Down

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joe Pepitone couldn't believe it when Houston Astros manager Harry Walker put his name at the top of the batting order.

"When I saw my name there, I thought he had the lineup upside down," Pepitone said Wednesday night after clouting a first-inning grand-slam homer that led the Astros to a 5-3 triumph over New York Mets.

"But after tonight, I want to stay there."

Pepitone also led off Tuesday night, the first time he had ever batted there in his major league career, which included a tour with New York Yankees.

In other National League games, Cincinnati Reds rolled to their fifth straight victory, 7-0 over Montreal Expos, Atlanta Braves downed Philadelphia Phillies 5-1, San Diego Padres outslugged Chicago Cubs 11-7, Los Angeles Dodgers stopped St. Louis Cardinals 4-2 and San Francisco Giants topped Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

Pepitone, a 29-year-old first baseman-outfielder, capped a five-run fourth inning explosion off Mets' pitcher Nolan Ryan to snap Houston's four-game losing streak.

The home run was Pepitone's 12th of the season and gave him 34 runs batted in to go with his .321 batting average.

The Reds, winning for the 10th time in 11 starts, threaten to make a runaway of the West Division race with their 10-game lead over runner-up Atlanta.

Basford Asks Help to Cut Drug Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Basford proposed Wednesday several ways that provinces could bring down retail drug prices, hinting at direct federal action if co-operation proves ineffective.

Armed with a five-day survey of prices of 19 commonly prescribed drugs, Mr. Basford told a federal-provincial conference:

"I conclude on the basis of this evidence that more competitive practices could lead to significant reductions in prices.

"I am convinced that the levels of prices for prescription drugs is too high."

His text was distributed outside the closed meeting and he later outlined some things he wants the provinces to do to spur price competition.

This meeting provoked bitter comment from J. C. Turnbull, executive director of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, the druggists' professional society.

Mr. Turnbull said the association was refused a chance to participate in the conference. He charged it is also holding meetings on the high cost of money without allowing the bankers to be there.

Mr. Turnbull said the conference agenda "is murky" and indicates government officials may have fixed ideas that, even though unproven, will be hard to shake at a later date.

"People are going to be difficult to convince that we haven't got horns and tails," he added.

In his statement to the conference, Mr. Basford said the federal government wants to act as a catalyst to cost-lowering action but if this approach fails to win support or is inadequate "other steps must be contemplated."

"However unpleasant it might be to intervene more directly in the marketplace, it may prove necessary, in order to meet the paramount objective—lowering of excessive costs."

He did not specify the form direct intervention might take but referred in the next sentence to the combines investigation branch's role of maintaining competitive practices.

He unveiled a survey made last month in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver where prices of 19 commonly prescribed drugs were checked in 10 drug stores in each city.

For some, the highest retail price was double the lowest price. In a couple, there was a three-fold difference between highest and lowest.

Mr. Basford said reported on year-old Patent Act changes which weakened the protection given some drugs against competition. The federal patent commissioner by June 27 will have issued 26 licences for import into Canada of prescription drugs now protected against competition.

Licences already issued had produced "remarkable results," he said, citing one tranquillizer offered now at 36 per cent less and another on which hospitals and the public would save $950,000 annually.

Consumers' Group Reorganizes

SASKATOON (AP) — Delegates to the Consumers' Association of Canada annual meeting today were to consider reorganization plans to give the group wider appeal and its members greater influence in operations.

A report Wednesday to 150 delegates recommended sweeping changes in organization, staffing, publications, financing and relations with similar organizations.

The proposal comes at a time when a promotion by the United States-based Consumers Union has added 20,000 members to the CAC and promises to give it new life.

The U.S. program seeks to increase subscriptions to its Consumer Reports magazine and offers a joint membership with the CAC.

Dr. H. E. English of Ottawa, CAC vice-president, said the campaign "almost doubled our membership in the first three months and there is likely to be another doubling in the next mailing campaign." This would mean a CAC membership of about 80,000.

Cigarette Firms Will Drop Prizes

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian tobacco industry announced Wednesday that after July 1 cash prizes and major gifts associated with various brands of Canadian cigarettes will not be offered or advertised.

Paul Pare, chairman of an ad hoc industry committee involving the four major manufacturers in Canada, Rothmans and Hedges, Imperial, Macdonald and Rothmans, said in a statement:

"We have made this decision in response to criticism of these marketing practices by certain government authorities.

"We feel this action is necessary to demonstrate our sense of responsibility as an industry. It is consistent with our longstanding policy to co-operate in every way possible with the government."

A spokesman said nine brands are affected by Wednesday's ruling. They make up about 50 per cent of the Canadian market. There are about 30 "active" brands of cigarettes in Canada.

Brands offering coupons that may be saved for prizes from a catalogue will be allowed to continue that type of promotional advertising after July 1. There are two such brands in Canada.

The nine brands involved in cash or major gift prizes are: Sweet Caporal, Matinee, Peter Jackson, all distributed by Imperial; Belvedere, distributed by Benson and Hedges; Sportsman, Number 7, distributed by Rothmans; Contessa, Export, Export A, all distributed by Macdonald.

Mr. Pare said cash prize and gift certificate in circulation will continue to be redeemed after the July 1 deadline, but no more such inserts will be placed in packages after that date.

He said he has been dismayed by the recent statements of the federal authorities that resulted in the decision to cancel the industry's current promotional programs.

"They take the view that the intensity of our programs has been deplorable," Mr. Pare said.

Liberals Reject $2 Minimum

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MPs on the Commons labor committee made the easy, shuffling sounds Wednesday before all but one of them came into line to vote down a proposed increase in the federal minimum wage standard to $2 an hour.

The vote came after Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) proposed the $2 figure as an amendment to Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's bill to raise the standard to $1.80 from $1.25.

Despite Mr. Mackasey's argument that the higher rate might put unfair pressure on the governments of poorer provinces, Liberal Terrance Murphy (Saint Ste. Marie) voted with the opposition members. The committee split 7 to 7 on the issue until vice-chairman Rene Emard (L.—Montreal Vaudreuil) cast a deciding, negative, vote.

The committee later approved Mr. Mackasey's proposed increase which will go into effect July 1 if it receives third reading in the Commons before the summer recess.

They Got Equality

DETROIT (AP) — The back-breaking job of climbing in and out of boxcars as railway checkers is what six women won in their fight to achieve job equality.

"They asked for equal rights, so what are they complaining about?" countered a railway executive.

Six Penn Central system office girls were assigned to job actionStickers of freight cars at Detroit-area railway yards after they complained to the Michigan civil rights commission that they were not getting a fair share of job opportunities because of their sex.

They had been employed as clerks and typists in the accounting department at Detroit's Penn Central Stalin.

A freight car checker examines each box car to see that it is properly tagged, if it is on the right siding and if its cargo matches leading records. The job has traditionally gone to men.

Linda Riffel, 22, said Tuesday, she would faint if she spotted a hobo or a field mouse in one of the boxcars.

Eleanor Hanson, 31, a widow with five children, said: "I can't afford to quit. But I don't know how long I can last on this job, particularly if I have to work a night shift."

To Take Close Look at Costs

Education Minister Questions Value of Higher Learning

TORONTO (CP) — The notion that higher education is the answer to society's problems is no longer be viable, Education Minister William Davis said Wednesday.

In remarks opening legislature debate on his department's spending, Mr. Davis said mounting public demand for a clear accounting of where the education dollar goes has forced educationists to state not only their objectives, but the degree of success we have achieved in meeting those objectives."

He described this new approach to fiscal policy as one of six major issues facing education in the next decade. Other major problems involved the costs of higher education, completion of university faculty involving "Americanization" of Ontario universities, job opportunities for graduate students, more co-ordination of efforts of universities and university governors.

Mr. Davis said he welcomes the trend to new fiscal accountability.

"It may well be that for too long we have accepted the notion of higher education as an answer to society's problems too readily and in too unquestioning a fashion."

On the other hand, Ontario's universities "have every right to be proud of their attainments and no reason to fear public queries about them."

But there was a need to ensure that educational opportunity applies to those without financial means to attend university. He said the province's student-awards program, helping more than 70,000 in the coming academic year, was a step forward in this direction. But other approaches are being considered in co-operation with the federal government and other provinces of Canada.

Mr. Davis submitted a table to the legislature showing that 61.4 per cent of the teachers in Ontario's 14 publicly-supported universities are Canadian. The next largest group by national origin is American at 15.3 per cent.

The table showed that the percentages of Canadians range from a high of 69.1 at University of Guelph to a low of 47.7 at Toronto's York University. York had the highest percentage of Americans, 31, and Sudbury's Laurentian University the lowest, 4.3.

Mr. Davis rejected reports that Canadian student PhDs were having difficulty finding employment, the influx of U.S. degree-holders being blamed. He said from 1964 to 1969 there is "clear evidence" that PhDs from Ontario universities had no difficulty finding suitable positions.

He said a study soon to be released by the Ontario Council on Graduate Studies will show that of 1,866 PhD students graduated over a six-year period, only six were unemployed—most of them housewives.

However, he said there may be a real need for universities to ensure that the PhD course is "not too closely aligned to academic pursuits but truly relevant to the broader needs of society."

Although universities take "considerable pride" in their independent nature, Mr. Davis said there are indications that universities are anxious to conduct joint programs.

He said each university has submitted a five-year plan to the committee on university affairs "which indicates declines, limitations on plans for the introduction of programs already available in other universities."

As a further example, he referred to recent agreements between McMaster University and the University of Guelph for a joint program in philosophy, and the arrangement, between McMaster, Guelph, Waterloo and Queen's for graduate work in Latin American studies.

Trial in French Prisoner's Choice

TORONTO (CP) — Persons facing criminal charges in Ontario courts can be heard in French and are not at a disadvantage through an inability to be heard in the official language of their choice, the legislature was told Wednesday.

Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said although the provincial Judicature Act says that "writs, pleadings and proceedings in all courts of Ontario shall be in the English language only," the provisions of the federal Statute of Official Languages of Canada Act are in effect in the province.

He was replying in a written statement to Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto Riverdale) who had asked whether it could be arranged for persons of French-Canadian extraction to have their trials held in French if they so request.

Mr. Wishart said Ontario complies with the federal requirement that every judicial body secure any person giving evidence that he may be heard in the official language of his choice.

In addition, Ontario has for some years provided competent interpreters free of charge in all criminal courts to help persons express themselves in French, German, Greek, Indian, Italian, Polish, Portuguese and Ukrainian.

U.S. Land Buyer Opposed by Nixon

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday a United States developer is buying 13 miles of Lake Superior shoreline in Ontario, and there is nothing to stop the purchase because there is no government restrictions on land sales to non-residents of the province.

"It is the largest remaining block of suitable resort land on the Canadian side of Lake Superior and it should remain in Canadian hands," Mr. Nixon said in a statement. "The property, located in the shadow of Attorney-General Arthur Wishart's cottage, is prime recreation land."

Mr. Wishart is Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Sault Ste. Marie, 30 miles south of the land in question on Batchawana Bay.

Mr. Nixon gave no further details of the property transaction but said it involved about $500,000. He described it as an example of provincial policy which has resulted in American owning 60,000 of 318,000 cottage properties.

In some areas American ownership is even higher, reaching 75 per cent of occupied cottage lots in the Rainy Lake area, Mr. Nixon said.

MPP Urges Holdup On Degrees

TORONTO (CP) — Young people must be encouraged to postpone higher education rather than seek it automatically, Walter Pitman (NDP—Peterborough) said Wednesday in the Ontario legislature.

Mr. Pitman, speaking during debate on education department estimates, said society must be encouraging young people "to attempt academic pursuits which are not appropriate, either to their intellectual capacity or to their real interests."

He said industry must be encouraged to provide skill-training on a short-term job basis.

Only a form of guaranteed annual income would provide the "financial flexibility which will allow the workers to regard the student, not as a threat to his job but as an opportunity for him to engage in some form of education activity himself."

MATERNITY LEAVE

LONDON (AP) — The Trade Union Congress, Britain's national labor body, is campaigning for at least three months maternity leave at full pay for working women and exemption from heavy duties for women at any stage of pregnancy.

No Salmon For Simcoe

TORONTO (CP) — Cohoe salmon will not be planted in Lake Simcoe to counter a growing smelt population because the smelt appear to be doing no harm, the legislature was told Wednesday.

Rene Brunelle, lands and forests minister, said the smelt, which first appeared in the lake in 1962, have created an additional sports attraction and do not appear to have harmed other species in the lake.

Tuesday, he told Donald Deacon (L—York Centre) that he thought addition of cohoe salmon to the lake might be a good idea and would be investigated.

"But, mod as you are about me, I have to grow a stubble now and then to keep you at your distance so I get some peace."

Expo Doing Fine, Except for Amusement Section

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — The Japanese who throng into Expo '70 rain or shine collect foreigners' autographs, practice their English on other Asians, and find their amusement everywhere but at the world fair's special amusement section.

Almost half-way through Expo's six-month run, which opened March 15 and ends Sept. 13, this amusement section, Expoland, is proving to be one of the fair's few serious financial weak points. Some pavilions and food concessions there face serious money troubles, reportedly much to do in Expo's main section.

Generally, the fair is doing fine, with 26,068,800 persons visiting it up until Wednesday—equivalent to one-quarter of Japan's population. Sunday, the exposition, the first world's fair in Asia, reaches the halfway point, at which juncture Expo 67 in Montreal recorded an attendance figure of 25,170,000.

The predominantly-Japanese crowds patiently stand in long lines to see everything from a moon rock brought back to earth by United States astronauts to exhibits of Chinese culture, the source of much of Japan's culture.

Foreign visitors often find themselves surrounded by school children, collecting autographs, whose English seems limited to "Sign, please." But hostesses in some of the Asian pavilions find that these same youngsters love to try out their English on them, apparently figuring Asians aren't as likely to notice their mistakes as Canadians, Britons and Americans are.

At first, some observers at Expo said the Japanese also "collected" pavilions, rather than really looking at them. The youngsters still are careful to have notebooks stamped at the pavilions they visit, but the rushing through pavilions in a mad effort to see everything has stopped, Patrick Reid, Canada's commissioner-general for Expo '70, said.

Some of the problems predicted at the beginning, Reid added, have not happened.

With new roads and rail lines set up for the fair, transportation is faster now than before Expo opened in March, he said, and no serious accommodations problems have been reported.

Although only three-quarters the size of the grounds for Expo 67, the 815 acres at Expo '70 are set up to handle huge crowds, Reid said. The most visitors they have handled in one day were the 627,000 who turned out for a bright Sunday, June 7. A good weekday brings out 300,000.

Besides Expoland, the popular music and drama entertainment programs at the Expo Hall, centrally located on the Expo grounds, have not been a commercial success, mainly because there is plenty of free entertainment to be seen, said Reid, adding "it's a bargain."

Reid's own Canadian pavilion provides its share of both free entertainment, with five movies inside and folk dancing in its central plaza.

Among young people, he said, the Canadian pavilion has been voted most popular. Its aim, he explained, is to leave people with a friendly feeling toward Canada, and apparently it has succeeded, because pavilion officials don't receive queries about emigration to Canada.

In terms of the number of visitors, the pavilion is among the top four or five, and Reid said: "We're a little surprised to be in that company at the beginning."

Those, of course, are the United States and Soviet pavilions, generally considered to be unsuited on every fair-goer's itinerary.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P., Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We have a beautiful baby daughter with a horrible birthmark. It is about the size of a half-dollar, on her right cheek and is strawberry colored. I suppose that is why our doctor calls it a "strawberry mark." It gets worse when the baby cries or holds her breath.

Naturally, my husband and I are greatly disappointed and concerned. Personally, I wonder if it's due to a fright I had in an auto accident while I was still pregnant.

The doctor says wait, it may go away. But we wonder if it wouldn't be better to have something done now while she is still young. — Mrs. D.

Comment: Speaking of being on the horns of a dilemma, this is the uncomfortable position many parents find themselves in: Shall we let nature take its course, hoping the blemish will go away, or have doctors do something? As each problem is one unto itself, I cannot give you specific advice. But here are some generalizations:

Many birthmarks disappear within months or years without treatment. It becomes a real virtue for parents to sit by patiently and "do nothing." Yet, it is often advisable.

One mother writes: "Our son, who is now 8 years old was born with a strawberry mark which the doctor called a "hemangioma." In color, shape and size it resembled a strawberry.

Wisely, we took the doctor's advice and waited. It wasn't easy to ignore. By the time he was 3 years old it had faded to a brownish color, and by 4 years of age it was only a slight flush. Finally it looked like a cluster of faint freckles that eventually disappeared. We just can't even find where it appeared originally. We're so glad we waited."

Some doctors say, "Let's remove it now, before it gets larger." Others say, "Wait." I suggest, Mrs. D., that you have your pediatrician call a dermatologist and plastic surgeon in consultation. Abide by their decision. (Incidentally, before I forget, it is an old wives' tale that fright causes birthmarks. I doubt that your auto accident had anything to do with it.)

If treatment is necessary it will depend upon the type of birthmark. Some doctors use an electric needle to remove it; others, "dry ice"; still some others, injection of a sclerosing solution to obliterate it. In some cases X-ray or radium applications seem to be indicated.

However, Mrs. D., mother nature herself often does an effective job if given sufficient time.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our 13-year-old is well-built, but he is so small compared to his shiplapmates I think it is beginning to bother him and make him feel inferior. Is there any hormone that will help? — Mrs. L.

Can-ma-ta: Experimental studies in growth hormones are under way. However, I know of no medication that is available for physicians in practice.

Why not tell your son (I've seen it happen, so have you) that many youngsters are slow starters; by the time they are 17-18 they even surpass their taller playmates in height. Just be sure that he has a full, ample, well-balanced diet; and that he gets sufficient rest.

* * *

For Mr. N.: Small-sized varicose veins that cause bluish marks on the skin provoke what we commonly call "spider bursts." Treatment is difficult and not always effective. A cosmetic "cover-up" is often the answer to the problem.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 11:

Your birthday today: The path ahead wanders a bit but reasonable efforts will better your way of life. Material reward accompanies the intangible improvements. Sentimental interests find less opportunity. Today's natives often have an unusual gift for making correct guesses, sometimes show a great talent for mathematics.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): During this quiet day attend to your needs, earnings, and health. Simply stay busy doing the best you know how.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Creative ventures fare better. Your ideas run into opposition, but there is no need for emotional defence. Good music this evening brings rest to the spirit.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Check your facts and figures as you go. Aside from the chance of slope squabbles in the family, it's a rather pleasant time. Find or give a small night out.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Contrive a quiet path through the uneven, complex mixture of opportunities and unanswered questions. Change pace this evening and have some fun.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You gain a bit today, amid the general confusion. Sundown is a time to seek a solitary pause. The evening promises much more enjoyable conditions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You now need all the information you can gather. Completely new ventures do not seem to meet with immediate success. Impatience presents you a challenge in self-restraint.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): This is a better day for emotional expression than for doing business. Romantic ventures are encouraged and exciting...with some mem...ies that will last.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): The people around you have their own troubles and are sensitive to some of your casual habits. Share some deep emotional experience later in the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): With routine effort you should produce fairly good results. Avoid quibbling over trivia or answering any heckling with hysterics.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are, as usual, more thoroughly organized than most of your friends. Bear with them, and prepare to give without full co-operation. Personal plans thrive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your judgment is not of the best today, so take a middle course. Family affairs bring some passing moments of drama, an incident of good feeling.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Follow plans already started; let the world's hullabaloo pass by. Pay no attention to rumors or what seem to be quotations of people you know.

Hedda Gabler Least Successful Stratford Production So Far

Special to The Intelligencer
By ROBERT TANNER

STRATFORD — When the Stratford Festival first opened its doors in 1953, English actress Irene Worth, together with Alec Guinness and Eleanor Stuart, helped to round out the fledgling Canadian company in its bold experiment. She came back again in 1958 to play Rosalind in As You Like It. This year we welcome her once more in the title role of Hendrik Ibsen's drama Hedda Gabler.

In a characterization much larger than life it is to be almost unbelievable, she gives the type of performance we have come to expect from her, with a full dramatic range, great power and conviction.

The story of the play is essentially simpler than either the Merchant of Venice or the School for Scandal.

Hedda, the daughter of a well-known general, surprises her friends by marrying George Tesman, whose main interest in life is research into medieval husbandry. The play opens as the couple return from a six-month honeymoon, devoted mainly to George's work.

It soon becomes clear that Hedda is already bored to tears with her ill-advised marriage and in the first dramatic state, determined to do something which she can claim as an achievement of her own.

Opportunity comes her way with the rebirth of her former lover, Ejbert Lovborg, as a rival to her husband's chances of appointment as a professor.

Knowing him to be a recently reformed alcoholic, and spurred more by malice than by any thought of her husband's advancement, she is driven him first back to the bottle, and then to what is first reported as his suicide. Here at last is her achievement. But her triumph is short lived.

Lovborg has been killed in a brothel brawl, with the pistol Hedda gave him for his suicide.

She now finds herself in the power of another old flame, Judge Brack, who also can prove that the pistol is hers. Her rampant egotism cannot stand the strain and she shoots herself.

In this production, the actors serve the play well. Opposite Miss Worth, the English actor Gordon Jackson (seen recently in The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie) gives a superb portrayal of her academic husband, wrapped up in his researches and, until the very end, quite unconscious of the true character of the woman he has married.

Donald Davis is appropriately suave and debonair in the role of the unethical Judge Brack, while Lee Chamberlin convincing in his two short appearances as the ill-starred Lovborg's former mistress. Mary Marshall gives a sympathetic reading of the role of Mrs. Elvsted, Lovborg's subsequent and second benefaction, while Anne Ives, apart from a tendency to drop her voice, is a pleasantly convincing character as George's aunt.

While the acting is commendable, the production is by no means flawless. Peter Gill, a young and very successful English director does not seem to have the measure of the Stratford stage, and the result is a distracting fussiness of movement for which there is little ye no reason.

"The dialogue is often slow, and broken by pauses long enough to lose the attention of the audience.

Unlike the two other opening plays which have been taken on tour, Hedda Gabler is a new production, and many will see improvements made.

Later this season, the Festival will add Cymbeline at the Avon Festival theatre and three more plays, the Architect and The Emperor of Assyria, The Jew of Malta, and Vetalav, at the Avon Theatre.

Other attractions will be Marcel Marceau in a program of mime, Patrick Crean in a one-man-show The Sun Never Sets, and a full program of music. Once again, a busy summer of entertainment with something for all tastes.

SAVE LOTS OF MONEY
BE SURE TO COMPARE
BEFORE YOU BUY

Our prices are far below all competition. In most cases look just a few hundred dollars but many hundreds of dollars. When checking value, determine the size of the respective houses in relation to price.

We have 4 bedroom 2 bathroom houses for the unheard of downpayment of $2,700.00. See if you can equal that any place in town.

Try and find a 3 bedroom ranch split with stone facing on a finished street in town for less than $22,000.00. We have one.

Investigate the chances of getting a 3 bedroom ranch split level with finished family room on main level. You will find the price to be far above our $25,000.00 range.

Check interest rates. Most of ours are under 10%.

For a real eye opener compare our prices for 6 and 12 unit buildings. You can save thousands of dollars dealing directly with us.

COMING UP IN MADOC

Constable Quits Brantford Force

BRANTFORD (CP) — A hearing of 10 charges under the Ontario Police Act against Constable Lester Lolil, ended abruptly Wednesday when the constable announced his resignation from the city police force.

Constable Lolil did not turn up for the second day of the hearing but sent a lawyer who read the letter of resignation.

In the letter Constable Lolil said he resigned "by reason of my anxiety state" on the advice of a psychiatrist.

Father Charges His Son Beaten

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward county board of education and its administrators remain silent this morning on press reports of alleged beatings of a Queen Elizabeth School student by teachers "because of the boy."

The story, front-paged in Kingston and Toronto papers, says that the 15-year-old son of Picton dairy store owner Robert Bates received cruel and brutal treatment from four teachers.

Mr. Bates has charged that his son was beaten with a piece of plastic pipe lined with corrugated metal, forced to chew 40 pieces of bubble gum mixed with pencil sharpener shavings, forced to wear bongs for hearing test tubes suspended from his ears, ordered to pick up 100 pennies tossed on the floor by a teacher while the teacher struck him with a strap as he did so, forced to hold a stack of books over his head while the teacher struck him in the abdomen when his arms wavered, and finally was forced to the floor by a teacher, who left a 3½ inch abrasion on his arm as a result.

George Flower, vice-chairman of the Prince Edward county board broke the solid wall of official silence wrapped around the case since it broke late yesterday to say, "We don't want to prejudice his (the boy's) chances; any chances.

"In the final analysis we don't want the boy hurt any more than necessary and we don't want to start to judge either of his parents," added Mr. Flower. "The way the case is shaping up, the decision is to make no comment. The boy is the board's main concern. We want to do everything humanly possible not to injure him."

The director of education John McNeil still refused comment today. Chairman of the board, Edward Rather, was unavailable for comment.

Mr. and Mrs. Bates laid their complaints before board chairman Rutter, vice-chairman Flower and trustee Dorothea Carson May 27 at a meeting attended by the police.

Picton police constable Larry Sisty was assigned to investigate and Crown Attorney Richard Sheehy announced he was satisfied with the report.

However, he received new information on the alleged beatings in the form of a signed statement from 14 pupils who alleged "unusual treatment." Constable Sisty has since been given a full-time assignment to investigate the complaints.

The Bates boy was taken to a Picton physician by his parents, and the doctor issued a medical certificate stating that the boy was treated for an injured arm but the cause of the injury was not specified.

The boy was withdrawn from school by his parents before the complaints were registered by the parents, and returned following the meeting with trustees.

The lad reported that he was taunted by the teachers on his return and told, "you're no big hero, nothing has changed here."

One teacher was reported to have forced him to the floor by pressure on his arm, causing the abrasion for which medical opinion was sought.

Mr. Bates told reporters his son was so terrified he ran away once, and the teachers warned him never to tell what was going on.

Mr. Bates withdrew his son from school the second time, and he still remains at home. He was notified in a letter from the school that he had passed grade 8 and could attend high school in the fall.

This morning Mr. Bates told The Intelligencer that the beatings began about six or seven weeks ago and were for "minor things that all of us did as children — talking in class, gum chewing, or writing our names on the blackboard."

He added that his son was beaten either in the halls of Queen Elizabeth School or in a classroom before fellow students. Alleged beatings also took place in the school office. Bates said there were witnesses, including one school janitor, to the alleged mistreatment.

Mr. Bates added that the boy was also kept several hours after class for punishment on occasion, and was not permitted to come home before 6:30 or 6:45 p.m.

The Bates family came to Picton in September 1969, when the dairy store was purchased. A "For Sale" sign has been on the Main St. store front since early in May, reportedly the second time this year the store

Key to Body's Rejection May Be Thymus Gland

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Adrien Berdeaux of the Institut de Microbiologie here says doctors may one day be able to control specific rejection of a graft itself without lowering the rest of the body's defences because of specific antigens found in the thymus gland.

"The thymus gland is related to cellular immunity," Dr. Berdeaux said in an interview Thursday, "and we have found that this gland contains specific antigens that are not found in the lymph nodes."

An antigen is a high molecular weight substance, usually protein which, when injected into the body of animal or man, gives rise to antibodies. These antibodies appear in the blood serum of individuals and trigger an immunological response to tissue.

"If the tissue is part of a transplanted foreign organ such as the heart or kidney, the antibodies may reject the foreign matter.

Now, when surgeons perform transplant operations, they must treat the patients with anti-rejection drugs that not only fight rejection of the organ but simultaneously lower the entire body's defences to other disease and infections.

"If we can develop antibodies to the thymus antigens which are not present in the general lymph node system of the body, then we may only have to worry about the rejection of the graft and not have to reduce immune defences," said Dr. Berdeaux.

He said thousands of chickens have been used in experiments related to the antigen-antibody relation in the thymus.

"But we are still some way from applying any knowledge we have gained to man at this time."

Earlier, a physiologist at the University of Toronto reported to the Canadian Federation of Biological Societies findings that oral contraceptives seem to cause fluctuations in the clot-dissolving potential of the blood.

Working with Dr. F. C. Monkhouse, Anne Hellin, the physiologist, found that women who had never taken the pill showed low clot-dissolving potential.

"Twelve hours after taking their first oral contraceptive, there was a marked increase, not further decrease, in the level of clot-dissolving potential," she said.

"But when they took the pill for three weeks and then went "off" it for the final week there was a decrease in clot-dissolving activity.

"If, as some workers believe, a balance is normally maintained between the clot-forming and clot-dissolving activity in the blood, this fluctuation could result in a disturbance in the balance."

Thant Terms Vietnam War 'A Colossal Horror Story'

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) — Secretary-General U Thant said Thursday the war in Indochina has been a "colossal horror story, 1,000 times more grim than the grimmest horror story written by man."

At a press conference prior to leaving this week-end for London and Moscow for talks on the war, Thant said the dispute has been "my one preoccupation" for the last six years. The secretary-general said reported atrocities in Indochina were only "a very small part of this total horror" and added that the war must stop.

Montreal Latest Hit By Rotating Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 4,100 postal workers in Montreal walked off the job early today in the latest in a series of 24-hour rotating strikes by postal employees across Canada.

Adrian Matte, strike director for the Montreal letand postal workers, said the decision to walk out at 5:30 a.m. EDT today was made at "the last minute" as part of the strategy of the Canadian Council of Postal Unions which has been calling the 24-hour strikes.

About 2,500 men in St Catarin and Quebec communities returned to their jobs today, completing their 24-hour strike period.

The rotating strikes are being called to back the demands of Canada's 27,000 postmen, who are negotiating with the treasury board in Ottawa.

Offices Will Find Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Allan MacEachen announced in the Commons Thursday that the government will employ an additional 5,836 students this summer at a cost of $5,500,000 in salaries.

Added to students already employed in the public service, the government will now be providing a total of 17,200 jobs for students at a salary cost of $18,500,000.

Mr. MacEachen said that the government, working with voluntary agencies, is also making jobs available outside the public service.

"In brief, the federal government intends to provide through its total program 26,000 openings for students this summer at an estimated cost of $37,900,000" Parliament will be asked to provide funds through supplementary estimates."

The original government objective announced some time ago was to employ 11,365 students this summer at a cost of $13,000,000 for salaries.

Mr. MacEachen said the government now plans to open 33 special manpower offices to serve students. Students will man these and another 49 offices already operating.

The government would pour funds into defence department projects which would create jobs for students.

These projects would include ground maintenance at bases across Canada, range clearing at Canadian forces bases Gagetown, N.B., and Val Cartier, Que., reserve forces service and, increased cadet training.

The Canadian Red Cross would train students in leadership course for the defence department.

Total cost of defence department projects would be $7,500,000.

Other plans include student travel schemes, language training, Canadian Red Cross Youth educational projects and YMCA/YWCA day camp jobs.

Home Found, Family Leaves Tent

TRENTON — The case of Mrs. Danny O'Brien who has lived in a tent with her four children since June 1 here has been temporarily settled.

"We've been able to find temporary accommodations for the family," said Mayor Duncan McDonald today.

The family's situation was brought before town council Monday and steps were taken to solve the problem.

Mrs. O'Brien, a waitress who supports her four children on a $30 a week wage plus a $120 separation allowance, has been looking for a home since April 15.

Unable to find a residence she set a tent in a friend's backyard.

"At the same time, we received information of two more families who have been living under bare conditions," said Mayor McDonald.

"Since it began investigations, arrangements have been made for housing for this second family which had been residing in a tent between Trenton and Belleville.

The third case brought to Trenton council's attention was in Belleville, Mayor McDonald said.

Both Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott and city manager J. R. Reynolds told The Intelligencer this morning that they had heard nothing about such a case.

"We would have heard by now; but we've received nothing," said Mayor Scott.

Higher Membership Fees Proposed for YMCA

Directors of the Belleville Family YMCA voted last night to increase membership fees in a step to better the Y's financial position.

The $27 for a boys' or girls' membership (8-16 years) will be raised to $32; a youth (17-20) now paying $30, will pay $34; a man (18-36 years) pays $30 will pay $36.

A woman's membership will be increased from the present $30 to $42 a year. A senior man (over 36 years) will pay $26 instead of the present $20. family membership fees, now $75 per annum, will be raised to $87.

The policy of giving financial assistance to those who cannot afford the membership still remains. To ease payment of the new fee structure new members will be free to pay on a monthly or weekly basis.

This means members under 15 would pay $2.50 per month, those 15 to 18, $3 and 18-36 years $3 per month.

A man may pay $3.50 a month, a woman $3.50 and a family $7.25.

The directors voted not to pay the $1,000 contribution to 1st World Service during 1970-71. "Charity begins at home," commented one director.

Directors also voted not to contribute to YMCA National Council until they are in a sound financial condition. However, this will be reconsidered later.

The meeting also resolved that a seminarian be held at convenient date.

The YMCA has a projected deficit of approximately $14,-200 for fiscal 1970-71.

Of this amount, $6,500 is the 1970 bill of taxation. The remaining $7,700 portion includes a deficit of $3,300 carried over from last year.

'Stop Those Dogs!'

Thurlow Township will begin a massive crackdown on dogs within the township, council decided yesterday afternoon at its regular monthly meeting.

A furor rose among the councillors when they learned that the township had received 13 claims for sheep reportedly killed by dogs over the past month.

The township pays $25 for each animal killed by dogs.

Yesterday's approved remunerations will total to $475.

"We've got to stop those dogs," deputy-reeve Borden Forsyth said.

Mailmen Go Back to Work

Postal authorities reported normal working conditions at local post offices today.

"We're receiving and dispatching mail regularly now," said assistant postmaster Russell Poste of Belleville.

Post office workers in Belleville walked off their jobs yesterday at 6 a.m., joining a lightning 24-hour strike which tied up the mails in more than 87 Ontario centres.

The strike pattern, which involved at least 5,000 workers, spanned an area from western Quebec to Northern Ontario.

The Miller's Catch

Frank Sterbe, operator of Canniffton feed mill, with fish taken from Moira River. He told conservation authorities of seeing many dead fish earlier this week and officials now are seeking explanation.

Fish Die In Moira, Cause Is Probed

By HARRY HULBERT
Staff Reporter

The Ontario Water Resources Commission has been called in to seek an explanation for the sudden appearance of dead fish in the Moira River north of Belleville.

The OWRC was contacted yesterday as the Moira River Conservation Authority sought a swift answer to what killed the fish.

Department of Lands and Forests officials also were called on.

Authority officers, speculating that continued hot weather may be a factor, took temperature readings and ran oxygen - deficiency tests in the river yesterday.

Temperatures were above normal and oxygen lower, said an Authority spokesman.

However, it was not clear if these factors could contribute to the cause of death and the Authority requested an OWRC official be sent to Belleville today.

Conservation officials were first tipped off to the situation yesterday by Frank Sterbe, operator of a feed mill at Canniffton.

Mr. Sterbe said the dead fish first appeared in the river on Monday, in the calm water behind the mill weir.

He said he had never seen so many dead fish at one time in the river since he bought the mill three years ago.

Conservation officers followed the trail as far north as Foxboro where Moira Falls were found along the banks of the River Road.

Labor to Act On Imports

The Quinte District Labor Council may picket stores selling imported shoes.

The move is part of an "action program" announced by the council after a meeting in Belleville last night to debate the impact of imported shoes on local industry.

Council president Robert Andrus claims up to 1,000 workers — including many special personnel — could face unemployment in the Quinte area alone, because of increasing foreign imports.

Pickets will be set up at local shoe stores selling imported footwear to "acquaint the public of the problem," he said.

The council also intends carrying the issue to Ottawa.

Next week, said Mr. Andrus, he and a local representative of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union will go to Ottawa to present their claims to Quinte-area MP's "and anyone we can talk to."

IN MEMORIAM

ASSELSTINE — In loving memory of my grandmother, Lena Asselstine who passed away June 19th, 1966.

O heavy hours we once endured.
How sweet their memory still,
But yet how sad and lonely
The world was when I left.
—Always remembered by grandson Ray and family.

ASSELSTINE — In sad and loving memory of our dear mother Lena Maud Asselstine who passed away June 19, 1966.

We think of her in silence,
We miss her more as years,
But many silent tears are shed,
That only God sees.
We left behind aching hearts,
That loved you most sincere.
We never did, nor never will,
Forget you mother dear.
—Lovingly remembered by son Walter daughters Gladys and Olive, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

HILL — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away June 19, 1968.
We cherish memories of Dad,
Who was so kind and true,
And loved by our loving uncle.
And kindness to all you met.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter, Mrs. Irene, son Carrol and grandchildren.

STAPLEY — In loving memory of a dear dad and grampa, Robert Stapley who passed away June 19, 1969.
A dear father laid to rest,
And we will be left to mourn,
His place on earth no one can fill,
We miss you dad and always will.
—Sadly missed by daughter Betty, son-in-law Ken and grandchildren Lynn.

ASSELSTINE — In loving memory of a dear mother Lena Asselstine, who passed away June 19, 1966.
There's a smile we'll remember forever,
There's a look we'll treasure dear,
There's a sad heart sweet remembrance,
There's a memory dead and true,
There's a heart that still loves you dear,
Though unseen still dearly missed.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Olive, son-in-law Phil, grandsons Judy and Philip Foster.

Citizens Join in Litter Lift

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A "litter-lift" day with public school children in Belleville, Thurlow township, Tweed and Madoc taking part will be the kickoff tomorrow for the observation of Conservation Week in the Moira River watershed.

Conservation Week from June 13 to 20 is set aside by the Ontario Department of Energy and Resources for 38 conservation authorities across the province to reflect on their aims, objectives and accomplishments in the management of their environment.

It's a week when citizens are invited to give thought to their watershed and the effect of their existence in it.

For the next two weekends — June 13 and 14, and June 20, 21, the Moira Authority invites the public to enjoy a family picnic or barbeque at one of the three Authority conservation areas parks.

Those are at the O'Hara Mill, "northwest of Madoc, where the early history of Hastings county may be seen; the scenic wilderness area of the Vandewater Park east of Thomasburg, and the Price area on the Shootsmith just east of Actinolite.

On June 15-16-17 approximately 1,200 public school students will be taking part in a conservation school program at the Vandewater Park.

Thursday, June 18 will be senior citizens day at the O'Hara Mill when 32 members of the Sunday Citizens Club in Belleville, 35 residents of Hastings Manor, and senior citizens club members from Madoc and Tweed will enjoy a box lunch and tour the area — mill and old buildings on the site.

Saturday evening, June 20, the public is invited to a free bonfire and marshmallow roast at the Vandewater Park — the roasting sticks and marshmallows are compliments of the Authority.

The program for this Saturday's "litter lift" day will see students meet at 9.00 a.m. at their respective schools where they will pick up empty plastic garbage bags and go out on a litter picking safari.

The children will return to their schools at 12.30 with their full litter bags and receive free passes to conservation areas for the next two weekends.

The 2,000 garbage bags to be used by the litter pickers were donated by Unicel Carbide in Belleville.

Along with participants from the public schools, their principals and volunteer teachers, a boy scout group in Belleville has volunteered to clean up a special area in the city while the Belleville Jaycees will clean up special areas of the river in Belleville.

But litter picking will not be confined to the children and Jaycees. Any adult is invited to join his child and assist in cleaning up litter on Saturday morning.

Youth Planning River Cleanup

Gordon Johnston wants help.

The 17-year-old Bellevillian is seeking at least 300 volunteers from the community at large to cleanup the Moira River and Bay of Quinte around the city.

He's set June 20 as operations day for sprucing up at least 12 miles of river and shoreline.

Gordon, who has been planning the operation for weeks, says he already has the blessing — and support — of councillors, police and emergency measure groups.

His operation will reach from Corbyville all the way to the Bay Bridge Road.

Many people are interested in such a campaign, he says.

"The only problem is that people talk but don't do anything about it. We've got to get the people out," he adds.

Happiness Is A Spring-fed Swimming Hole

Rossmore youngsters sought the cooling refreshment of a vacant gravel quarry now filled with fresh cool spring water, in temperatures that ranged around 85 degrees yesterday afternoon. Larry Denike relaxes on a raft while Ron Lott prepares to dive.

County Building May Be Demolished

The new four - county regional detention centre at Napanee is expected to be completed this fall and, with the phasing out of the present century - old Hastings county jail, the jailhouse and old county courthouse have been recommended for demolition.

Reeve John N. Brown, chairman of a special building committee, has told county council that when the all is vacated the committee could see no useful purpose for the old structures.

However, the former governor's residence was said to be in basically sound condition and with minor renovations could be readily converted to provide accommodation for some of the county's expanding departments.

The committee recommended the residence be left for the time being.

Demolition of the old court house and jail would provide ground space for additional accommodation at the county buildings when this is needed.

Long range proposals could see new accommodation at the county site provided for the Children's Aid Society and also for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit.

However, there is no immediate need as present leases for existing accommodation of these two bodies have three and four years still to run.

Building Goes On In Thurlow

Construction goes on in Thurlow Township as a report by building inspector James Logue showed yesterday, when he presented it to Thurlow Township, Council at its regular monthly meeting.

In April, Mr. Logue issued 16 residential permits for buildings valued at $170,100.

May saw seven permits for residential buildings valued at $128,600.

Youth Image

Modern youth continues to present a contrasting image. Out in Saskatoon, where the drinking age was lowered earlier in the year from 21 to 19 the city's leading hotel was invaded by gangs of youths protesting new dress regulations.

There had been complaints by customers objecting to the scruffy attire of certain ones; the hotel ruled accordingly but this boomeranged as the hippie types broke in anyway and stood on tables while shouting taunts at police.

In the Soviet Union they are having their troubles too. Charlotte Saikowski of The Christian Science Monitor, writing from Moscow, says Soviet leaders seem unable to come to grips with the problems agitating the young, who are being harangued with the same tired old entreaties about the need to work harder, subservience to Leninist doctrine and the evils of Western bourgeois lifestyle.

A strong indication that Soviet youth is suffering from the same lack of challenge as their counterparts here is contained in The Monitor writer's observation that the modern generation is not the same as that which grew up against the background of revolution, war and other upheavals. Komsomol (youth organization) officials feels as a result that there is a need for new propaganda methods to meet young people's interests and moods.

Among some of Saskatoon's youth then, as well as Russia's and others around the world there is confirmation of the observation of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, former president of the University of Chicago that "today's society is now in the position of the little boy who asked Santa Claus for a volcano — and got it."

Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham has put the youth syndrome another way. He says: "The most trustworthy people I encounter are the kids of public school age. They are strong and brave and enthusiastic. . . . By the time they are in high school, most of them have turned into bored and weary slobs."

Most of them? Well, we would disagree with that. Some of them certainly, but not by any means all as our own young people in Belleville have so often demonstrated. The latest of the local crop to come into the public eye are the students of Albert College.

There is more to education that appearance but nevertheless the immaculate and disciplined image of the boys and girls of Albert reinforce the fact that this is one of the top places of learning in Canada. Moreover, it bureaus funds envisaged by headmaster Lorne Shewfelt materialize, so that lack of money need not necessarily militate against a student receiving his education there, so much the better for Canada's future.

Youth then manifests its talents in many ways. In doing so we are reminded that in life there is freedom of choice. There should be discipline and responsibility. In the Saskatoon situation and others like it we witness the breakdown of these qualities, rendering all the more valuable those institutions, like Albert College, where they remain supreme.

Total Plan Sought

Active as ever in exposing flaws in Medicare, Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter has done well to call for legislation to include nursing home care as an insured public benefit.

In the light of the latest revelation that the addition of a home-care scheme would realize a total health care program for the province.

But realist that he is, Dr. Potter acknowledges that financing would be an obstacle to such a total plan and he would like to see backbenchers addressing themselves to a solution. In particular he suggests that the experience of people like former Health Minister Matthew Dymond could be tapped.

In other words Dr. Potter thinks that by utilizing fully the talents of elected members the legislature could be much more of a going concern than it now is.

Picturesque

You cannot beat the Vancouver Sun for pictures. The west coast newspaper is well back in its stride after the recent lockout, with pictures of pretty girls in contrasting academic and outdoor settings. One young woman in cap, gown and miniskirt is seen with fellow students at ceremonies at the University of British Columbia, while another reclines on a handy rock in the Capilano river, under a hot sun. Even a newspaper's picture editor also manages to give one a whiff of the spaciousness of the west coast scene — a close-up for example of yachtsmen in action off the coast and a ferry in the waters of English Bay at sunset. They reflect somehow the sense of well-being and relaxation which seems to encompass the visitor to Vancouver, compared with the rather stern mien of life in this part of the country.

Ontario's Counter Proposals for Tax Reform

The Globe and Mail

All taxes in Canada, whether they are levied by Ottawa, the provinces or the municipalities, come from the pockets of the same taxpayers. This is a fact upon which Premier John Robarts has frequently dwelt in his raised his criticism of Finance Minister Edgar Benson's white paper on taxation. Then it is a fact, Mr. Benson would be well advised to study, most seriously, the proposals for tax reform now presented by the province of Ontario.

Some of them make a good deal of sense.

Take the proposals for low income couples. Mr. Benson was perhaps too much influenced by the federal tendency to embrace universal programs when he threw up his own recommendations. The trouble with this approach, as it has always been, is that if you give something to everybody, rich or poor, you are almost certainly not going to give enough to the poor. Mr. Benson proposed increasing income tax exemptions for all taxpayers from $1,100 for an individual and $2,200 for a married to $1,500 for individuals and $2,800 for couples.

Ontario, instead, would limit the increased exemptions to taxpayers below $5,000 of total income, with the greatest relief being given at lower levels and the advantage being gradually phased out as income rises. Persons above the $5,000 level would receive no increase in their exemptions. In addition the province would give cash credits to persons whose incomes are so low that they pay no income tax, to offset property and sales taxes which are levied without regard to ability to pay.

Ontario has more compassion for the middle-income group than has Mr. Benson. It would eliminate the present three percent surcharge on income tax, which would give some slight relief to this group. And it would introduce a graduated scale of corporation and tax rates to a higher level. Mr. Benson wanted an income tax ceiling of 50 per cent reached at $54,000 of income. Ontario would set a ceiling of 60 per cent reached at $100,000. Certainly Mr. Benson's proposals, despite the reduction of capital gains tax at progressive income tax rates, would penalize wealthy individuals of the rich.

Ontario, however, rejects the federal proposals for dividend integration. These proposals were made because one of the serious taxation problems in Canada particularly with privately held corporations, involves undistributed earnings and the complex methods of tax avoidance which companies have developed to get such earnings — as tax free as possible — into the hands of their shareholders. For the integration program to work personal and corporate income tax maximums should be the same — according to Ottawa, 50 per cent. Ontario's proposal ignores this problem, although it was the one perhaps most frequently raised during hearings of the Carter Royal Commission on Taxation.

Queen's Park should study Mr. Benson's proposals as thoroughly as it should study their own.

Ontario is a little equivocal, too, about the taxation of small businesses. Ottawa would eliminate the present 21 per cent corporate taxation — 21 per cent on the first $35,000 of income, and 50 per cent on the remainder — and institute a single rate of 50 per cent; but it recognizes the need for encouraging small business. In fact, a special committee has been set up by Mr. Benson to examine and report on the taxing of small corporations. Ontario approves of that and "would be willing to support effective measures which are designed to help the genuinely small corporations without honming the large ones". In the meantime it wants to retain the present 21 per cent rate on the first $35,000 of income. Evidently, it has as many doubts about the dual rate as Mr. Benson.

In one area Ontario shows greater knowledge of people than Mr. Benson — that of giving relief to working mothers or single parents. Mr. Benson would recognize for childcare, and admitted only certain kinds of childcare as necessary. Ontario recognizes that most childcare is on an informal, neighborhood basis, and much of it would not be provided if those parents had to give receipts and then admit to the increase in income, which would be taxable. Ontario would grant a childcare $50 tax rate for all working mothers or single parents receiving family allowances plus another $150 if there were any preschool children in the family. This system would certainly benefit more working mothers, and more who are poor.

These are only a few of the different approaches taken by the province and Ottawa. Both are genuine attempts at reform though their goals are not always the same. And the Ontario proposals are probably among the best and soundest that Ottawa will receive. They are entitled to respectful consideration.

Now Even Superior Is Threatened by Pollution

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Talk about pollution in the lower Great Lakes has become a commonplace. We have been told over and over again that Lake Erie is dirty, Lake Ontario is getting dirty and Lake St. Clair is well over for fish.

It is disconcerting to find that some experts are beginning to worry about pollution at the top end of the system. Anyone who knows that water runs down hill can adjust his mind to the idea that some dirt at the far end of the system is inevitable.

If the uppermost and cleanest lake, Superior, is showing signs of getting polluted, it may be a greater worry. Dirty Erie could conceivably be flushed out over a period of years by clean water coming from the upper lakes. If the uppermost lake is not clean, though, what hope can there be.

Most of Superior's great expanse is still as clean to the eye that on a still day a fisherman can see a trout 30 feet down. Some Ontario people are comfortably aware that along the north shore pulp and paper mills are belching yellow pollution into the blue water. Along the south, or American side, other pollution problems are becoming visible, even if we in Canada are not much aware of them.

At Silver Bay, on the Minnesota portion of the Superior shoreline, an iron-mining operation produces waste in the form of mine tailings at the rate of 67,000 tons a day. It goes into the lake.

Hearings held in 1968 by the U.S. Water Pollution Control administration determined that pollution from this immense pile of tailings was affecting the portions of the lake bordered by Wisconsin and Michigan.

Any pollution that affects the American side of the lake, small, sooner or later, affect the Canadian side. At Sault Ste. Marie, at the outporting of Superior narrows into a channel a mile wide.

No American government agency has yet dared do anything to stop the pollution at Silver Bay. The Iron mining company, jointly owned by Republic Steel and Armco, provides 3,200 jobs. The best the American can investigating agency felt able to do, after finding there was inter-state pollution, was to recommend "surveillance," a fancy way of deciding to do nothing for the time being.

The total amount of industrial pollution in the world's biggest lake may not be great so far, but it is a disturbing thought that whatever the amount is today, it will be more tomorrow. Evidence of pollution in superior, closest of all the Great Lakes, creates more urgency for a regulatory body that can unite the authority of two nations, three states and one province to enforce cleanups.

E.M. Forster Dies at The Age of 91

Ottawa Journal

For more than 40 years through all the shifts in literary and critical fashions two books have remained faithfully on the list of required reading for anyone studying the English novel — "A Passage to India" and "Aspects of the Novel." Those are the two master works of E. M. Forster, who died Sunday in Coventry at 91, a great man of English letters both as novelist and critic.

Any writer who survived the revolution in the styles of English fiction and who continued to hold a place of eminence, even with the flowering of Joyce, Hardy, Conrad, Hemingway, and Faulkner, must be assured of literary immortality.

So influential and towering a figure has Forster been as a critic, younger readers may be tempted to underrate his comparatively slim stock of novels and short stories. Some may never get beyond his friendship with Lytton Strachey, Virginia Woolf, John Maynard Keynes, Sackville - West and others of the somewhat self-styled Bloomsbury group. The gossip and the personal relationships are fascinating, but all marginal.

The real Forster is the craftsman of "A Passage to India": how he could write conventional! Someone said of him that he was a great conversationalist because he listened". He was a greater writer because he observed.

His was not the bowl of the tape-recorder; he spared his readers that. In giving them only the distilled essence of his creative and critical thought, E. M. Forster offered them the ultimate flattery.

Our Baffling Weirdo World

Ottawa Journal

Men are living in the future for the first time in history. Change is so swift that anyone rereading a magazine of 10 years ago finds it more than normally dated; pot was a respectable joke which you put things; the pill meant a laxative or anything except what it does now; the word pollution didn't frighten you from even breathing your city's air; and it was still an open question whether men could walk on the moon.

The effect of rapid change fits what Alvin Toffler calls "future shock" in an article in a recent Horizon. People are troubled and often terrified as they see the radicians of change bringing forth strange mutations in all their established values: in customs, dress, manners, morals, religion, art and jobs and work habits.

Toffler points to psychology's findings of what men do when bewildered by random and rapid change: in frustration they grow violent; or sink into careless lethargy. Two equivalents occur to us: the motorcycle hoodlum smashing the mediaval robber knights in iron helmets, and millions of other youths retreating into drugs.

Future shock stuns the Silent Majority who years for an idyllic past where hippies, acid rock and student or Black uprisings. Permanence is gone, the world is a psychedelic light show of dazzling new images, of the bomb, the pill and sex without marriage, computers, computers, heart transplants and predictions of imminent test-tube men. Critics extol pop-op-sop art. The stage goes from theatre of the absurd to theatre nudity. In a world which belabors both reason and the old religions, people seek solace in astrology and tarot cards.

The malady of future shock is not entirely incurable. But if we are going to have to cope with it.

British Election Campaign

Ottawa Journal

Britain has many domestic problems to solve, not least the maintenance of foreign trade when her unions' wage demands remain high.

Beyond her borders, Britain has to find her role in a world where free-medium-sized powers must ponder their responsibilities if the U.S. withdraws armed forces and other supports from danger points.

The Labor manifesto said "our defence effort should not be concentrated inside Europe." While the Conservatives, if elected, will negotiate for a five-power defence pact with Australia, New Zealand, Malaysia and Singapore to help maintain peace in Southeast Asia.

These are important issues the parties are surprisingly silent on.

Labor claims to have strengthened the Commonwealth; the Conservatives say they will foster development of Commonwealth links, believing it can be a force for peace and understanding.

Labor says it will press for European Common Market membership with special Commonwealth interests safeguarded; the Conservatives will demand these be negotiated.

The Labor government already has cut the rate of colonial immigration to Britain. The Conservatives would give financial assistance to Commonwealth immigrants who wish to go home.

The adroit Harold Wilson may attempt to win this election with political rather than policies. The Tories should force him to do something; but that is how there's no real blood drawn.

Big Day At CFB Trenton

TRENTON — Canadian Forces Base Trenton's "Open House" Armed Forces Day, will be held Saturday.

The general public is invited to visit the Base from 1 p.m. to 4.5 p.m. to see many of the functions and activities of one of Canada's largest and most modern military air bases.

The various displays and demonstrations last year attracted more than 10,000 people and this year, with additional and renewed attractions, it is expected that at least 15,000 will attend.

Some of the aircraft available for public viewing this year will include the Yukon, Hercules, Falcon, Caribou, Dakota, Otter, CF100, Tutor, Chipmunk, CH21, CF5A, Cosmopolitan, Tracker, Argus, AVRO696K, and Buffalo and, the newest aircraft, the CC137 (Military version of the Boeing 707).

A Dakota, Caribou, Yukon, H21 Helicopter; Cosmopolitan, Falcon, and Otter aircraft will also be displayed for public walk-through.

...se Air Show portion of the Armed Forces Day activities is planned to commence at 1.30 with several fly-pasts of various aircraft types and operational flying demonstrations. Included in the Air Show activities will be: CF5 take-off; Tutor Take-off; Falcon Take-off; Cosmo Take-off; 707 Take-off; CC30 JATO Take-off; CF5 Display; Tracker Take-off; Yukon Take-off; Caribou Short Take-off; Dakota JATO Take-off; Formation Pass 707; Falcon, Cosmo; Tutor Display; Formation Pass Falcon, Cosmo, 707, Line Astern; Tracker Display; Argus Display; Hercules Personnel or Equipment Drop; Buffalo Para-Drop; Yukon, Caribou Fast/Slow Pass; SAR Dakota Streamer Drop; Buffalo Land, Caribou Land Para-Rescue Exit Dakota; CF101 Take-off and Display.

Other features of this year's CFB Trenton Armed Forces Day will include many equipment demonstrations and ground displays summarized as follows: The Hall of Canadian Aviation History and RCAF Memorial Display, Trenton Flying Club, Hangar Technical Display, a MDU collective exhibition, training-aid equipment, base transportation, yacht club exhibition, photography, static aircraft and radar.

Farm Front Problem

Weevils are a spreading problem to Quinte hay growers. Here farmer Cecil McFaul, RR 1 Carrying Place, follows agriculture experts' advice on simplest solution — early cutting of alfalfa crop. The weevil, in Prince Edward County in recent years, now has spread to Hastings as far north as Highway 7.

Council Hears Tax Protest

The cost of taxes, especially Hastings County Board of Education taxes, drew comments from members of Thurlow Township Council yesterday after their regular monthly meeting was invaded by an irate taxpayer.

The taxpayer told the council that he had two main areas of protest — higher taxes and the fact that the first tax instalment is due on June 30.

Councillors explained that they had no time to inform the public of the first tax due date because they had not received school requisitions.

Thurlow was so pressed for time that they enlisted the aid of Wilby's Computer Service in Ottawa because there wasn't time to get the tax rolls out. It was the first time in township history that computers were used.

Deputy-reeve Borden Forsythe said the township only obtained 16 cents on every tax dollar.

Hastings County takes approximately another 22 cents and the rest goes to the school board.

The problem with due dates belongs to the Hastings County Board of Education, councillors claimed, since the school board wanted tax money in two instalments.

Reeve Horace Casey reminded council that before county school boards were set-up, education officials said they would collect their own taxes.

He said that the tax-collecting promise made by the boards had not been kept.

"We're just whipping boys," Mr. Forsythe said.

He and Reeve Casey advised the taxpayer to talk to his school board representative where the real problem lies.

Fire Decision

The Sidney Township fire captain whom chief John Aquino recently recommended be suspended has been put on six months' probation and reduced in rank to a regular fireman.

This compromise decision by township council was accepted with reservations by other township firefighters.

Charges Beating

has been listed for sale.

Reaction in this community to the press reports has been mixed. Parents of several senior pupils at the school said their children had never reported missing or experiencing mistreatment of children at the school.

One pupil did tell her parents she had heard of an incident involving Donald Bates, but she had never seen the boy punished.

The parent of one of the 14 pupils whose complaints were forwarded to the Crown Attorney said her son complained of mistreatment and "we thought it best to go to the source" — the teacher and principal.

The parent said the boy reluctantly admitted that bruises on his arms had been caused by blows from a pipe "the one described in the newspapers", during class.

In a meeting with the grade 8 teacher and principal, "everything was flatly denied and the teacher said if punishment was necessary, he slapped his students".

"I told the teacher that I understood punishment can be necessary, but I felt this was sadistic," the parent told The Intelligencer.

Questioning their son after reports of the Bates incident appeared in the press, his parents learned that he supported reports of students walking the halls with tied tube tongs attached to their ears.

He said this was "a grade 8 punishment".

The parent said that as far as she was concerned, only one teacher was concerned, not four as Mr. Bates complaint states.

Storm Hits

An electrical storm and high winds yesterday struck parts of Hastings County.

In Tweed the lightning and winds were accompanied by .77 inches of rain.

Lightning is also believed responsible for two forest fires in Hastings' northernmost region. One of the fires burned three acres in Cashel Township.

Strike Delays Fire Equipment

Thurlow Township is waiting patiently for an, opportunity to officially open its new volunteer fire hall, but equipment delays are causing some problems.

Councillors commented yesterday on the fact that some radio equipment had been held up in the United States by a trucking strike.

The equipment is not expected for six weeks, thus delaying the opening of the fire hall and the official commencement of duties by the volunteer fire department.

Mother in Hospital, Still Family Arguments

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: For nearly 20 years my parents have fought and long battle over money, home, TV programs and anything else under the sun. Mother is now in hospital with sadness.

But they still fight. Father doesn't know how to handle the question cheques and will just let the bills run on. Mother writes that she is worried.

What can I do from a distance? Could I ask a councillor to call on them, or are they too set in their ways to listen? — Distant Daughter.

Dear Daughter: I can imagine what such constant turmoil is doing to the sufferer. Yet those two are used to their squabbles. Couldn't live without them!

With failing health, your mother will need to let go the reins, to someone. Her best resource is the social service department of the hospital she is in. Her doctor will talk to her, and so him if she requests it.

And if he really feels insecure, he may be quite relieved when he is referred to a family agency for help with money management. Try it.

• • •

Dear Doris: I would like a cheaper way to send card greeting cards to India and also to Burma. I sent two parcels of under one pound to India. I was charged $1.40 each for first class but not post. If I have to pay so much I cannot do this.

I am enclosing a letter from Miss Stevenson of India. You will see that it would be easy to carry out those used cards when she can use cash post on them. — Greeting Cards.

Dear Greeting: You should have sent them third class as printed matter. This is five cents for the first two ounces, then three cents for each additional two ounces.

I see that Miss Thompson wants all the birthday cards she can get as there is a rule for them all year round and her people earn a little money by folding them up. For further information on how to earn something to pay debts with then for the Christian Compound to supply handouts.

She also mentions that she would appreciate back copies of "Guideposts" Magazine.

• • •

Dear Doris: It seems to me a lot of young people think "Common Law" is just another kind of law. We tried everything to keep our daughter from moving in with the married man. His wife and children are in England.

Now she is pregnant. We would call it bigamy in Europe. I am heartbroken, but there is nothing I can do. — Shocked and Helpless.

Dear Shocked: Not a thing. And it isn't even what is rightly known as common law, in which both partners are unmarried.

This is a term lawyers use. Carries with it no rights. She feels something more devastating than law: public opinion. The custom that requires marriage before children is not to be taken lightly.

• • •

Her children will suffer and so will she. All you can do is stand by to catch the pieces when she falls apart.

• • •

Confidential to Serious Decision: You are asking me to choose? No thank you. You'll hurt these two girls more if you choose to one and the wrong one. Maybe neither is for you. The fact that you can't make up your mind between them tells me you have farther to go to be deeply in love.

• • •

All three of you should be the opposite sex. It may surprise you but I'm wagering you'll eventually find your self more truly in love with a third fourth, or fifth!

• • •

Doris reserves the right to ignore anonymous letters. If you have a legitimate beef, sign your name to your note about it. All names are kept confidential.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "No matter what I say in front of Becky's friends, it seems to embarrass her. I guess teen-agers expect parents to be invisible."

Father: "They want us there when they need money."

Some teen-agers, especially very young ones, are particularly sensitive about the way their friends will react to their parents and their homes. Give the youngsters time to mature a little and in a few years, they'll be proud of their parents again.

Family Reunions

HARRY CLAN

About 120 descendants of the late Mr. and Mrs. James A. Harry, gathered at Stockdale Community Centre on June 7 for their 102d annual family reunion.

After partaking of a potluck dinner, the younger people enjoyed a game of baseball.

While others played horseshoes, many visited and viewed scrapbooks of reunions. There were two weddings, one death and five births since the last picnic. The eldest person was William S. Harry and youngest was two-week-old Troy Robert of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nobes. Largest family present was the Maitland Harder family. Couple married shortest length of time was Mr. and Mrs. David Harry.

William S. Harry treated all to watermelon, while the committee in charge gave the little ones candy and balloons.

More Brides

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan statistics show that of 7,688 marriages in 1968, the greatest number of brides were born in the province and the next highest number came from Manitoba.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Delicious Casserole Dinner

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I have written to you before (from Michigan) and enjoy your recipes from The Windsor Star (across the Border). I have a very dear friend in Windsor who dates and saves your column for me very faithfully every day and (frequently) I go and pick them up and read every one in order in which they appeared. So here I am reading September 1969 about your (first) vacation in Kansas . . . you told about sandwiches from Air Canada's Cook Book. Are they available? I also sent for and received Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, cookbook a long time ago. Thank you for the address. Are you going to have a cookbook? If so I would like to know when. I am making one from your recipes — not too good but I can read it . . . Mrs. Isabell T., Roseville, Michigan.

ANSWER: In answer to your last question Isabell. I would like to be able to say when I am going to have a cookbook. It is being slowly assembled but column cooking and writing and reader-letter-answering are so time consuming the cookbook takes a back seat. As for Air Canada actually having a cookbook I do not know but I think if they did I would know somehow. I will make inquiries.

QUESTION: Recently bought a side of pork and I would like some recipes (for ground pork. — Mrs. J. D.

ANSWER: I have mailed to you two former releases giving recipes for Sausage Ring and Stuffed Peppers. Below is Sausage Meat Dinner Casserole which was given here in November 1964 and which has been popular with readers.

SAUSAGE MEAT DINNER CASSEROLE

(Highly recommended for flavor, speed and color)

- 2 cups cooked macaroni (use ½ half of 7-oz. pkgs.)
- 1 tbsp. bacon fat or butter
- 1 lb. sausage meat
- 1 med. onion, chopped
- one 14-oz. can kernel corn, drained
- one 20-oz. can tomatoes
- ½ large green pepper chopped
- 1 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- 3 slices white bread, cut into ½" cubes
- 2 tbsps. butter
- ¼ cup grated cheese; preferably Parmesan (optional)

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender and drain. Melt bacon fat or butter, add sausage meat and break up with fork and stir until golden. Add onion and saute a few moments longer. Turn into large casserole, add all remaining ingredients except bread cubes, butter, cheese and mix well. Smooth top, sprinkle bread cubes over, dot with butter, sprinkle with cheese if used. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1¼ hrs. A good one-dish dinner.

Ann Landers

Itching Problem Results After Visit

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago I visited an out-of-town friend who entertained me royally. She gave a big party and several of us ended up sleeping on the floor. That night I picked up fleas. This is no joke. I have tried several "home remedies" including kerosene, DDT and flea powder, but nothing works.

The horrible part is that the fleas are not visible and I can't prove I have them. I've gone to two doctors and they both insist I do not have fleas. They say my skin is irritated from scratching. The implication that I am imagining things makes me furious. One doctor gave me a prescription for the itch which I threw out. Why treat the itch when the problem is fleas?

I'm going out of my mind trying not to scratch in company and I am becoming increasingly nervous. Can you suggest something? — NIGHTMARE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MARE: Fleas are visible. If you have them the doctors would be able to see them. My flea-bite expert in Washington, D.C., says it would be virtually impossible for a flea to survive on a person who washes regularly — to say nothing of using DDT or kerosene. Whatever bit you that night died a long time ago. Go back to your friendly dermatologist and stop arguing with him. Let him treat the itch (which was caused by scratching) and be thankful you have nothing worse.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since you are the lady with all the answers, please give us the answer to this one: Why would a very good-looking, charming, statuesque girl (about 5 feet 9), great sense of humor and very popular, settle for a shrimp who is at least five inches shorter than she is — bookish looking, glasses, slightly bald, and still wears skinny ties? They are such a weird couple, people turn to stare. She seems completely oblivious to the gazes, stands up tall as she can and gives the impression that she is proud to be seen with him. What's in her head? — THE GROUP.

DEAR GROUP: Brains, probably. The girl no doubt feels that this man has the qualities she considers important — such as integrity, kindness and consideration. He may even have a fascinating mind and an exciting personality. It should not be hard to understand why a girl with brains would prefer him to some of the handsome, dumb, boring, tall fellows who can talk of nothing but baseball and consider sex a contact sport.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a middle-aged lady hooked on cigarettes, but I am trying desperately to free myself of this wretched habit. I am working out my own system of cutting down since I am not able to attend the Stop Smoking Clinics as some of my friends have done. At the moment I have reduced my smoking to about half. Will I be able to lessen the number gradually until I get down to zero? I am doubtful that I could quit suddenly after so many years of smoking from two to three packs a day. At times I crave a cigarette so desperately, I can think of nothing else.

Do the authorities recommend the tapering off method? How did you stop? — WANT TO UNHOOK.

DEAR WANT TO: I never had to stop because I never started. And for the benefit of you teen-agers out there who think it is smart to smoke, let me assure you it's just about the dumbest move you can make.

Most authorities feel the cold turkey approach is best, particularly when the dependency is complex, as it seems to be in your case. While it might be agony for several days, those who can tolerate it have a better chance of kicking the habit permanently. Smokers who attempt to quit by tapering off usually cut down for a while but they creep back gradually. Before long they are once again enslaved by the filthy habit — coughing, hacking, burning small holes in everything, fouling the air, staining their teeth and fingers and enhancing their candidacy for lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease.

FALL RAINWEAR — This raincoat in Prince of Wales check wool contrasted with gabardine is called 'Gangster'. With shoulders, sleeves and top in gabardine to keep the heavy rain off, it is complimented by a big collar and large flap pockets. This coat was shown recently in a fashion show in Great Britain. READ CWL

READ — The June meeting of the Catholic Women's League of Read began with a tasty dinner at Maple Inn, Bloomfield, attended by 16 women, Father Ferguson, the director and Monsignor J. A. Carley of Belleville.

Following the meal a business meeting was held in St. Gregory's parish hall which was opened by Father Ferguson, after which CWL president, Mrs. J. Jordan welcomed all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Marvin Miles and Mrs. Joseph Hanley gave the financial report. Mrs. Gerald Walsh gave an interesting report of the 48th annual convention held in Brockville recently.

A letter was read from Father Raymond Shannon (who is in Sabana, Grenda de Boya, Dominican Republic) thanking the CWL for the generous donation they gave him to use for charitable work in that country.

Father Ferguson introduced the guest speaker Monsignor J. A. Carley who gave an informative talk on the "Role of laity in the Christian world".

Thanks was expressed to the guest speaker by Mrs. Shannon.

Christ Church Guild Holds Blossom Tea

Imagine a sidewalk cafe with small individual tables and large patio umbrellas to take the sun and a host of colorful flowers in abundance and a crowd of busy people. That was the scene as the Christ Church ACW Guild held its blossom tea and sale, Wednesday afternoon in the parish hall.

Patio benches surrounded by bouquets of summer flowers formed the gateway on either side of the tea room. The main tea table was covered with another bouquet of summer flowers offset by a single pink candle on each side. Two silver tea sets were placed at each end.

The gifts and dolls table had a variety of dolls, knitted golf club covers and doll clothes all made by the ACW women. Other tables from which to choose items for sale were the White Elephant table, candy table, "Green Thumb" table and bake table. Featured at the home sewing and knitting table were embroidered pillow cases, knitted slippers, baby clothes and baby quilts.

A special feature of the event was a fashion show with fashions by Georgia Anne. Models taking part were Miss Bonnie Lawson, Mrs. L. R. Stafford, Mrs. H. W. Cavaller, Mrs. G. T. Carruthers, Miss Susan Fletcher, Miss Betsy Wright and Miss Bonnie Brannigan.

Some of the fashions modelled were a two - piece coordinate with printed, sleeveless great shirt in fortrel and cotton and pull on straight leg pant in 100 per cent polyester double knit. There was also a sleeveless, stretch "terry" jumpsuit with zip front, patch pocki-ts, and reverted collar with co-ordinating ribbed scarf.

The "Toga" swimsuit was a one - piece dress with bikini trunks and overlapping front, in polyester and cotton with matching paisley coverup.

Also featured was a three-piece co-ordinate with sleeveless pant top, back zip straight leg pant and action zip jacket in cotton supercalicoh.

Especially interesting was the fact all these ensembles were washable.

Since crowds are a good indication of the success of any event it can be said, without a doubt, that "success" was achieved.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID WILLIAMSON

Williamson — Crewe

St. Mary Magdalene Church Picton, was the scene of the recent marriage of Charlene Anne Crewe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Crewe of Picton to David Robert Williamson, Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williamson of Belleville. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Robert Stewart and organist was Mr. Robbins of Picton.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of pure silk organza over nylon taffeta featuring an empire waistline, sheer yoke, wedding band collar of Venise lace and a chapel train completely bordered with matching lace. The front of the dress was trimmed with matching lace. Her hat was open-crowned white mohair with floor-length tulle trim. She carried a bouquet of apricot tinted carnations and white shasta daisies.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Joyce Minsker of Picton wearing a floor-length gown of yellow chiffon over taffeta featuring an empire waistline and wedding band collar. She wore a yellow large-brimmed mohair hat. Both hat and dress were trimmed with rosette embroidered braid and she carried a basket of yellow and white shasta daisies.

Flower girl was Miss Terri-Lee Vaughan, niece of the bridegroom. She wore a floor-length dress of white lace over yellow taffeta and carried a basket of yellow and white shasta daisies.

Best man was Ronald Zelonka of Sudbury and ushers were Peter Francis, cousin of the bride, and James Crewe, brother of the bride.

For the reception held at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a sheath style dress and matching coat in double - knit textured tortrel in aqua and white. She wore white accessories and a corsage of apricot tinted and white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a two-piece coat and dress ensemble of navy - tinted summer weight knit, a pink mohair hat and a corsage of pink carnations.

For the wedding trip to Banff via trans-Canada Highway and through the United States for the return trip, the bride chose a primrose and white cotton and organdy dress with long full sleeves, high neckline and white accessories.

Upon their return the couple will reside at 346 Brock St., Apt. 801, Kingston.

MR. AND MRS. GLENN PAYNE

Payne — Hubbs

Asbury Church was the scene of the recent marriage of Barbara Anne Hubbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Hubbs of RR 1, Carrying Place and Glenn Roy Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Payne of Belleville. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. C. R. Wragg, uncle of the bride assisted by Rev. J. M. MacLeod. Organist was Mrs. Meakes, aunt of the bride and her five daughters, Jane, Susan, Nancy, Peggy and Sally sang.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a crystal pearl and Swiss lace gown featuring a stand - up beaded neckline, long lace lily point sleeves and a Swiss lace cathedral train falling from the shoulders. She wore a matching silk illusion veil and headpiece, and a cascade bouquet of red roses, shasta daisies and lily of the valley.

Maid of honor was Miss Gail Bygve of Ottawa wearing a yellow pure silk chiffon over nylon taffeta dress featuring a scooped neckline, empire waist, long sleeves with a tight cuff and a deep V-back trimmed with two rows of Alencon daisies. She carried a crescent bouquet of shasta daisies to match her dress.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Carolyn West, cousin of the bride from Port Perry and Miss Ann Milzel of Owesecon. They were dressed in gowns of pink and blue respectively and each carried a crescent bouquet of shasta daisies tinted to match her dress.

Best man was Don Myles of Belleville and ushers were Danny Payne, brother of the bridegroom and Ronald Hubbs, brother of the bride.

For the reception held at Ameliasburg Hall the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a pink dress of imported Swiss lace with a matching coat, white accessories and a corsage of red and yellow roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a pink silk shantung ensemble with white accessories and a corsage of red and yellow roses.

For the wedding trip to Lake Placid, New York, the bride chose a pink dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink and yellow roses.

Upon their return the couple will reside at Midtown Apartments, Apt. 605, 371 John St., Belleville.

Legislation Will Ease Tax Burden Under Reassessment

TORONTO (CP) — The impact of greatly-increased property taxes based on land valuations in 69 Ontario municipalities will be lessened by legislation introduced Thursday.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough proposed legislation which would help property owners faced with higher tax loads because of a province-wide re-assessment of land on the basis of market value.

Municipalities where the new assessments took effect this year would be allowed to restrict annual tax increases to a fixed percentage of the over-all increase.

And any person, with the local council's permission, could seek a cancellation, reduction or refund of "unduly burdensome" taxes from the local assessment review board.

Property owners in some areas have complained because their re-assessment took effect before the rest of the province was re-assessed—and before the province could institute related tax reforms which would lessen the burden, such as an increase in 8% per cent from 45 per cent in the provincial share of education costs.

The new legislation is retroactive to Jan. 1. Tax adjustments could be simplified because the affected municipalities have not sent out their final tax bills for the year.

In other legislature business Thursday:

—The department of trade and development's 1970-71 spending estimates of $146,941,000 were passed on a voice vote without Liberal party support. James Trotter (L—Toronto Parkdale) said the department's housing policy means "mansions for the few and long waiting lists for the many."

—The committee on education turned down a Liberal suggestion that it investigate education costs, starting with the economic impact of the new system of county boards of education. Education Minister Davis said the Liberal suggestion would fail to get at "the basic causes of cost increases." Mr. Davis said he would meet with one member of each party to discuss a broader approach to the problem.

—A. W. Downer (PC—Dufferin-Simcoe) called the government's treatment of the chronically ill a "disgrace." He said nursing home care should be covered immediately by government health insurance.

—Tim Reid (Toronto-Scarborough, East), liberal education critic, said hundreds of PhDs and post-doctoral fellows in Ontario are unable to find jobs in universities or industry because the provincial government encourages American branch plants and university professors to settle here.

Recommendations on VD Control Okayed After Rate More Than Doubles

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has accepted all recommendations made by a commission which studied causes of an increase in the provincial venereal disease rate.

Health Minister Thomas Wells told the Ontario legislature Thursday the recommendations will form the basis of an effective control program.

He said the commission was formed after the number of cases of VD continued to increase and efforts to control the increase proved unsuccessful.

The number of cases rose from 34 cases for every 100,000 of population in 1957 to 84 per 100,000 in 1967.

Among the recommendations accepted by the government:

—All hospitals will be encouraged to perform routine serological tests for syphilis on all new admissions or readmissions, to help detect the disease in its latent stage.

—Doctors in special treatment clinics will be given whatever drug they believe will be most effective in treatment of venereal diseases.

—To encourage reports of VD by private doctors, the procedure will be simplified to permit reporting by phone, letter or person.

—Increased assistance will be given to local medical officers of health in identifying and locating persons who have had contact with known VD cases.

—Top priority will be given to financing all VD clinics on the basis of hospital out-patient services.

—Improved methods and greater emphasis will be applied to the education of doctors, nurses and students in both elementary and secondary schools.

St. Ola

ST. OLA — Mrs. Grace Martin is a patient in the Stirling Nursing Home.

A shower was held in St. Ola Orange Hall recently in honor of Linda Anderson and Glen Palmateer who will be married in St. Ola United Church, June 20, 1970.

The small son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Pollard, Ginster is now home from hospital.

William Barker is a patient in Bancroft Hospital.

Everett DeFoe is a patient in Picton Hospital.

A meeting of the four congregations of the Cot Hill—St. Ola pastoral charge was held in the United Church, Cot Hill recently. It was decided to have Miss Mary Dougherty, BA, from Val D'Or, Quebec as the new minister to take charge July 1, 1970.

Calls Police Option

TORONTO (CP) — There is no law, but only police discretion, to determine how many phone calls may be permitted an arrested person, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Thursday.

The question of a person's legal right to phone for assistance while in police custody came up for debate during an Ontario legislature committee study of Mr. Wishart's department estimates.

It was sparked by James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) who cited the case of one man, not identified, who was arrested on a minor charge but had to spend a night in jail because he was not able to reach his wife in the one phone call he was permitted to make.

Phosphates Concern Consumers

SASKATOON (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada voted Thursday to seek federal legislation requiring labels on laundry detergent to show the percentage of phosphate content.

About 150 delegates to the association's annual meeting also voted to request that federal authorities release all available information on the pollution effects of poly-chlorinated-biphenals, a product released in plastics manufacturing.

Delegates, in another resolution, called for Ottawa to set standards and regulations for storing meat, poultry and their by-products.

The association, at closing session, also urged that all levels of government make ribbon markings compulsory for beef grades.

CAC spokesman Enid Harling said some resolutions were originally approved as long ago as 1963 and despite repeated urging governments had not taken action.

The Chargex charge card. It works almost anywhere.

Your bank will be sending you a Chargex card soon.
No matter where you bank, you can enjoy the convenience of a Chargex charge card. Pick up an application today.

Here's how it works for you.

You can get new shoes for the kids, tires for the car, and many other necessities that can't wait until payday. You can pay for prescriptions. Take the family out to dinner. It's the one charge card that works almost anywhere. As long as you have your Chargex card with you, you'll never be stuck.

You can even get a cash advance with it in an emergency, at any bank branch displaying the Chargex symbol.

Payments are not deducted from your bank account. You are sent one monthly statement for all your purchases. And pay with one cheque. Pay for the things you purchase within 25 days and there is no service charge.

Here's why you should have one.

More than 30,000 merchants honour the Chargex card, and the number is growing every day. You can use it in your own neighbourhood, and downtown. You can use it in over 40 countries. Your Chargex card is welcome wherever you see the familiar blue, white and gold symbol. Even when the identifying name is different. (It's BankAmericard in the United States, Barclaycard in Great Britain and the Caribbean, Bancomer Card in Mexico, and Sumitomo Card in Japan.)

You don't have to be a customer of any of the sponsoring banks to enjoy the convenience of a Chargex card. Just pick up an application from any merchant or bank displaying the Chargex symbol.

Now, shouldn't you have one?

The Commerce. Toronto Dominion. Royal Bank. Bank Canadian National.

*CHARGEX is a registered trade mark.

MORE ABOUT CHARGEX*

Answers to some pointed questions people are asking about Canada's most versatile charge card.

What is Chargex?
Chargex is an all-purpose charge card sponsored by four Canadian banks, and is available to customers of any bank. It takes the place of cash in a wide variety of shopping situations, when you don't have cash with you.

What's it going to cost me?
You pay nothing to get a Chargex card. There are no annual dues as with many other charge cards.

Payments are not deducted from your bank account. You are sent one monthly bill for all purchases, and pay with one cheque from your own bank. There is no service charge when you pay for purchases within 25 days of your billing date.

Do I have to pay right away?
When you find your expenses unusually high in one particular month, and require more than the 25 days from date of billing, you can budget your payments over several months. There is a service charge for this convenience of extended payments.

Can I use Chargex when I'm out of town?
Chargex is part of a world-wide charge card system, and is honoured in more than 40 countries around the world. Wherever you see the blue, white and gold symbol that identifies Chargex, you know your Chargex card is welcome there. Even when the identifying name is different. For instance, the name is Bank Americard in the United States and Hawaii. In Great Britain, South Africa and the Caribbean it's Barclaycard. In Japan, the name is Sumitomo Card and in Mexico the name is Bancomer Card. They all identify charge cards backed by some of the world's greatest banks, just like your Chargex card.

Will Chargex get me cash in an emergency?
Whether the emergency comes up at home, or when you are travelling, just present your Chargex card at any bank displaying the familiar blue, white and gold symbol. They'll see that you get the cash to tide you over.

Do Chargex merchants raise their prices?
Chargex is as much a convenience for the merchant, as it is for you. He is relieved of the cost of maintaining his own credit facilities. When you pay for a purchase with your Chargex card, the merchant receives his money that same day. (Unlike many other charge cards, where it is weeks before payment is made.) So, the merchant will be happy to have you use your Chargex card. With no increase in prices. Just ask him.

What if I lose my Chargex card?
Until you personally receive and sign your Chargex card, you are under no obligation for its misuse. If you should lose your card after signing it, simply notify us. Even if you forget to let us know, you are protected by a maximum $50 liability for mis-use of the card.

Proposals to Reform, Not Increase Taxes: Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister E. J. Benson has stepped into the debate about his tax-change proposals in an attempt to defuse recurring criticism that he is using tax reform to increase Ottawa's total tax take.

He has promised in a letter to the Commons finance committee studying the tax policy white paper that legislation will include a guarantee that no additional revenue will be generated as a direct result of changes in the tax system.

He also repeated that "the white paper proposals are going to be changed."

While the letter, published Thursday night, might tend to undercut critics of the white paper's revenue-raising feature, the move provoked immediate political protest that it subverts the role of Parliament.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants), served notice he will raise the issue formally. He said Mr. Benson clearly has made up his mind about the final form of tax legislation before the finance committee has made its own recommendations, as required by Parliament.

Although Mr. Benson has denied the tax white paper of last November was devised to increase federal revenue, critics have voiced suspicion that it is.

Ottawa has been in the vanguard of such critics. The province has challenged the federal estimate of the increase in revenue that would be generated by proposed changes in the system of taxing personal and corporate incomes along with the introduction of a tax on capital gains.

The white paper estimates that the proposed changes, to be introduced in steps over five years, would achieve added $630,000,000 in federal revenue of about $12,966,000,000 last year had the new system been fully in force then.

Quebec and Ontario, after offering their own calculations, have indicated they also fear the federal tax proposals would lead to usurp for Ottawa most future growth in direct income tax, thereby assuring the federal government of the ship-hand in spending and political power within Confederation.

Mr. Benson said in his letter to Herbert Clemmond, chairman of the Commons finance committee, that it had become difficult to debate the essential tax-change proposals because of "the unusual climate" caused by allegations that the white paper's hidden purpose was to shift resources to government from private enterprise.

The government has now decided to take a further step to make it crystal clear that its intention is to reform the tax system, not to increase taxes.

"The legislation that the government proposes to the House of Commons to implement the tax reform measures will include a fixed schedule of declining income tax rates for each of the first five years of its operation."

The rate will be designed to ensure that "the revenues produced under the new system will not exceed the total that would be produced if the present system remained in effect."

Benson suggested the dispute about the increased revenue to be generated by tax reform would become academic by the time final legislation is introduced—expected to be next year.

He said the white paper proposals are going to be changed. The changes will "substantially reduce" the amount of revenue gain originally estimated. The changes would also affect the degree of rate reductions that would be necessary during the first five years to achieve changes with an over-all neutral impact on revenue.

He added that normal changes in federal revenue requirements could mean routine changes in tax rates, but the tax reform itself would not generate extra revenue.

Egg Black Marketing Lowering Prices

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Black marketing of eggs in Quebec is having a doubly severe effect on Ontario producers and shippers, Harvey Beaty, chairman of the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers' Marketing Board said here Thursday.

Mr. Beaty, in an interview, was commenting on the three-week-old egg import restriction imposed by the Quebec Federation of Egg Producers. Ontario normally over-produces by approximately 26 per cent, mainly to supply the needs of the Quebec market.

Negotiations to arrange new agreements between shippers and the Quebec board are being held up by the development of black market sales, he said. Not only are contracts being delayed, but markets are being cut even further by these sales which are below the new Quebec prices.

Mayors Don't Want Legal Pot

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities will ask the federal government not to draft legislation making marijuana and hashish more easily available and minimizing penalties for trafficking in or illegal use of the drugs.

The federation also dealt with resolutions concerning control of firearms, education and the role of municipal government, under a new constitution, at its concluding sessions Thursday.

The non-medical use of drugs is "more definitely" a problem of municipalities, and the other levels of government have not provided the resources to deal with it," Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton said.

Resolutions called for the introduction of a comprehensive federal drug education program and financial assistance to fight drug abuse by young people.

A resolution requesting Ottawa to initiate discussions with the provinces to co-ordinate assessment of school credits so students can receive full credit for completed courses should they move to another province was adopted.

The original resolution had urged standardization of school curriculums.

A resolution seeking firm federal control of firearms was defeated after heated debate.

One delegate said despite strict controls in the United States, criminals still found access to firearms while sportsmen suffered.

The mayors suggested the question of the status of municipal governments as another jurisdiction with powers and responsibilities appropriate to their role in Canadian public life should be considered in redrafting the Canadian constitution.

The motion asked that the federal and provincial governments consider municipal governments equal partners in the process of redrafting the constitution.

In questions directly or indirectly involved with local government, the provincial governments should seek the advice of municipalities.

Rapist-killer at Large Terrorizes Big Area

THORNTON, Ont. (CP) — An atmosphere of fear and suspicion exists these days in this and other small communities within a 30-mile radius of where two women were raped and murdered in their homes last week.

It is evidenced by the locked doors while husbands are away, the suspicious surveillance of any approaching stranger and the loaded rifle a young housewife keeps in her laundry basket when she goes outside to hang up the family wash.

It's an atmosphere that is likely to exist as long as police are searching for a man they describe as probably psychopathic and likely to kill again.

The first killing occurred on May 6 in Cormley, about 30 miles southeast of here and about 20 miles northeast of Toronto. The victim was Doreen Moorby, 34, the wife of a schoolteacher. She was raped and shot to death.

On May 31, Helen Ferguson, 37, also the wife of a schoolteacher, met a similar fate in her Palgrave, home, about 25 miles southwest of here.

The only description police have of the killer was provided by Mrs. Ferguson's nine-year-old son Dale who saw the man go by his bedroom door after his mother was shot.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For June 13

Your birthday today: Simplicity is now your true mark; goal. Whatever is no longer needed should be left behind. Any unnecessary clutter will be overwhelming through this year you will burden the next 10 years. Influences include lessened pressure, change; be prepared to go with the large; reality. Today's natives generally have good skill for calculation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your considerable knowledge of men and dress associates now makes all the difference for the future. Performance is now of quite accurate in your estimate of the situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Your new encounter pressure to do too much, too soon. There is little guesswork in other hands or create travel. Your security is bonded by others.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The earlier hours are complex, with too many things going on at once. Matters quickly settle down and are rather satisfying. You may be tempted to splurge for some gadget.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Certain differences now begin to clear the air. Cope with them in such a way that they can be ended quickly. Love life is favorable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 23): Haste, particularly in travel, brings complications which take away the fun. Aside from this, personal ventures go well. Expect certain modesty in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 — Sept. 23): The day runs smoothly enough. Make changes only after you have assessed the probabilities and understanding the general pessimism.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 — Oct. 23): You still must pace your efforts to give others time to see where you are going and to catch up with you. Rushing people into things just doesn't work today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24—Nov. 22): Secrets are almost certain to leak out. Avoid doing anything that you would not want known; do not assume that your whole secret is out, but discover no further information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 — Dec. 21): You are confronted with the results of your own treatment of your friends. Find some activity that gives you a chance to work off internal tensions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your day is apt to be strenuous without going on new routes. Your mate and associates require tactful consideration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your special temptation is to rush and perhaps overlook a critical detail that may change everything. Things taper off later, and the evening is happy.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Apart from early indecision, the day flows smoothly. Line up your budgets, vacation plans, and the like. Correspondence may be important.

Smokey Valley Going Stronger at 11

By ERIC ERICKSON
Staff Sportswriter

Smokey Valley, a horse with "character," has overcome obstacles that would have floored many of his two-legged stablemates; character and at the ripe old age (for a horse) of 11 is making a racing comeback for new owner Norm Edwards.

"He's not really very fast," says his new owner, "but he wants to win. When some of the others quit, he keeps going. He's got a lot of character."

At the time Edwards purchased the bay gelding from Bruce Kemp this season, the horse had definitely seen better times, winning only $200 last year and coming off a number of leg injuries.

The racing career has responded with a remarkable comeback for his new owner, already exceeding his last year's winning total. In five starts this season, he has crossed the finish line in first spot twice and come third in another two races.

Standing about 16 hands high and reasonably muscled for a harness horse, the pacer gets his stamina from the famed Hanover blood - line from which he descends.

He was sired by Titan Hanover out of Tiffany Hanover and has a best ever time of 2:16.4 on the sulk. His top mark this season has been a 2:18.4

As long as Smokey Valley can stay away from crippling injuries he can look forward to another three years of racing competition before being forced to retire by a rule that bars horses over the age of 14 from competing.

Edwards' lucky filly will be one of the 72 entries which will answer the starting call for Saturday's Quinte Riding and Driving Club card. Qualifying races will begin at 7 p.m. with post time for 7:45 for the regular fair-grounds event.

Rollins Take 10 to Win

It took Rollins Construction twice as long as the Ellis Juniors but the two top teams in the Commercial Softball League each pulled a step further ahead of the rest of the field.

Rollins Construction scored in the bottom of the 10th inning to take a 6-5 decision over Stinson's, while the Juniors whitewashed Corby's 6-0 in a game that was called after five innings because of the 10:30 curfew.

A double by centrefielder Ralph Plaxe and Wes Way's RBI-single in the bottom of the third extra inning gave the win to reliever Wayne McConnell, who had worked the first six innings. Dave Soles started, but gave way to Boomhower after only four batters. The win allowed 11 hits, walking seven and fanning 10.

Harold Workhoven went the route for the losers, giving up 12 hits. He issued two free passes and fanned one batter.

Stinsons opened the scoring in the first inning as Larry Soule singled, Dwight Rathwell doubled and Lyle Thompson chased both runners home with a single. Two walks and a base hit by Paul Stinson produced two more runs before Boomhower halted the scoring.

The winners came right back to score three runs in the bottom of the inning on an error, singles by Skip Belch and Ralph Plaxe and Bob Rollenfellow's sacrifice.

Skip Belch was the big gun for Rollies batting three singles and a double. Ralph Plaxe had three hits, while Brian Smith singled and crashed long two-run homer to left field in the ninth inning.

Paul Stinson drove in three runs on as many hits to pace the losers' attack. Larry Soule, Martin Walsh and Bob Jones all had a pair of safeties.

| Rollins' | 300 | 102 | 000 |

The Ellis Juniors counted four times in the first inning which was all Ted Walls needed to hurl his club to their seventh win in eight contests, after losing the season opener.

Hits by Steve Ling, Craig Rump, Ted Walls and Wayne McTaggert, coupled with a pair of walks, did the first-inning damage.

'Good Work Old-Timer'

Veteran pacer Smokey Valley gets some words of encouragement from owner Norm Edwards. The 11-year-old gelding has made a racing comeback this season, winning two of his five starts. The Quinte Riding and Driving Club card gets under way Saturday night at 7:45 p.m. and will have a field of 72 entries.

Harvey's Relish 15-12 Win Over Orphan Tykes

Harvey's Hamburg's took a 15-12 decision from the Orphan tykes in the only minor baseball contest slated for last night.

Mike Burke and Andy Lapointe hurled the win fanning 15 batters and walking five.

Peter Hall and Dan Andrews had seven walks and nine strikeouts in a losing effort.

Andy Lapointe had two singles and a double for the winners with Terry Kingsman picking up three singles and Mike Burke a double and single.

Peter Hall contributed two doubles to the Orphan cause, while John Murphy singled twice and Gordie Green added a triple.

Sandra No Santa

Sandra Claus was no "Santa Claus" as she limited Weese's Greenhouse to only two runs as Cozy Cold Storage's Women's Softball League declision last night.

Cozy's winning hurler walked only two batters and fired third strikes past a dozen. Dora Barbershack was the loser, walking one and fanning eight.

Verna Hill led the winners' attack with two home runs and a single. Sandra Francis had a triple and double, while Pat Robson added a triple.

Printers Only Need One Inning

The Intelligencer jumped into a first place tie with Mead Johnson in the Intersteel Softball League last night with a 4-3 win over the CN Combines, while the CN Turbos moved within striking distance of the leaders by downing the Morch Mariners 8-2.

Four runs in the third inning were good enough to give Dale Thiell his win over the Combines as Dave Feeney threw a five-hitter for the win. He issued six walks and struck out seven batters.

Frank "Junior" Day took the loss, giving up 10 hits, fanning three and not walking a batter.

Merv Thompson led the winners batting attack with a homer and single, with Randy Johnstone adding a double and single and Dave Feeney picking up a pair of safeties.

Junior Day homered and singled in a losing effort, while Conway had a circuit blast.

Rod Bennett limited Morchs to only four hits, while his teammates pounded out 13 in the Turbos 8-3 win. Will Bolpi took the loss for the Mariners.

Milt Bell, A. Howard, Brian Plumbe, Zane Plumbe and Bob Duvall each had two hits for the winners.

Hitting safely for Morch's were Ray Marsh, Cal Gainforth, Clint Halliday and Will Bolpi.

Post Office batters were striking UIC pitching as they came up with 19 hits to win their contest 14-11.

George Johnson and Paul Williams were touched for 14 safeties on the winners mound, with Carl Gauthier and William Smith taking the defeat.

Neil Coyner had two doubles and a single and McMullin one of each to lead the attack for the Post Office, which had 15 batters hit safely.

Dave Richards doubled and singled and McMullin had a triple and single for the losers.

Lamoda Trims Bob's 9-0

The Lamoda Hairstyle mosquitoes put a hitch in their attack as they bombed Bob's Auto Body 9-0 in minor soccer action last night.

Roger Goddard scored his parade with four goals following by Gilbert Grant with two and John Jiacopoulos and John Merrill with one each.

The Cozy Grill mosquitoes were on the defensive blanking the Modern Hair Styling sisters 3-0.

Scoring for the winners were McCutcheon, Waterson and Alan.

In the other game played the Falcons peewees bested their Penguin counterparts 4-1.

Keith Parry notched a pair of goals with the others going to Bruce Keller and Steve Martin. Pat Smith scored for the losers.

Larry's Lace Midget Rivals

Larry's Imperials were giants in the Belleville Minor Lacrosse midget division last night as they powered their way to an 11-1 win over Team No. 2.

Danny Payne scored four goals for the winners, with Danny Coulson adding three and Duncan Preuss grabbing a pair. The other goalgetter was Pat Raycroft. Glen Sine prevented a shutout for the losers.

In contrast to the lopsided score, Dickens Motel and 707 Jets played to a 1-1 stalemate.

Darrell Donnelly scored for the Jets and Robert Cook replied for Dickens.

Ripley Cooper Says:
Golf's Million Dollar Winner
CHIP LIKE LONG PUTT
Thinking of a chip as if it were a long putt can bring great benefits to your short game. Too often the club golfer will try to loft the ball to a point close to the pin, then look for excessive backspin to stop the shot near the cup. This won't usually work. The correct method is to use your putting grip, stance and ball position. Then, swinging a iron with the least loft you need to get onto the putting surface, execute the same stroke you would for a putt of the same distance.
The ball will pop up onto the green and run easily to the pin, since you have a minimum of backspin.

Disputed Penalty Kick Keeps England's Soccer Hopes Alive

MEXICO CITY (CP) — England's defending champions, Italy's European champions and host Mexico gained the points they needed Thursday to advance to the World Cup soccer quarter-finals.

The first prosperity blew off this soccer-mad city.

Thousands of yelling, dancing Mexicans paraded the boulevards of their capital in a giant celebration which would have had an honored guest to believe the host team had just won the Jules Rimet Trophy, emblematic of world soccer supremacy.

Europeans here to follow the fortunes of their teams said it was the biggest mob scene they'd seen since celebrations at the end of the Second World War.

The Mexicans were marking the advancement of a Mexican team in the group of eight for the first time in World Cup competition.

Cars, crawled through the streets, some with bumpers scraping the road from the weight of youngsters clinging to every surface. Buses had an extra burden of 60 or 80 non-paying passengers, chanting from the roof "Me-he-co, Me-he-co."

The fact that Mexico scraped in a 1-0 decision over Belgium on a goal from a disputed penalty didn't matter a bit.

England's 1-0 win over Czechoslovakia was also on a hotly-disputed penalty kick. And the best Italy could do against Israel's amateurs was a 0-0 tie. In the day's fourth game, also-rans Morocco and Bulgaria tied 1-1.

Of the 16 teams that opened World Cup play here May 31, Mexico, Russia, Uruguay, Italy, Brazil, England, West Germany and Peru have qualified for sudden-death quarter-final games Sunday.

The teams packing for home after failing to survive group round-robin play are Morocco, Sweden, El Salvador, Bulgaria, Israel, Belgium, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

Still unsettled was whether Mexico or Russia takes first place in Group 1. The teams ended even with five points each from three games and identical goal spreads. Lots were to be drawn today to decide which is group leader—hypertax to deciding who plays whom in the criss-cross schedule which has the leader of Group 1 playing the second-place team in Group II and vice versa.

But 14 of the cars on the starting grid Sunday will be products of the McLaren factory at Colnbrook, England.

Only one of them, however, will carry the McLaren colors. That will be driven by Hulme.

Until the draw, Sunday's quarter-finals shaped up this way:

In Mexico City: Mexico or Russia vs. Uruguay.

In Toluca: Italy vs. Mexico or Russia.

In Guadalajara: Brazil vs. Peru.

In Leon: West Germany vs. England.

Mexico, England and Italy, in joining the five countries which had clinched quarter-final berths earlier, had little to cheer about in the way they did it.

Italy topped the Group II standings with four points from three games, but managed to score only one goal—against Sweden—in getting there. The Italians played scoreless ties with Uruguay and Israel.

England was struggling most of the time in its 1-0 victory over the Czechs. Despite five changes in the lineup from the team that lost 1-0 to Brazil, Veteran Jack Charlton, Alan Clarke, Jeff Astle, Colin Bell and Keith Newton were put into the starting lineup but England rarely achieved true rhythm.

Clarke, 21, formerly of Leeds United, scored the only goal. Although it was his first full international game, he won key cakes as he sank the penalty shot in the 49th minute after fooling Czech goalkeeper Ivo Viktor into covering the wrong way.

The penalty shot, ordered by referee Roger Machin of France, was hotly argued by the Czechs and the largely-Mexican crowd.

England manager Sir Alf Ramsey said he considered his team's performance disappointing.

Discussing the penalty award by Machin, Ramsey said: "I believe the Czech player touched the ball with his hand."

The shot was awarded when Vladimir Hagara, tackling Colin Bell, tripped and appeared to handle the ball as he went down.

McLaren Colors Still Flying at Mosport's Can-Am Event

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — A field of 33 drivers with more than $1,000,000 in racing machinery in their hands is entered in this weekend's Canadian-American Challenge Cup race for sports-racing cars.

The Canadian event, with $75,000 in prize money at stake, kicks off the 11-race Can-Am series which is worth $1,000,000 in prize and accessory money.

The death earlier this month of Bruce McLaren in a driving accident in Britain has cast a shadow over the series. McLaren and fellow New Zealander and team-mate Denis Hulme had dominated the Can-Am series during its first three seasons.

Sports on All Fronts

MONTREAL (CP) — The annual four-day meeting of the National Hockey League ended Thursday but at least one problem remained unresolved. Clarence Campbell, re-elected president of the NHL by the board of governors, said his league had not reached agreement with the American and Western hockey leagues on indemnification. The two minor leagues each are seeking a reported $1,380,000 from the NHL because the latter has expanded to Buffalo of the AHL and Vancouver of the AHL for the coming season, thus displacing minor league clubs in the two cities. It is expected further meetings to resolve the issue will be held shortly, an AHL official said Thursday.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, warned organized amateur skiing Thursday to cleanse its ranks of commercialism or face another from the Olympics. Brundage told the annual convention of the United Ski Association he deplored the intrusion of "gangs of amateurs" to the Olympics and said all participating countries must be on guard.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Florida 12-metre yacht, Heritage, was given a rude reception Thursday in her first two races of the America's Cup preliminary United States trials on Long Island. Heritage lost the first race she sailed to the 1967 cup defender, Intrepid, by one minute 57 seconds over a 13-mile course. Then Valiant, the yacht most people expect to defend the America's Cup off Newport, R.I., in September, whipped Heritage by 5:42 in a race which was shortened from the planned six legs to five because of engine trouble on the New York Yacht Club's committee boat.

DUBLIN (CP) — The great Canadian-bred Nijinsky and two Canadian-owned horses remain in the field after the final scratches for the Irish Sweeps Derby to be run at the Curragh June 27. The prospective Canadian-owned starters are R. P. Taylor's Northern Monarch, trained in Ireland, and Irish-bred Party Mink, owned by Malcolm D. Thorp of Sarnia, Ont.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League announced Thursday night they have completed plans with Winnipeg Enterprises Corp., to place Montreal's class AAA International League farm club in Winnipeg. The team will be known as Winnipeg Whips, and will be owned by the Montreal. Montreal's triple-A affiliate was originally located in Buffalo, N.Y., but the team ran into financial problems. The International League lifted the franchise and gave Montreal 10 days to find a suitable substitute city. Winnipeg stadium seats 15,000. The Expos had also considered three Ontario cities as possible franchise sites — Kitchener, Hamilton and London.

OTTAWA (CP) — The 1972 world figure skating championships will be held in Calgary, the Canadian Figure Skating Association announced Thursday. The competition is to be held in March, following the Winter Olympics that year, in Japan.

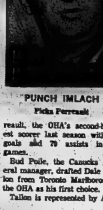
Lawyers May Bring Bonus Babies Into Style

MONTREAL (CP) — If professional hockey clubs made a practice of paying large bonuses to top amateur draft choices in the past, they made little noise about it.



But that could all change after Thursday's all-time high amateur draft in which the 14 National Hockey League clubs grabbed a record 116 top junior graduates.

The change may come because four of the first six picks are represented by lawyers, with one attorney—Bob Woolf of Boston—outspoken on the matter of bonuses for his three clients as part of the price the drafting clubs will pay for the youngsters' services.

"They've had huge bonus clauses for signing in baseball, basketball and football in the States for years," Woolf said.

As in Wednesday's expansion draft, Buffalo Sabres and Vancouver Canucks—the two additions to the NHL—drafted first and second in the amateur affair.

Buffalo's Punch Imlach, as expected, took talented centre Gilbert Perreault, a graduate of Montreal Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A Series.

"PUNCH IMLACH
Picks Perreault

Perreault, 5 native of Aribabaska, Que., isn't represented by a lawyer, but he said he'll bring his own interpreter into any salary discussions "for both me and Mr. Imlach." Perreault speaks little English.

"I trust Mr. Imlach and I'm sure I'll be alright," said Perreault, a native of Aribabaska, Que., isn't represented by a lawyer, but he said he'll bring his own interpreter into any salary discussions "for both me and Mr. Imlach." Perreault speaks little English.

"I trust Mr. Imlach and I'm sure I'll be alright," said Perreault.

Vancouver, Buffalo's second expansion entry in as many years, had the first choice in the draft after finishing with the worst record in the NHL this season.

Vancouver general manager Phil Maloney said the Canucks would have taken Perreault if the Sabres hadn't picked him.

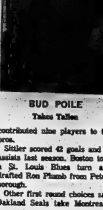
Vancouver's second choice was Dale Tallon, a defenceman from Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A Series.

Tallon is represented by Alan Eagleson, the Toronto lawyer who doubles as executive director of the NHL Players' Association.

Tallon, who played every position but goal for the Marlies last season, said it was "fabulous" to be selected by the Canucks.

"I've only been there (Vancouver) once, but, I liked the city," he said.

The last time he was in Vancouver — 1966 — Tallon was on his way to Kelowna, B.C., where he was Canadian junior golf championship.



Already there is talk of Tallon signing a one-year pact with the Canucks for anywhere between $35,000 and $50,000.

Boston Bruins took right winger Reg Leach from Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Hockey League and Rich MacLeish from Peterborough Petes of the OHA. Boston had three choices through previous deals with Los Angeles Kings and Philadelphia Flyers. Boston had three and took a fourth addition to its own, in the first round.

Montreal Canadiens used Oakland Seals and Minnesota North Stars' picks in draft pacts for Martyniuk from Flin Flon and forward Chuck Lefley from Canada's Edmonton entry.

Leach, Martyniuk and Lefley have retained Woolf to conduct their contract negotiations.

Finley Bid Blocked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Legal manoeuvering has blocked Charles O. Finley's plans to buy Oakland Seals.

The price of the National Hockey League team also appears to have risen as a result of a Thursday court action. A written offer by Finley of a bid by $400,000 was presented on behalf of a group headed by Jerry Schnorr of Oakland, owner of the Roller Derby.

Finley's offer was $3,400,000 and he should waive rights to $700,000 in NHL expansion money, Schnorr has offered $4,500,000.

Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics of American League baseball, currently is trying to get NHL approval as a potential franchise holder.

San Francisco Superior Court Judge Robert H. Schnacke was to have made his ruling today on Finley final Thursday, but a U.S. District Court judge issued a restraining order against sale of the team.

Sights for shooters.

All rifles are equipped with some kind of sight.
But, certain rifle sights are superior to others.
Of all the sights, the Open Sight is the most common but the least satisfactory for target shooting. It's recognized by its Post or Bead front sight and V or U-notch rear sight.
The next most common sight is the Aperture Rear and Post Front Sight. This type is superior to the Open Sight. As the eye has a natural tendency to center in a circle, this sight allows your eye to automatically concentrate on the Front Sight and the target.
The Aperture Rear and Front Sight is by far the best combination. With this sight, when correctly aligned on the target, the front-sight and bullseye appear as a series of concentric circles. Any error in aiming can be easily observed and corrected.
If you're interested in becoming one of the many Canadians who enjoy shooting, write for information on the CIL Shooting Sports program. CIL, Box 10, Montreal 101, Quebec.
Illustrated above, the CIL Model 125. Just the rifle for general plinking and varmint shooting.
Has bolt action with clip magazine and attractive rich walnut Monte Carlo type stock. Has special hooded foresight with receiver grooved for scope mounting.

Yukons Go To Peru

TRENTON — Two Yukon transports from CFB Trenton will be among five Canadian Forces aircraft flying to Peru this weekend to aid earthquake victims there.

The Yukons will transport 31 tons of tents and five press representatives to Lima, Peru where the supplies will be distributed by the five Canadian Forces' Caribous already in Peru.

At present the five Caribous in Lima are the only link with the hard-hit area at Ania, 180 miles northwest of Lima.

All roads into Ania are blocked or destroyed and other aircraft are unable to land on the 2,000 foot runway situated 8,000 feet above sea level.

The Caribous, Canadian-built planes designed for short strips, fly four tons of medical supplies into Ania daily.

In all, 230 tents, seven 100-kilowatt generators, and medical and emergency supplies will be flown to Lima this weekend by the two Yukons from Trenton, two Hercules transports from Ottawa and one Hercules from Edmonton.

Accompanying the relief supplies will be 10 technicians who will operate the generators and irish Peruvians in their use.

Both Yukons from Air Transport Command at Trenton will leave at 7:45 a.m. Sunday, stop at Ottawa, then proceed to Lima. They are expected to return to Trenton early Tuesday.

'Litterly' Loaded

Like Jeff Thrasher (rear), 8, and Scott Trice, 7, of Hillcrest, hundreds of Belleville youngsters today were literally loaded — with litter. Students, scouts, members of city organizations marked start of Conservation Week with cleanup campaign in city neighborhoods, along Moira River.

Kidnap Letter Issued

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The kidnappers of West German Ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben have demanded 28 political prisoners as ransom and have issued a call for guerrilla war in Brazil.

President Emilio Garrastazu Medici's military regime distributed the lengthy manifesto to newspapers and radio stations without comment today, apparently at the demand of the kidnappers.

The document charged that the "military dictatorship unmasks itself more and more as an enemy of the people, as a servant of the big foreign capitalists as well as the big property holders."

"Only revolutionary war, guerrilla action and rural guerrilla warfare will bring the Brazilian people to freedom," it said.

Nine young men and a woman carrying machine-guns kidnapped the 61-year-old ambassador Thursday night near his home in the Gloria section of Rio. They killed one Brazilian security agent and wounded another in snatching von Holleben from his car and speeding away with him.

Mimeographed leaflets strewn on the street identified the kidnappers as members of the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (PRV), one of several Brazilian underground leftist groups.

Acting on an anonymous telephone call to the government radio station Friday, officials found messages stuffed in the alms box at the St. Monica Roman Catholic Church in the southern Rio suburb of Leblon.

The messages contained the demand for the release of political prisoners, the anti-government manifesto, and what was reported to be a handwritten note from von Holleben.

Initial reports said the kidnappers were demanding the release of 38 prisoners, but a Brazilian newspaper man who claimed he saw the note said they asked for 40.

Von Holleben was a close friend of Count Karl von Spreti, the West German ambassador to Guatemala who was killed by his kidnappers in April after the government refused to bargain for his freedom.

LeDain Report on Drugs To Be Tabled in House

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau settled one uncertainty in the Commons Friday —the LeDain commission's interim recommendations dealing with drug abuse will be made public.

But Mr. Trudeau gave no hint of when they will be unveiled.

Latest betting on Parliament Hill is that it will be Friday, June 26, at the earliest. This is the day Parliament is supposed to adjourn for a summer recess lasting until October.

It is even suggested that, if Parliament sits beyond the June 26 date, the cabinet will hold onto the report until the last sitting day, whenever it should occur.

Mr. Trudeau's commitment was made against a background of reports and speculation that cabinet ministers are at odds over some of the recommendations of the commission headed by Gerald LeDain, dean of Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto.

But Mr. Trudeau said the report has been in cabinet's hands no more than a week.

Reports are that the five-member commission is proposing changes to the laws on marijuana, now classed as a narcotic and subject to heavy prison terms for possession and trafficking.

Justice Minister John Turner and Solicitor-General George McIlraith, who is responsible for the RCMP, are reported opposed to making changes in the present laws.

Principal Denies Charges

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Carl Reid, principal of Queen Elizabeth School, has denied allegations of mistreatment of senior students.

Mr. Reid said today: "We reject the complaints as being ridiculous. Our major concern is the very serious educational damage being done to very innocent teachers and students."

Mr. Reid made his comments in the wake of charges Friday by Robert Bates, a Picton businessman, who charged his son had been beaten at school on numerous occasions.

A report of a special investigation into the allegations was expected in the office of Crown Attorney Richard Sheehy early this afternoon.

UK Poll Predicts Labor Landslide

LONDON (Reuters) — The ruling Labor party was buoyed by a public opinion poll today which predicted it would win the British general election Thursday, June 18, by a landslide.

The poll, prepared for a Conservative newspaper silenced by the now-ended national newspaper strike, said Labor would win by 12.4 per cent—enough to give the party a 146-seat majority in the House of Commons. Labor's majority at dissolution was 62.

Standings in the 630-seat House of Commons at dissolution were: Labor 343, Conservative 283, Liberal 13, Republican Labor 1, Welsh Nationalist 1, Scottish Nationalist 1, Independent Unity 1, independents 2, vacant 2, Speaker and two Deputy Speakers 3.

Observers believed that if Labor did win by 140 seats, its victory would mean a change in the leadership of the opposition Conservative party, now led by Edward Heath.

Heath will meet with his top advisers Sunday to discuss tactics for the last four days of the campaign.

A year ago, even two months ago, a 12.4-per-cent lead for Labor would have been unbelievable in the wake of vote-losing measures like devaluation of the pound and wage freeze.

But now it is Heath who is in the hot spot, with his party in danger of being split by the anti-immigration speeches of right-wing Conservative Enoch Powell.

The survey, by the national opinion poll for The Daily Mail, was taken before Powell's latest speech Thursday on colored immigration.

That speech caused a storm because of Powell's suggestion that traitors in high office had smothered the true facts of colored immigration.

Kierans in Hot Seat

Labor Moves to Provide United Front Over Wage Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster General Eric Kierans today is the man caught in the squeeze between federal wage restraint guidelines and the growing anger of organized labor.

Mr. Kierans, who hopes to turn the post office into a modern, mechanized, profitable business, now must watch as retailing mail strikes disrupt his plans, lower post office income and threaten permanent business losses.

Both the postal unions and his fellow cabinet ministers are turning a deaf ear to his plea for a fast settlement of the postal dispute as they move into battle over the six-per-cent guidelines.

Friday, with the postal negotiations still deadlocked in their ninth month, the postal unions accepted promises of financial support from their trade unions and announced they can now keep the rotating strikes going indefinitely.

"Eventually somebody will have to give in but it won't be us," said Roger Decarie, co-chairman of the Council of Postal Workers, representing the country's 27,000 mailmen.

Earlier Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters the government will maintain its support of the guidelines in negotiations with federal civil servants even if it means a sacrifice of efficiency in some government departments such as the post office.

Mr. Kierans called a news conference last week to warn that the post office is losing money as the rotating strikes continue. Revenues had dropped $3,000,000 in May.

Cyll Harper, chief negotiator for the treasury board, said Friday he is aware of Mr. Kierans' concern over the state of the post office but the minister's concern "had no bearing" on the way the treasury board is conducting negotiations.

And William Houle, co-chairman with Mr. Decarie of the postal council, said Mr. Kierans' announcement meant to him that the government was beginning to feel the squeeze of the rotating strike tactic.

Mr. Decarie said that when Mr. Kierans spoke to the postal union leaders about the long-term effects of the dispute on the post office "I told him he'd better put the pressure on Mr. Drury."

However, C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board, has already indicated he, too, is willing to risk long-term damage to the post office rather than yield on the six-per-cent wage guidelines.

On Friday, other trade unionists who have opposed the guidelines, offered financial support to the postal workers and in so doing made it more impossible than ever for them to back down in their guideline-breaking demand for an additional 20 per cent over two years. Postal workers now average $3.66 an hour.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad, Transport and General Workers announced it has pledged an immediate $35,000 donation to the postal workers.

The wrideline battle is between the government and the entire labor movement," CBRT President William Smith explained in announcing the donation.

The guidelines, announced last week in Winnipeg by John Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, are supposed to be voluntary. The postal workers are the first major public service groups to test government determination.

As such, they have become organized labor's symbol of its opposition to wage restraint. Some 10,000 Windsor auto workers meet today to decide whether they will pledge $1 each to the cause. At least three other major unions have indicated they will be unveiled.

Latest betting on Parliament Hill is that it will be Friday, June 26, at the earliest. This is the day Parliament is supposed to adjourn for a summer recess lasting until October.

It is even suggested that, if Parliament sits beyond the June 26 date, the cabinet will hold onto the report until the last sitting day, whenever it should occur.

Mr. Trudeau's commitment was made against a background of reports and speculation that cabinet ministers are at odds over some of the recommendations of the commission headed by Gerald LeDain, dean of Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto.

Justice Minister John Turner and Solicitor-General George McIlraith, who is responsible for the RCMP, are reported opposed to making changes in the present laws.

Montreal Friday.

Mr. Houle and Mr. Decarie are to appear before an emergency meeting of executives of the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress where they will seek money from the 113 unions affiliated with the CLC.

Mr. Decarie said the fund being established for the postal workers means "we can hang on forever and keep our rotating strikes going on as long as necessary."

The 24-hour mail stoppages began May 28 and took 4,100 postal workers off the job in

Reassessment Changes Stirling Tax Picture

Reassessment at full value has changed the property tax picture for some Stirling residents who have seen the tax bills on their homes doubled this year.

At the same time other property owners may not be in a better position with their annual tax bill lowered.

Under the new full value assessment completed last year, property in the village is assessed at close to $7,000,000 — up approximately five times over the previous figure.

The tax rate this year is 32.7 mills for residential property as compared with 119.5 mills last year.

This year's village budget calls for only slightly more money than last year and only the county rate calls for a higher figure.

The county rate this year will see $43,944 collected from village residents as compared to $38,851 in 1975.

Slightly less money is being raised for school purposes — $97,177 in 1976 as compared with $97,927 last year — and $42,000 for general municipal expenditures as compared with $41,598 last year.

As a result of the reassessment some villagers saw the taxes on their homes jump from $260 to more than $600.

However, those who were relief in sight for homeowners with sharply increased levies.

This week Darcy McKeough, municipal affairs minister, announced in the legislature that tax increases as a result of reassessment will be limited to 15 per cent and decreases to 10 per cent. The new legislation will be retroactive to January 1.

In Stirling, first instalment taxes have already been paid so any adjustment will have to be on the final instalment.

Fiery Finale For Old Wrecks

TRENTON — Sparks from a welding torch have been cited as the cause of a Friday afternoon fire at Sidney Auto Wreckers just outside this town's limits.

Sidney Township Fire Chief John Acquino said sparks apparently smouldered in a car seat for several hours before bursting into flames and attracting the attention of the wreckers' employees.

The fire spread to old tires on which many of the 1,000 wrecked cars were piled, sending thick smoke billowing into the air with bursts of flame which shot as high as fifty feet.

Employees of the firm were unable to control the blaze with a five acting pumper and bucket brigade and it took Sidney firefighters one hour to quell the flames.

Damage was listed as light because the cars were slated for wrecking.

Hot Spell Killed Fish

A sustained hot weather spell likely has proved fatal to fish in Moira River.

A member of fish were found dead in the river north of Belleville earlier this week and the Moira River Conservation Authority launched an investigation.

An official of the Ontario Water Resources Commission and a lands and forests biologist toured areas of the river yesterday with conservation representatives.

Tests and readings were taken in various sections of the river.

These confirmed above-normal temperatures and algae activity which lowered the river's oxygen content in spots.

Fire Destroys Garage, Shed

Sidney Twp. Fire Department answered a fire call at 9.10 a.m. yesterday morning to the home of Harold Wals.

The fire was a short one-half mile west of the Wallbridge Road on the second concession highway.

Destroyed in the fire was a garage next to the house and a shed connected to the house.

A car and truck in the garage were saved. House contents suffered water damage.

MRS. WILLIAM W. SHAND

Mrs. Rose Ann Shand of 120 Queen Street, Belleville died on June 13 at Belleville General Hospital in her 68th year.

Born in Birmingham, England the deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Colston.

A former resident of Toronto, Mrs. Shand lived in Belleville almost 30 years and resided at Belleville, where she was a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The deceased was an active worker in the Belleville General Hospital Women's Auxiliary for many years.

Mrs. Shand is survived by her husband, William W. Shand and one daughter, Miss Rosemary Shand of Belleville.

The deceased is resting at the Thompson Funeral Home until Sunday. The funeral service will take place at 2 p.m. McDougall and Brown Chapel, 646 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto on Monday at 2 p.m.

Interment will be at Prospect Cemetery, Toronto.

MRS. ALVINA FLORA TOPPING

Funeral service will be held June 15 at 10 a.m. in the White and Morris Funeral Home, Deseronto, for Mrs. Alvina Flora Topping of 240 Bridge St. W., Napanee.

Officiating at the service will be Archdeacon Stout and Rev. John Neal. Interment will be in Deseronto Cemetery.

Mrs. Topping was born at Eachen, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Burley.

She had lived for the last year in Napanee but had spent most of her life in Deseronto, where she was also a member of St. Mark's Anglican Church and Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Topping was predeceased by her husband, Harold Topping, and is survived by four children, Mrs. William (Shirley) Houle of Barry's Bay, Mrs. Robert (Joan) Davy of Napanee, William Topping of Hamilton and Clinton Topping of Burlington.

She was a sister of Henry Burley of Belleville, John of Deseronto, Gordon of Belleville and Mrs. George (Clara) Jackson of Deseronto.

MRS. WILLIAM J. HAGGERTY

The funeral of Mrs. William J. Haggerty the former Edith Edna Donald, was held at St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling on June 10 with Rev. M. J. Cantrell officiating. Interment was in the Stirling Cemetery.

Bearers were Glenn and Lyle Hay, Wayne Haig, Lyle Fetherick, James and Gregory Haggerty.

Vandalism Repaired

Last Friday night, vandals damaged the stone benches of the parkette at Belleville Armories. Ex-LL-Col. Angus Duffy of the Hasty Pees, who served as chairman of the memorial committee that erected the benches and flowers, and his nephew Brian Duffy, repair the memorial site. Mr. Duffy said that "only idiots and cheap punks would do such a thing — too many good men laid down their lives for their country to have a memorial to them destroyed — I'd like to find out who they are and deal with them."

Telephone Company Seeks Rate Increase

Bell Telephone of Canada has applied to the Canadian Transport Commission for approval of an increase in local telephone rates effective Jan. 1-1977.

E. G. Thompson, local Bell manager, said that the proposed increases, which range between 20 cents and 40 cents a month for individual residence service and between 25 cents and $1.15 for individual business service, would be the equivalent of about six per cent.

Under the proposed new rate structure the rate for individual business service would increase from $4.65 to $4.95 per month. Rates for individual business service would rise from $10.50 to $11.15

The reason for application for the increased rates is to help offset rising costs and prevent deterioration of equipment, Mr. Thompson said.

Last September, the Transport Commission approved higher Bell rates for some long distance and miscellaneous services. Local service rates, however, were not raised, being left at the level established in 1953.

Hearings on the application will begin Sept. 9 in Ottawa.

Quinte Island Theatre Musical in Rehearsal

PICTON (Staff) — Theplans magnetized by the sound of The Magic Trumpet recently gravitated to Lilac Lodge, home of Dr. and Mrs. R. D. Hirst where members of the Quinte Island Theatre group held open house.

"Trumpet" a musical play written by Victor Davis and Victor Cowie, will be presented by the Quinte Island players in the Picton Centre on June 28. Described as "primarily for children" The Magic Trumpet, also offer entertainment for adults appreciative of art.

Scenery for the three act play was painted chiefly by Mrs. Hirst and was displayed last night at her home.

Playing the lead in "Trumpet" is attractive teenager Janet Alexander, a veteran trouper with the theatre group. She is also the play's producer. Miss Alexander portrays a magician who turns three children into enchanting three children into enchanting creatures of fantasy.

Playing the roles of cats are Leo Creamer and his brother, Frank. The elephant is winsomely played by Kitty Cross.

Tentatively scheduled as Quinte Island Theatre's only summer production "Trumpet" will be performed in the County Centre twice during July and three times in August. Two matinee performances will take place on each occasion.

In an effort to link all branches of the arts in Prince Edward, the organizers of the QIT have arranged for art shows in the Armory Mall this summer in conjunction with their play. Featured artists will include Gerald Putman, Lindsay Hallam, and Jeanne Cumbayan.

Supporters of the theatre group of about 20 members would like to see more community active in their productions

Workers behind the scenes are needed to assist with scenery, props and costumes and new talent is always a welcome addition.

It is the QIT's eventual aim to produce adult plays as well as children's performances. A small but enthusiastic group, the Quinte Island Theatre is working with determination to bring a fresh form of art to Prince Edward County.

Centre Faces Summer Doldrums

The Second Stage, Bellevill' Front Street drop-in centre, is suffering minor problems, that typify the advent of summer.

The main point of concern to Roland Belanger and Byron Casselman, the operators of the drop-in, is the lack of support for the centre that summer always brings.

"It was the same thing last summer," Mr. Belanger said this morning. Explaining that a meeting had been held in the centre last night to discuss the problem.

"Last summer we had no crowds at all," he said.

The competition with outdoor activities has been stiff for the Second Stage and its predecessor By Word of Mouth. The call of the Outlet has been strong for some of the centre's supporters.

"They have a place down town. Why don't they support it?" Mr. Belanger said.

The drop-in centre's problems are added to by the fact that the centre's manager, Jan Rutherford, is leaving.

"We have to have a manager," Mr. Belanger said, and the centre's problem seems to be taking 'care of itself' through the emergence of a new manager. Hours next week will be restricted at the centre.

The Second Stage will be open Tuesday night and Saturday afternoon next week. There will also be a dance Friday night.

The centre plans to operate a number of car washes to help its financial stability during the summer months when unemployed youth cannot afford to support its own projects.

"We're looking for ideas and for the support of Belleville's young people," Mr. Belanger said.

Police In Madoc Kept Busy

TWEED (Special) — Madoc provincial police were kept busy yesterday as they investigated a number of accidents resulting in more than $2,000 in property damage. There were no personal injuries.

Also this morning police from Madoc were called out to two additional mishaps.

Most serious of the accidents was a single car crash on the French Settlement Road, four miles north of Tweed, involving Edward J. Dunn, 19, of Tweed, loss control of his auto. The vehicle was a complete write-off.

Pte) assigned Const. Harry Daley to investigate the charge.

The case was reopened after an earlier investigation was dismissed for insufficient evidence by the Prince Edward County School Board.

A petition claiming student mistreatment by four teachers was circulated by 23 of 214 Bains, 15, among students at Queen Elizabeth.

The petition was signed by 14 of Bates' fellow students.

It was then presented to the Crown Attorney. But the strength of the petition Mr. Sheehy ordered the case reopened.

Today, Mrs. Robert Bates refused to give further information concerning her son's petition.

"We didn't want this to go this far," said Mrs. Bates. "We felt we had a clear understanding with the board that if our son returned to school he would be left alone to do his studies. But (the board) were positively sure of this. They said they'd talk to his teachers."

The Bates family met with board chairman Robert Barrier, vice chairman George Flower, trustee Garcia Carson, and police officer Mary Af to receive the alleged mistreatments.

Asked about a news report that Mr. Bates had taken his story to a Picton bureau of a daily newspaper, Mrs. Bates ignored the question.

She did say however: "You don't think for one moment do you that the school would mention this in the paper. It's unbelievable."

IN MEMORIAM

GEEN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away June 12, 1975.
Dad! recalls the memory,
Of a face we loved so dear,
And those who think of him today,
Are those who think of him today,
Are those who knew him best.
The flowers we lay upon his grave,
Will fade and die away,
But memories of him who has left us,
Will forever fade away.
—Lovingly remembered by Mom and Family.

LAYTON — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away June 13, 1969.
We are and within our memory,
Loved you as few could know,
For the ones we loved so dearly,
Were forever dear to you.
We think of them in silence,
We miss them more and more,
For those we loved are always,
In the hearts they left behind.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Mom, Dad, Brothers, Sisters and Families.

MACDONALD — In loving memory of our dear husband and father who passed away at the Belleville General Hospital on June 12, 1975.
Peacefully the end came,
Sweetly he fell asleep,
Softly he breathed his last,
And left us here to weep.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Mom, Dad, Brothers, Sisters and Families.

MEEKER — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away June 13, 1969.

Northern Workers To Strike If Necessary

The majority of workers at Northern Electric have voted to strike if necessary to support contract negotiations.

A vote taken yesterday by the company's employees association — which represents about 530 workers at the plant, was 87 per cent in favor of strike action if ever needed, says association president R. D. Longhurst.

Wage parity with workers at other Northern Electric plants is a main issue in negotiations, started about seven weeks ago, said Mr. Longhurst.

Negotiations have now gone to conciliation — a procedure that could conceivably continue some time, Mr. Longhurst said.

Both sides meet again with the conciliator Tuesday.

Thurs. Lightning Starts Fires

TWEED (Special) — Lightning during Thursday afternoon's electrical storm which swept through the district touched off five bush fires in the Tweed area.

Department of Lands and Forests officials reported today that one of the blazes in Elsevir township was not out and four others were still burning but under control.

Largest of the fires was a three-and-a-half-acre blaze in Cashel township. Others were in Grimsthorpe, Ashby and Matawatchan townships.

So far this year, 73 fires have been reported in the Tweed area. Area burned over totals 495.4 acres.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY

The current employment picture in our community, as presented by employment opportunities listed with the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre by local employers, reflects a rather bleak picture.

This situation is of grave concern to all responsible persons; it is of paramount concern to those who are seeking work. At the present time, there are broadly speaking, three categories of job seekers. First, the adult or regular worker presently employed. Second, the graduate student who is now ready to enter the labor force at his or her initial permanent employment. Third, the students who are looking only for summer jobs.

Despite the present problems, it must be emphasized that, in our community, and in this sense, I am speaking of the area coming under the responsibility of the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre there are many indications that our economy is broadening and becoming more diverse. In recent years there has been an unprecedented interest in this area by individuals representing a wide range of interests. There has been, of course, a considerable amount of publicity with regards to our industrial expansion. However, it is in the services field, which will show the largest employment increase. Our community is a natural winner for not only the increased summer tourist business but also for a large share in the winter sporting activities. It must also be borne in mind that there is continued interest in our mineral and forest resources.

Our community is very much involved in these favorable developments and in assisting in every way possible towards their successful result.

Meanwhile, there are our present problems. No single community is an island unto itself and it must be realized that our products and services are exported elsewhere in Canada and to many overseas countries.

Economically and geographically, our local economy is dependent upon a multitude of other factors beyond our direct control.

It is an appropriate time to bring to the attention of those persons falling into the previously mentioned categories, the services and facilities provided by the federal Dept. of Manpower and Immigration, through its Canada Manpower Centres. The Belleville Canada Manpower Centre offers the community the following:

(1) Labor market information; (2) manpower supply; (3) manpower mobility; (4) manpower training; (5) manpower adjustment, which is a consultative service available to all employers.

These services are free of charge and our staff of experienced consultants can be contacted either by telephoning 962-9881 or by a personal visit or letter written to 234 Church Street, Belleville.

Students seeking summer jobs are reminded that the Belleville Student Employment Centre is located at 270 Pinnacle Street, telephone 962-9881, extension 46. During the coming week there will be publicity concerning a couple of money earning projects which will be operated by students using their own initiative in order to help solve their summer job problems.

Finally, this is the time of year when the term leisure is brought to the attention of all parents. Under the new and complete agrarian school attendance system thousands of high school students have or are about to have free time until this coming September.

All parents, especially the mothers of these young students are thinking how these children can utilize this free time to best advantage. It has been stated "That the whole topic of leisure and recreation presents some of the most interesting and vital questions to be faced and solved by a growing economy and future society".

It is indeed a very challenging world.

In the seasonal employment field, there is an urgent requirement for strawberry pickers. The period of work is for an estimated three weeks. Anyone interested in this type of work is asked to contact the Canada Manpower centres at Belleville or Trenton.

The Canada Manpower centre is your service and we invite you to use it.

Trenton Taxes Up, But Not by Much

TRENTON — Residents of this town will face a slight tax increase this year as a result of the 1970 mill rate struck by town council Friday at a special noon-time budget session.

Clerk O. W. Larry termed increases of 1.36 mills for commercial property and 1.45 mills for residential property, "minimal in comparison with other municipalities."

The commercial rate will rise to 126.86 mills, an increase of one per cent over 1969, and the residential rate to 114.64 mills, an increase of 1.28 per cent over last year.

By comparison...both the commercial and residential rates rose seven per cent last year.

In the Hastings-Prince Edward Separate School Board's second year of operation, separate school supporters will face a commercial rate increase of .33 mills (.3 of one per cent) to 127.27 and a residential boost of .81 mills (.7 of one per cent) to 115.64.

The $2,765,618.80 current budget represents an increase of $269,789.85 over Trenton's 1969 total expenditures of $2,455,941.85.

Mayor Duncan McDonald noted that the town would be doing "quite a bit of capital works out of the current budget (as opposed to selling debentures) to reduce the burden of high borrowing costs."

Capital works included in the current budget are the Quinte Street East reconstruction and the Bay Street sanitary sewer which will allow diversion of sewage from Trenton Community Gardens into the town sewage system.

Termination of the use of the Community Gardens septic tank and the waste disposal system will also reduce pollution of the Bay of Quinte, treasurer Peter DeGroot and clerk O. W. Larry explained.

Of the combined $113,000 cost of these two projects, an estimated $60,000 will be recovered in the form of provincial government grants.

Another capital works project included in the current budget is the $24,000 installation of storm sewer to service the Brett subdivision and the nearly-completed 36 units of geared - to - income housing constructed by the Ontario Housing Corporation.

"This work is long overdue and we've made a point to get it done this year," Trenton's chief magistrate stressed.

He also reiterated that the saving in interest by financing these capital works projects through the 1970 current budget will more than offset the slight mill rate increase.

"We've been very fortunate to hold the increase to this rate," Mayor McDonald emphasized.

In addition to the financing of capital works projects in the current budget, increased staff, higher salaries and the accelerating cost of products were factors which led to the projection of a $280,789.85 jump in town expenditures.

A breakdown of the town's 12 departments shows that eight require more money this year while five will be forced to operate on reduced budgets.

Largest hike in the Public Works jump of $146,647.67 to $624,352.22. This was necessitated by the salting of debentures last year to cover the cost of constructing the D. J. MacDonald bridge over the Trent River.

The other departmental increases listed in descending order are: police—$45,454.18; education—$42,715.76; recreation and community services—$41,182.85; sanitation and waste—$27,341.35; other expenses — $18,029.75 (other protection — $17,252.32); and social and family services — $4,010.41.

The provincial government's takeover of assessment was the prime factor in creating a general government department cost reduction of $34,598.31.

Other departmental cost reductions are: financial expenses — $13,380.14; planning and development — $9,095.32; fire — $1,794.53; and health — $1,072.70.

Treasurer Peter De Groot explained that an essential factor in "the holding of the line" is an increased assessment of $1,648,340 of which $983,200 is commercial and $443,040 residential.

This increased assessment means that each mill will return $34,781 in revenue this year — a jump of $1,438 over 1969.

Trenton residents will this year receive the full benefits in assessment of the acquisition of Moore Business Forms and Crane Canada Limited.

These two industries became operational here in 1969 and account for the majority of the increased commercial assessment this year.

The $5,403 surplus from the 1969 budget wasn't of sufficient magnitude to greatly affect the 1970 current budget.

Education continues to take the biggest chunk of the taxpayer's dollar and in 1970 education will require 42.9 mills on the residential rate and 47.87 on the commercial rate to provide the necessary $947,477.58.

This 37.42 per cent of the residential mill rate will go toward education.

Second largest burden to the taxpayer is public works, which will consume 22.1 per cent of the residential mill rate this year.

Treasurer Peter DeGroot prepared the budget, which was received in detail by a three - man administrative board before it was referred to council.

Together council and the administrative board spent a pair of four-hour sessions on the current budget before it was finally approved at Friday's special noon-hour caucus.

Authority—Where Is It?

One of the untidy looking youths involved in the hotel affair in Saskatoon said on television that his group was only insisting on its rights. No matter that they were disturbing the convocation and that they seemed to think these "rights" included the right to bring in their own liquor, stand on the tables and shout taunts at police.

The police apparently took no action because the management had not specifically asked for it.— a neat evasion of responsibility if ever there was one. Now the management itself has buckled under; having initially insisted on proper dress, it has now scheduled a meeting with the young people for tomorrow. It will be interesting to see what transpires — some form of sparkshield perhaps, with one lounge for the hippies and another for the well-dressed squares.

One thing is certain, the episode represents another flaunting of authority by a segment of the youth population which does not a whit for the rights of other members of society.

Compromise Fatal

Here is another aspect of lack of authority in contemporary society — in the guise of allowing everyone his "rights" as evidenced by the situation in the universities.

It has been expressed by Max Beloff of The Times of London in an article reprinted by The Globe and Mail. Mr. Beloff speaks of a conviction that there is a fundamental point of view on this issue which is too rarely expressed in public.

"It is, in brief," he continues, "that the accent in debate upon violent or near-violent forms of disruption while understandable is misleading. Where an outright challenge to law and order is concerned, whether on or off the campus, consistency of purpose and firmness in execution are all that is required. Even the most progressive of vice-chancellors, even educational correspondents, even politicians accept the fact that compromise is by definition impossible with those whose aim is the destruction of an institution, not its reform."

Mr. Beloff suggests that even more dangerous is the widely-held view that it is possible, and even desirable to make large-scale changes in the running of universities "to meet what is regarded as an irresistable demand for student participation."

The reasons why the demand is thought to be irresistible, the writer suggests, "have little to do with the pressure exercised in its favor by students, but represent a virtual acceptance by the vice-chancellors and others of the case for participation.

Mr. Beloff develops this theme at length and concludes on a gloomy note which reflects the present trend in many universities to the overall knuckling down of those supposedly in authority, the Government included, to the noisy and often mindless demands of anti-establishment youth.

"If student participation becomes the general rule," he says, "it staff-student relations turn into a form of industrial negotiation with two sides, a new Daily Mail will be upon us, and we shall have to look to some new version of the monastery or the hermitage to keep alive the torch of learning until the next Renaissance."

A Need for Trust

In their growing political awareness, Canada's Indian leaders have a tendency to harp on the evils of the past. They are forever accusing the government of bad faith and while there is justification for this there is nothing to suggest the government is not at least trying to improve matters.

The Indians, however, seem to suffer from what might be termed the "forked tongue syndrome," and it is raised the head of Prime Minister Trudeau following presentation recently of a brief by the Alberta Indian Association.

The Prime Minister took exception to parts of the brief accusing the government of bad faith or attempting jo mislead the Indian people. "I can say we are ignorant, dumb or stupid but don't say we are dishonest or trying to mislead," said Mr. Trudeau.

Certainly there is a need for more trust on both sides, if the issue is to long since past for recriminations and the trading of insults.

Mr. Hees' 'Coup'

Prince Edward -Hastings MP George Hees' persistency has paid off in obtaining Prime Minister Trudeau's permission to invite the leaders of organized labor to the Prime Minister's home. The latter even asked Mr. Hees if he would arrange the meeting. As a frequent "needler" of the Prime Minister, this was something of a personal victory for Mr. Hees who is concerned about labor's rejection of the government's six per cent wage-increase guide.

Border-Watch for Subversives

Ottawa Prepares for Spill-over of U.S. Anarchy

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Remember, just a year ago, at Queen's University in Kingston, Prime Minister Trudeau was discussing the increasing turmoil of those troubled times with the student body.

And warning that the "real threat" to peace, order and democratic government in Canada was not the danger of invasion by the armed forces of a foreign power, but the danger of a "spill-over" across the International border of mails-to-Ana-archi riot and revolt?

And the Prime Minister's Royal Commission on National Security was warning that "no even greater danger" was the peril to the nation of the terrorist wings of the Quebec separatists?

Well, several things have happened since then to underline the warnings and alert the Government.

And ever so quietly federal authorities — in the Justice, Solicitor General's, Immigration, and most important of all the Defence Departments—are taking defensive counter-measures.

In the National Capital itself, in Toronto and in some other metropolitan centres, there have been mini-riots, led largely by American deserters and draft-dodgers, Maoists, and a wide assortment of self-proclaimed revolutionaries.

Only one of many American anarchists coming to Canada to preach riot and revolution was been Jerry Rubin.

Three weeks before the four student deaths in a riot at Kent State University in Ohio, the Scripps-Howard newspaper, the Akron Beacon Journal reported Jerry Rubin appearing on that campus, directing 1,500 undergrads in the art of revolution, exhorting:

"Until you are prepared to kill your parents, you are not ready for the revolt. Quit being students. Become criminals. Disrupt every institution. - Break every law.

"The American school system will be ended in two years. We, you, are going to bring it down. Do you want a diploma or do you want to take over this university and use it for your own purposes now. It is quite here now, but things are going to start again."

Three weeks later came the confrontation on the riot-rocked campus of the students and the Ohio National Guard and the four deaths.

Since then, the Canadian Immigration Department, for the first time since the Trudeau Government took over, has begun closing the door against avowed agitators, barring entry of Viet Cong agents.

Smuggling guns, too, other than Jerry Rubin, has troubled the federal Government out of its easy complacency.

It was the bloodiest 16-hour police strike and the frightening wave of crime that flooded the city while law and order were suspended.

The Armed Forces flew in the famed Van Doos from their Quebec City garrison, but the forces strike hours had barrier -18 banks had been robbed and whole business blocks damaged and looted.

At that time, Defence Headquarters has conceded, the strength of the Armed Forces in combat readiness was only 72,000 of whom just 7,500 were in Canada.

The balance were in Europe with NATO forces, on garrison duty, for UN in Cyprus and on training duties in the Bahamas and Denmark.

Since then, Mobile Command — still at its initial strength, having been spared the economy axe that is cutting Armed Forces manpower to 80,000 to 82,000 — has been drilling in the special techniques of riot control.

Mobile Command is a tough, elite corps of airborne troops, now equipped for insurgency with 707 Boeing jets.

Other Government units — the Defence Department declines to specify which, but it could be all — are taking less intensive antiriot training.

The Ottawa Police Department, which has been training up several mini-riots with quiet night-stick efficiency, is busy refining its already smooth, if numerous methods of "cooling" crowds.

And the RCMP here is able to deploy as many as 300 men in any trouble-spot to the National Capital instantly to cope with anything less than widespread, violence. So a less assessin.

It is quite a sight to see them — most of them unarmed — on the rooftops ringing Parliament Hill, where all the violence action" has been concentrated.

But it is the alerting of the Government — and the grooming of Mobile Command's and other Armed Forces elements for anti-riot action — that is really eye and mind-catching.

The situation has been related — very low key — in the Commons several times recently, since under federal law, the National Defence Act to be specific, the Armed Forces must go into action in civil emergency situations.

And experts are at work in the Justice and Defence Departments to sharpen the law and make the forces more instantly responsive to what federal authorities call "contingencies."

The Real Thing

"The real thing" these days, apart from a well-known soft drink, is the warm summer sun. Even the man who got out of the car with Arizona plates outside the Armories, Friday, must have been impressed with the blue skies and Bridge Street's verdant canopy of trees. And keeping cool, the better to enjoy this June warmth, is one of the necessary routines of Belleville citizens, like these two young women with the cool look seen on Bridge Street the other day.

Vice-Chairman's Statement

Separate School Board's Deficit $233,365

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

In the absence of the chairman, I would like to reply to the letter signed "Worried Parent".

First of all, I would like to express my personal thanks to the letter writer for the interest shown concerning the financial difficulties of our board and, while I am not in a position to speak for the board as a whole, I would like to reassure "Worried Parent" that I, as a member of the board, share the concern expressed.

Unfortunately, the information received by the writer has been misinterpreted, but some of this misinterpretation is probably due to the following reasons:

1. The audited financial statement of the board has not been published as yet. However, I am pleased to advise that it will appear in the June 13 (Saturday) edition of this newspaper.

2. The figure of $1,192,150 reported in the newspaper article of June 8, is not for teachers' salaries only, and as such was misquoted. The figure includes, in its instructional services, all supplies and teacher salaries. Also the actual amount is $1,183,150, not $1,192,150.

3. The $150,977 in the Capital Funds Account has nothing to do with the operating account, because this amount consists of money borrowed through debentures, and has to be spent on the Capital projects for which the money was borrowed. In other words, it is not permissible to use such Capital funds for operating costs.

4. Teachers' salaries for 1970-71 have not been negotiated as yet, but I am sure our teachers will not press for more than a fair settlement, hopefully not at a 20 per cent increase as suggested by "Worried Parent".

5. One area where the letter writer is surely in error is the deficit. Here, he or she suggested that the Board's total deficit is $116,332 as shown by the auditors report, and is composed mainly of an item of $112,900 which is carried forward from the 1968 boards. This is not true. This amount is the combined deficit of all former boards for 1968, to which was added $3,433 to cover items paid in 1969 which were applicable to 1968. The actual deficit of the 1969 board operations was $117,013 which represented the net deficiency for the year 1969, and is listed as such in the financial report.

Therefore, the total deficit for the board now stands at $116,383 plus $117,013 for a total of $233,365.

The board is presently awaiting the final report of its arbitrators, as well as directives from the Department of Education, as to how the 1968 deficit of $116,332 will be apportioned against the previous boards, and as such to the taxpayers in the different communities where the deficits occurred.

I would ask the writer or any other interested ratepayer to refer to the financial statement which, as mentioned earlier is published in today's edition of this paper. Also, if he or she has any more questions, to get in touch with me, and I should be happy to request the attendance of the auditor at the next regular board meeting, so that any misunderstanding or misinterpretation of the figures could be cleared to everyone's complete satisfaction.

In conclusion, I would like to thank you for the opportunity of expressing my personal views and I hope that I have been able to allay to a certain extent the fears of "Worried Parent". I would like to assure all separate school supporters that I and my colleagues on the board, are willing at any time to provide them with whatever information all they require regarding the financial position of our board, or information relating to any other aspect of school operations. In this connection, please note that there is a regular board meeting open to the public.

GLEN KROEZE,
Vice-Chairman, Hastings and Prince Edward County RSS Board.

Lost Opportunities

Mail Strike and Government Inaction

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

One wonders when Canadian governments will ever learn to govern. With the present post office employees on strike, what a wonderful opportunity was offered to correct the mistake which was made some years ago of allowing Government servants the right to unionize and strike. Soldiers, sailors and air force personnel and federal and provincial police, as well as city police, have also been allowed the right to strike. If the vote is not congenial, and they pay is sufficient, then on giving due notice, they should be allowed to withdraw from such service.

What a wonderful opportunity has now been lost by the Government. We are informed through the press that there are 70,000 or more able-bodied men out of work in Canada. In addition, before the end of this month, there will be thousands of high school students and thousands more of 1st and 2nd year university students, all seeking either full or time summer work. These young men and women would be capable of doing almost any post-postal work, after a few weeks training at most. Surely, after a strike of a month or more, they should be able to do the work of the striking postal employees.

Moreover, many of them would probably find it to be a more profitable form of life than continuing to study.

No doubt, most politicians would argue that they would lose 37,000 voters right away. The estimate is, that they would most likely lose a quarter of a million voters, for no doubt the striking postmen have sympathizers. On the other hand I would suggest that the Government would attract upwards of a half a million extra voters — people who are fed up with being pushed about.

It seems evident, however, that the present strike will be settled as usual. The Government will give way on its 6 per cent increase offer and make it 10 cents, and the strikers will give way and come down 10 cents from their 40 cent demand. All concerned in the arrangement will feel very smug, and having signed a two-year agreement, we will go through the whole silly business again about June, 1972.

What a sad, sad commentary this is on a democratic system which is really flowing with filth and honey.

City Should Maintain And Extend Parkland

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

More and more one hears discussion regarding the progress of Belleville, but with an increasing awareness that all changes are not related to the long term needs of the individuals in the area.

One must resent this. One resents the fact that any lot or building not in keeping with the "Pocket Book Brigade" makes up its mind. There is complete disregard for the feeling any of the attractive corners of this city. The only aim of the PBB is to put profit in every possible location without any real concern for site or position. Would they choose such a cow if there were any real intent in the city of people, this type of building would never take place.

Those of us who are in the minority and not members of the PBB have been silent too long. Most of us do not have the time or money to run for council or fight effectively in any area. We are busy making ends meet. And so we allow all too many things to be done. Change is going on our own town without detending what nature has been kind enough to bestow on us.

Before the whole area is subdivided and industrialized, why not set aside certain areas, to remain as unspoiled parkland e.g. the west side of the river near Dufferin Park, one of the area west of Sidney which is being completely stripped, the North end of Parkdale, some of the North East end?

It could be done. I do not believe that the taxpayer would resent our countryside stripping if the reasons could be the response if landowners were asked to donate land for park purposes with the proper tax privacy. I can hear everyone laughing, but it is not really a laughing matter. It is a serious matter if anyone caves about children playing on streets, the birds and animals being driven further and further away from Belleville.

No one can be sure that those with the big lots, cars, yachts and cottages do not, and yet they are the ones that the next night make the city something more real instead of the streets of streets. One can see those in England and it is a forbidding sight.

Of all the things we need it is vision, and yet it is the commodity that is most lacking in our community (unless it is all to the dollar).

We need vision to see the lots of trees suitable for the children, and adults 30 and 50 years from now. Trees could be lovely then, but the houses and crowding?

If just one man started the trend toward 'saving our parkland' I wonder if others would follow. Probably. A vain hope—words are so easy, but action and generosity so difficult it seems.

Sad, isn't it?

Round-the-clock Chaplaincy Available to Hospital Patients

TORONTO (CP) — "Instant ice is with accident victims, short-term pastoral chaplaincy" brings every patient of North York General Hospital in contact with a priest, rabbi or minister soon after arrival.

The concept of Father Arthur Chote, Anglican chaplain of North York General, the service supplies a clergyman of the faith or any incoming patient.

"The mind, body and spirit are closely related and all are important in the healing process," Canon Chote says.

"Our specialization is the spirit. Sometimes, where the psychiatrists can't reach them, we can help people burdened with guilt or fear."

Most of their emergency service is the Ontario Hospital Association and Ontario Hospital Services Commission are anxious to see the scheme work.

"One of the things thought difficult was a change in patient's admitting form. We ask him to state his religious denomination, church, and the name of his minister, priest or rabbi.

"About 20 per cent complete the form. Another 20 per cent state a religious denomination. When we contact them, we find they are lapsed members of another or synagogue."

Then, if he wishes, the patient will be visited by his own clergyman, by Canon Chote, or one of the group working directly with him.

Presbyterians Are Interested In Co-operating

HALIFAX (CP) — The 86th general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Thursday indicated it is interested in a project of ecumenical co-operation with the Anglican and United churches.

The Presbyterian College in Montreal was authorized to explore joint ownership of facilities with the Montreal Diocesan (Anglican) College and the United Theological College.

Students of the three churches now take most of their courses on the faculty of religious studies at McGill University.

The joint venture would include combined students' residences now owned by the Anglican Church and the tale of the diocesan college. The United Church has already disposed of its property.

Rev. Douglas Stewart of Ottawa said the proposal would lessen the investment of church money in property. If an agreement is reached, the co-operative residences will open in September.

The assembly Thursday heard a statement from a group of young adult observers which proposed establishment of a "team for youth ministry" as a pilot project for three years.

The cost would be $35,000 for the first year, said Douglas Stephens of Toronto, spokesman for the group.

The youth group also urged the assembly to become "genuinely concerned" with Canada's Indians rather than merely discussing their problems.

In another report, the committee on French work recommended that prospective Presbyterian ministers should be encouraged to be fluent in both English and French.

A regulation in effect since 1938 was abolished Thursday and theology graduates were offered to seek a call or to volunteer for a mission appointment.

The regulation had compelled graduates to spend one year on a home mission field or two years overseas.

The assembly elected John C. Inglis, former general manager of the Toronto Transit Commission, as chairman of the administrative council. He succeeds Mrs. K. Denton Taylor of Belleville, Ont.

Delegates decided to hold the 87th assembly in Knox College, Toronto in June, 1977.

Radical Minister Returns

TORONTO (CP) — A Unitarian minister, who left Toronto 11 years ago after denouncing the city as being populated by "self-righteous" citizens whose only deep devotion was to the dollar, is back.

Rev. William Jenkins, who was regarded as among the most outspoken and radical clerics in the city, went to the United States but became disillusioned with what he calls "racism" and "the growing police-state mentality that can be found throughout the U.S., particularly in cities like Chicago."

Mr. Jenkins feels control of the U.S. by "fascism is more likely today than ever before."

He built the First Unitarian congregation in Toronto into one of the city's most thriving churches and was largely responsible for the formation of two other congregations in the Toronto area: Don Heights Unitarian Church and the Unitarian Church of South Peel.

He says: "I don't want to 'save' anything. All I want to do here is the only thing I've ever been able to do. And that's to help people to help themselves."

Early Dolls Had Religious Significance

Dolls as toys are a modern innovation. Early dolls had religious significance and the word doll, a diminutive of Dorothy, did not come into the English language until the 18th century. Early dolls were intended to instruct the young in the habits and manners of their elders. And it was not until the mid-19th century that dolls began to be considered as children' toys or toy babies.

Dolls are representative of the period in which they are made, and those pictured can in part be identified by their appearances. The doll on the left is a Grebner type. Ludwig Grebner worked in Philadelphia from 1846 to 1874 and his business was carried on by his sons as Grebner & Later as Francis B. Knoll, a successor, until 1920.

In 1858 Grebner obtained the first U.S. patent for a doll's head and his first patent renewed in 1872. His instructions were 1 lb. of paper, 1 lb. of whiting, 1 oz. of glue, 1 lb. of flour and buckram to reinforce the head. His dolls are recognizable by their molded black hair, exposed ears and painted eyebrows. After 1872 he produced numerous blondes as well as black haired beauties.

Many of the bodies for Grebner's dolls were made by Jacob Lacmann, also of Philadelphia. The doll on the left has a peg type arm and either the head or the body appears to be a replacement. Later Lacmann bodies have leather or cloth bodies.

The centre doll is made of rubber. Charles Goodyear obtained a patent for molding toys of rubber in 1853 although examples exist stamped Goodyear's Patent May 4, 1851. He obtained an English patent, as well as the Goodyear Rubber Company continued to make dolls until the end of the century. The rubber in most early dolls has crystallized and the paint is badly crazed, as in this example. The arm and hand treatment is typical of the 1860s.

The doll on the right has the hair style of the 1870s with unusual hands and feet and a facial chip that appears to reveal rubber underneath.

Most large cities have a doll hospital or doll exchange. Often these are listed with hobby shops, sometimes under restoration and repairs, jewellers or antique dealers. Yellow pages in the phone book list Dolls and Doll Clothing and Accessories, although these are usually wholesale dealers.

Besides various hobby magazines which devote space to dolls, there are a number of periodicals: The Doll Collector, Doll News and Doll Talk.

Regardless of condition, all these dolls are valuable. Each more than $100 in the U.S. Modern dolls as well as old are collectible and even the once despised celluloid kewpie doll is sought.

Ann Landers

A Real Hangup On People Who Snore

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a problem I have never seen in your columns. I have a real hangup on people who snore. I know where it came from. My mother was widowed when I was five years old. Two years later she married a man I hated. He snored so loud it used to shake the house. I remember lying awake at night and wishing I could put a pillow over his face or stuff a washrag in his mouth. My mother divorced him after three years and I was so happy I cried.

When I went to camp at age 12, I was in a bunk with a girl who snored. I asked to be transferred to another bunk. The counselor said she wouldn't tell the girls why I moved. I promised to keep it a secret and I did.

I realize I have this thing about snoring and now — at age 18 — I am wondering what if I marry a guy who snores? Is there any sure way to find out before marriage? Please advise. — WORRIED IN HUCHINSON.

DEAR WORRIED: Yes, there is. But I wouldn't recommend it. If the snoring is caused by an obstruction a doctor might be able to help. If there is no obstruction a gentle nudge, or moving the snorer's head to another position usually produces results. As a last resort, ear-plugs can be helpful.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I think I'm the "divorcee" that Lansing mother is worried about. Only I am not a divorcee. My husband was killed in Vietnam. The mother is concerned because her 15-year-old son is spending too much time over here. You said her not to get hysterical — and to have a lowkey chat with the boy. I don't agree with your advice, Ann.

The trouble with that mother is she has done too much "chatting" and not enough listening. The boy comes over to my house because he needs someone to talk to. It's pathetic the way he pours out his heart to me. It's obvious mother-dear will give him a chance to talk.

She doesn't need to worry about his sewing any wild oats over here. I am his "mother confessor" and nothing more. I'm highly flattered that she has such notions. The boy doesn't, so she can relax on that score.

A great many parents feel they should do all the talking. And this is why so many kids go outside the family to express their feelings. Tell it like it is. — LANSING.

* * *

DEAR LANSING: You did and I thank you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When will you stop kidding your readers and tell them that basic human problems are insoluble? At best, one can only learn to live with them.

Consider my own case. I am a reasonably intelligent research scientist (Ph.D) who, unfortunately, married a woman who barely made it out of high school. I've worked hard to achieve something. She has piddled away her life and is content to be nothing more than a housekeeper. There is no meaningful communication between us emotionally, intellectually or even socially.

After three major illnesses (emotionally created) and finally major surgery to correct internal bleeding, I have had it. She refuses to let me go, however, saying, "Whomever God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

Don't tell me to consult a marriage counselor, psychiatrist or minister. I have already done so. The marriage counselor told my wife she has lost her her identity. (She pooh-poohs the idea.) The psychiatrist advised me to get a divorce. The minister said he couldn't see me because he had to go to the funeral of a friend.

I'm sure you can do nothing for me but it might be amusing to see you try. I repeat, "Basic human problems are insoluble." — Ph.D. SOS.

DEAR Ph.D.: Some basic human problems are insoluble, but your problem is neither basic nor is it insoluble. The statement, "She refuses to let me go," is the clue. Perhaps she can make it difficult for you to get a divorce, but she cannot force you to live with her. A man who has had three emotionally created illnesses and an ulcer operation and remains under the same roof with a woman he feels is the cause for his illness needs to examine his need for punishment. She could not have done all this without your co-operation.

I hope you have found something more than amusement in my answer. It provides you with a solution to your "insoluble" problem — if you really want one, that is.

WEDDING

MECHETUE — SCOTT

RAWDON — Rev. Lance Woods officiated at the recent wedding in Campbellford of Janet Elva Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott, Mount Pleasant-Rawdon and Robert S. Mechetuh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Mechetuh of Campbellford.

The bride wore a white street-length gown with lace overlay, short pleated skirt and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Maid of honor was Miss Diane Emery of Campbellford wearing a short turquoise dress with pleated skirt and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Best man was Brian Hughes of Campbellford.

For the reception held at the Skyview Hotel, Havelock, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a rose dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a coral shade dress with beige accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The wedding trip was through Algonquin Park, the Haliburton Highland and Huntsville.

The couple will reside in Campbellford.

Miss Phyllis Doran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Doran, 67 Hastings Drive, Belleville, graduated June 5 from St. Joseph's School of Nursing, Peterborough, and was awarded the Doctor McNulty memorial prize for excellence in Nursing. She is a graduate of Tweed High School.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S WMS

Miss Luella Burnside presided for the last meeting of St. Andrew's WMS before summer holidays.

The study theme discussed by the society during the year has been "Reconciliation". Mrs. R. Jones and her group concluded the studies.

Mrs. V. Weir introduced speaker Mrs. Randall of Cobourg, mother of Judy Joy Randall, a graduate of Belleville General Hospital and Queen's College who is at present a missionary serving in Formosa. "The beautiful island".

Slides were shown taken by Miss Randall showing so many ancient buildings, rice paddies, narrow swing bridges over mountain streams, modern apartments beside small huts used as living quarters, modern transportation as well as bicycles and padicabs, colorful flowers were in abundance.

Mrs. Randall in her commentary made the travelogue most interesting.

Mrs. C. Berggar gave a report on the snack bar at the Hastings Manor, she and her committee are making plans for St. Andrew's group to participate in the coming months.

Quilts made by the WMS were on display and will be sent to the Indians at Kenora in the fall.

Mrs. E. Elridge reported thatthe Rev. Robert K. Anderson at present in Japan, would be the guest speaker at the October meeting.

Miss Neda Matthews gave a few interesting remarks on the general assembly now in session in Halifax. She also mentioned the new Board of World Missions to be dealt with at the assembly.

Miss Burnside closed the meeting.

GIRL GUIDE BROWNIE NEWS

To finally see Girl Guides and Leaders in action, Camp Washee is the place to go! Take for instance the weekend of May 29, under the supervision of the Belleville camp advisor, Mrs. Doris Bannon, approximately 30 Belleville Guides headed for Waupoos; nine Guides were aiming for a "camper's" badge, six for a pioneer badge.

To qualify for a camper's badge, a Guide is given three items — a tent, pole and peg. The test is for the Guide to engender. She records two, helps, and organizes her activities, supplying first of all the food she will need for her stay. During the weekend, she will be tested on tent raising and striking, fire and wood pile, a ground and tree marker, gransgut, and flagstaff. To earn a pioneer badges requires similar planning and work, with the Guides working in pairs. Six Belleville Guides were successful in this badge. The testers' are extremely busy during this weekend, and Mrs. Bannon was assisted by six leaders for this event. The leaders observe the Guides in action, and their cooking ability is also judged after a leader samples a meal with the Guides.

As well as the Guides working for badges were two Belleville Companies out for a camping weekend. The OSD Guides with leader Miss Betty Lalonde, and Guides from Company 2, led by Mrs. Laura Williams.

Brownies were in action too, with the Wauposs Brownie house full. And buses spilled out Guides and Brownies from the area, for a day of "Revels".

These activities are to be found at Wauposs during the summer. Wauposs, along with Guides in action, is also growing in stature as known by any Ranger, Guide or Brownie.

ANNIVERSARY YEAR

"We unite giving honor and praise — to him to whom honor is due." — Martin Martin.

* * *

Upon reading Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Hill's account of a former Belleville tree planting in this column, it is of interest to note the tree-planting in commemoration of the centenary of the Ontario School for the Deaf which took place last month.

"As of May 15," says Mr. Peter Kitcher, assistant superintendent of the school, "632 trees have been planted: 415 by students and 217 by adults. This event is just one of a number that have been taking place since the new year. The main celebrations are being planned for the week of October 20. It was on that date; October 20, 1870, that the official opening took place."

This was an important occasion in the development of Ontario's educational history. It was a fine step forward, and we are told though there were few students at first, the enrolment grew rapidly by the end of the first session.

The year 1970, however, is proving to be an exciting year also for many anniversaries. For example, in the field of Music, this year is the 200th anniversary of Beethoven's birth, and is being marked with varied festivity across Europe, especially in Vienna, where he worked, lived and died.

Not to be forgotten is the centenary of Charles Dickens, the English novelist, whose death was commemorated on June 3 by four 5 - pence stamps depicting some of his characters: Oliver Twist, David Copperfield, Samuel Pickwick and Wilkins Micawber.

On the same day, a shilling 6-pence stamp commemorates the bicentenary of the English poet, William Wordsworth's birth, showing the lake at Grasmere where he lived.

Australia and other countries have commemorated the landing of Captain James Cook in Australia on April 29, 1770, postally by five stamps depicting "Cook," "Landfall", "Landing", "The Team" and "Possession." The last named refers to Cook's landing August 22, 1770 on a small island, which he named Possession Island. Cook's 200th anniversary was observed by Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and Princess Anne as the climax of their tour of South Pacific British areas on April 23.

On June 19 Canada issues a 6 -cent stamp to honor a man it hanged for treason, namely: Louis Riel. The stamp observes the height of his career; seemingly the Red River Uprising which made way to the inclusion of the Assiniboia territory into the Canadian Confederation as Manitoba.

On June 25, a 6-cent commemorative stamp is being released for the explorer Sir Alexander Mackenzie, which features the rock on which he inscribed "Alex Mackenzie from Canada by land, July 22, 1793" during his second journey which led him to the Pacific. He is the exception, in that 1970 is not an anniversary year concerning any of his major explorations. But with honor he adds to the list.

Handicapped May Become Assets

By DORIS CLARE

There's a difference between mental handicap and mental illness. The handicap may mean it fills less intelligence than usual, or it may mean severe enough school inability to provide a good deal of help when it comes to normal living. A child with low I.Q. may need special training or medical treatment.

Of recent years parents of retarded children have clubbed together and made us notice them. Mentally handicapped children have broadened out and our retarded youngsters are learning to use and develop their native capacities. With loving care, and time training they are becoming valuable assets to our economy.

There's a good booklet, about this, turned out by the Mental Health Research Fund. It is pamphlet number six, called "Mental Handicap."

If you want one, write in, enclosing 25 cents. They come from England so there will be a time lapse after you order.

Dear Doris: "Very Upset" asked what she should do because she did not receive a gift for looking after her sister's two children while their parents went on a trip.

Why, V.U., does everything you do have to have a dollar value in it? Can't you do a kindness for your very own sister out of the goodness of your heart? Can't you see how lucky you are to have a sister who loves you and trusts you enough to leave her two children with you? Why isn't a simple Thankful + you = are + you enough?

Most In Politics

RAWSON, N.D. (AP) — Of the 10 residents in Rawson, eight are municipal officials. "If we lost any more people, we wouldn't have enough to fill the city offices," Jerome Seeley, auditor, said. The only people who don't hold a town job are the auditor's mother, Ingeborg, and the 13 - year - old son of Alderman Neil Heggen.

Dear Doris: "Very Upset" should think twice before accepting your suggestion that her sister is thoughtless. She should accept her sister's simple "thank you," with gracious humility. Some day she will be glad she did, as she may find her sister doing her a good turn, and all that's left to give is a "Thank you."

— An Auntie ;-; And Glad Of It.

Dear Auntie: But didn't she do a kindness for her sister out of the goodness of her heart? I'm guessing that her friends have embarrassed her by asking what she got for looking after her sister's children.

After all, gifts are symbols of love. It is a privilege to care for children — half . . .

Dear Doris: My request is to receive different ideas on hair-dos and how to make them. My hair is about 22 inches long and I have no bangs. I would like some different ways to comb it for the hot summer days.

Sadie.

Dear Sadie: A wealth of long hair may be lovely to look at, but it can make a hot day hotter.

So:

(1) Put it up on top of your head.

(2) Put it on top but let the long ends fall in curls, old-fashioned style.

(3) Part it in the middle, pull back a lock from each side front and fasten it with a bow or barrett (not an elastic).

(4) Tie in pony tail.

(5) Part in middle, pull back all hair into a chignon at the back of the neck.

One visit to a good hair stylist for an idea to fit your toolture to your face would be more than worth the money.

• • •

(What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris is the first step towards solving your problem.)

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Jenny hates her playpen. She starts screaming the minute I start to put her in it. I really don't know what to do with her when I'm cooking. She's underfoot if she's not in the pen."

If the playpen is a familiar and comfortable place to play for limited periods, most children will accept it until they're almost 2 years old.

Put your baby in the playpen when she's a few months old, at her most contented time of day so she'll get used to the bars. It's often hard to introduce a child past a year old to a playpen, and have her accept it happily.

A Variety of Fancy Sandwiches

By MARY ARNOLD

QUESTION: Please repeat your Fancy Sandwiches for Tuesday, Mary, May.

ANSWER:

FANCY SANDWICHES FOR TWENTY (repeated from June 1967).

Order 3 loaves of sandwich bread, sliced lengthwise, from the bakery: Pink and 60 per cent whole wheat. Cost: 60 cents each, because they will be sliced on a special slicing machine. For all of the spreading and filling I used 12 oz. of mayonnaise and nearly ¼ lb. of butter. I made three different fillings.

CHICKEN: One 3-lb. frying chicken simmered in water to barely cover until tender; cooled in cooking liquid then chilled overnight in refrigerator so it would be easy to slice.

EGG: Five large eggs, hardcooked by covering with cold water, bringing to boiling point, covered, removing from heat and allowed to stand in covered ½ hr. These were then chilled in cold water and peeled. I put them through the medium-small knife of grinder and followed them with 1 green onion including top and 1 small stalk celery. I added 1-3 cup mayonnaise, 1 tbsp. commercial sour cream and ¼ tsp. salt and mixed them well.

CHEESE: ½ lb. old Cheddar cheese was put through grinder and followed by the pimientoes from one 4-oz. jar. I mixed these with 3 oz. white cream cheese, 1 tsp. each horseradish and prepared mustard and about ¼ cup mayonnaise and mixed them until smooth.

RIBBON SANDWICHES

For these use 3 lengthwise slices of whole wheat and 1 lengthwise slice of pink bread. Spread one side of each with soft butter. Spread one whole wheat slice with the Cheese Filling; put slice of pink on top. Spread it with Egg Filling, putting second slice of whole wheat on top, buttered side down. Spread top slice lightly with mayonnaise and put on. Wrap in waxed paper then in a towel and chill overnight. Sandwiches will keep dry or moist — (I used a clean brick). When ready to serve, with very sharp knife cut off all crusts and cut into ribbon sandwiches about ¾" thick. These may be cut in halves crosswise.

PINWHEELS:

Spread 3 slices pink bread and 3 slices whole wheat bread with softened butter and spread one of each with the cheese and one of each with egg filling. Roll up these four spread slices, starting at narrow end, firmly, but not tightly into four rolls. Wrap singly in and chill overnight. When ready to serve, cut off ends and slice into pinwheels about ¼" thick. These pinwheel sandwiches are very popular.

CHICKEN SANDWICHES

Spread all remaining slices of pink and whole wheat bread with soft butter and mayonnaise — lettuce slice with butter and top slice with mayonnaise. If desired slice the cold chicken as carefully as possible. Cover the buttered bread with sliced chicken and sprinkle generously with salt. Cover slice, wrap firmly and chill and chill overnight. At serving time with razor-sharp knife cut off crusts and cut long sandwiches in "fingers" lengthwise or "slice" off pieces of chicken and instead of spreading cover slice with mayonnaise and the ingredients (about ¾ cup) of the ground chicken and moisten with salt. Spread fat on buttered slice of bread. This ground chicken filling makes sandwiches which cut into neater triangles.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

QUINTE WI

A paper read by East Hastings district president, Mrs. Wellman highlighted the program of Quinte Women's Institute meeting held at the hall on Tuesday afternoon.

The president Mrs. Arnold Mitchell conducted the meeting and welcomed the 22 persons in attendance. After a short business period, Mrs. Ken Vivian took charge of the program when Mrs. J. McLaren gave the motto. Guest speaker who was introduced by Mrs. C. Reid spoke on the topic, "No one is rich enough to live without neighbors" and this was well received by all present.

Mrs. Reid also gave a report on the district annual and Mrs. Vivian presented her with a gift in appreciation of her term as past president.

Mrs. Gladys Lazier told of a bus trip which she and several others had taken to California and other places of interest enroute.

At the conclusion of the meeting lunch was served by Mrs. C. Reid, Mrs. H. Murphy, Mrs. N. Brown, Mrs. J. McLaren and Mrs. Ellis.

Manitoba Leads Way

Only One in Three Canadians Drinks Fluoridated Water

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

It will be 25 years next Saturday since Brantford, Ont., became the first Canadian community to fluoridate its water supply in an attempt to improve dental health.

The action was one of the most important ever taken in Dental Health Week, which, says Dr. H. R. McLean of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Dental Association:

Federal Health Minister John Munro says his department is satisfied fluoridation is the most practical and effective public health measure currently available for safely reducing incidence of tooth decay.

Yet a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press showed only 6,500,000 Canadians—less than a third of the population—are protected by fluoridated water supplies.

Fluoridation has been viewed with so much mistrust that Canada's largest city has no immediate plans to introduce it. A few months ago Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal said fluoride would impinge on civil liberties of citizens who don't want it.

"If fluoridation impinges on the civil rights of Canadians, so do traffic lights," says Hubert Labelle, president of the Quebec Dental Association. "I'm sorry," and I don't see anyone taking them down."

He believes fluoridation should be mandatory.

Manitoba leads in the percentage of total population using fluoridated water—62 per cent. Ontario has 53.3 and the Northwest Territories 51.4.

Ottawa has had fluoridation since 1965 and most opposition seems to have died out with statistical evidence of beneficial results.

Dr. Alan Wu, regional health director for the capital, says all experiments show children's teeth have benefited. Probably some people are still against it, he said, but they are likely against smallpox vaccinations too.

Fluoride goes into the water supply at all Canadian forces bases. In New Brunswick, forces personnel and citizens at Oromocto, Chatham and St. Margaret's—served by water from hand-dug wells—are the only people using fluoridated water.

Fredericton turned it down in 1967 by a 1,804-to-1,409 vote and Woodstock rejected it last summer, even though Provincial Health Minister Norbert Theriault says it can cut children's dental visits in half.

Opponents have called it "poisoning" and "denial of the democratic freedom of choice."

Under New Brunswick legislation, local councils can authorize it by resolution the way Moncton and Edmundston did last year.

In Nova Scotia, the provincial health department has a grant system to encourage fluoride programs. They are becoming less controversial there, says a health department spokesman, "because the weight of professional opinion is so far overwhelming."

Halifax, Dartmouth and Kentville have had it for 14 years and Wolfville, Antigonish, Windsor, Liverpool and Sydney followed.

In Prince Edward Island, Charlottetown is the only centre with fluoridation, following a 1967 plebiscite.

Gander, Nfld., introduced it three years ago by town council resolution. In St. Lawrence, Nfld., on the Burin Peninsula, there is sufficient natural fluoride in the water supply. There has been no attempt to introduce it in St. John's since it was voted down by council four years ago.

But in Corner Brook, fluoridation probably will be introduced in mid-summer. Council there decided to go ahead without a plebiscite on the advice of the provincial government and dental associations.

About 680,000 Quebecers have fluoridation in 72 municipalities —the main ones being Trois-Rivieres and Laval, Montreal, Sherbrooke, Quebec City and Hull are still without.

Residents of Kingston, Ont., voted for it. It was put into the water in June, 1945, but nine months later it was turned down by a 178-vote majority in a plebiscite. During the nine months some people opposed to fluoridation installed wells in their back yards. Others washed the public utilities commission to help them pay for buying jugs of untreated water.

Sudbury, Fort Erie and Thorold, Ont., have had fluoride since 1952 and North Bay since 1965. Belleville has had it since, 1955. Belleville has had it since 1955.

Brockville is one of the communities that accepted it in the '50s. In an examination of the teeth of 6,000 area primary school children, Dr. F. W. Schaffner said their teeth showed a "dramatic improvement" over teeth of pre-fluoride youngsters.

In Manitoba only the community of Flin Flon has turned down fluoridation in a referendum. Brandon has had it since 1952 and Greater Winnipeg since 1958. Robb converted June 1 and Pilot Mound and Hamiota will follow as soon as equipment is installed.

Dr. H. C. McCormick of the Manitoba health department says fluoridation is particularly important in that province because drinking water is used to keep up with the work load now."

Stan Atkinson, a retired Regina businessman who has successfully opposed fluoridation, calls fluoridation a form of pollution.

"We've got problems enough with pollution that isn't deliberately done."

Moose Jaw, Sask., in 1962 became the first major Saskatchewan community to accept it. But Regina has rejected it in three votes.

In Alberta, 35 per cent of the population drinks either artificial or natural fluoridated water. Calgary, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat and Camrose are the major centres without.

Nineteen Alberta municipalities have had fluoridation for six years or more. The capital, Edmonton, has had it for three.

Only 20 communities representing 6.2 per cent of British Columbia's population have fluoridated water.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett has publicly supported fluoridation but says "it should not be shoved down people's throats." His health ministers have not supported it and Social Credit party membership at a 1966 convention voted against supporting it.

Edward Money ran for mayor of Vancouver in 1962 on an anti-fluoride campaign saying: "It is not democratic procedure to douse a whole nation with fluorides in order to benefit a most doubtful few."

Dr. T. A. Murphy estimated fluoride would save Greater Vancouver about $6,000,000 annually in dental bills.

High-fat Diet May Produce Cancer Link

MONTREAL (CP) — An international survey of women on a high-fat diet and experiments with laboratory female rats indicate a link between dietary fat and the occurrence of breast cancer, says a biochemist from London, Ont.

Dr. Kenneth Carroll, affiliated with the University of Western Ontario, said in an interview Friday that a study of the thousands of female rats during the last five years, in which they were given high-fat diets, showed an increase in mammary tumor incidence.

"We also checked into the history of women around the world and found that those who consumed high-fat diets seemed to have a higher incidence of breast cancer.

"Canada was one of the countries leading in the number of breast cancers while Denmark and The Netherlands too were high.

"Japan was at the bottom of the scale with a low incidence of mammary cancer and a corresponding low-fat diet."

Dr. Carroll has a theory that "if we change the high-fat diets to carbohydrate and study the results it may be well worth the investigation."

Many women do a lot of cooking with corn oil, eat lots of butter, eggs, cheeses and other high-fat cooking foods.

"Our tests with rats show that these fatty deposits tend to accumulate in the fatty tissues of the breast."

In the case of the rats, they had been treated by a cancer-inducing compound prior to getting high fat diets, suggesting the effect was related to promotion rather than initiation of the carcinogenic process.

Dr. Carroll says there are two distinct stages for breast cancer.

"The first involves changes in the cells which can lead to a cancer formation and the second is the "turning on" of the malignancy.

"Fatty diets may turn it on in women who have gone through the first stage."

Presbytery Won't Endorse Policy

HALIFAX (CP) — The Presbyterian general assembly refused Friday to commend the federal government for its policy of restraining inflation.

A motion from the board of evangelism and social action to commend the government for its policy was tabled after it was argued the policy was debatable.

However, the government was commended for seeking improvement in the Canadian welfare system. It was suggested that welfare support be extended to the emotionally disturbed, mentally incompetent and those unemployable because of physical handicaps.

Referring to drug addiction, Rev. Alex Calder of Peterborough, Ont., requested a theological study of the significance of drug use and abuse. The assembly supported the request.

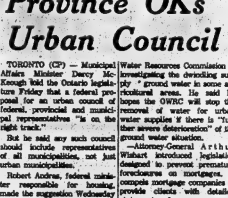
The federal government was asked to make arrangements for further consultation with all interested parties regarding government policy towards Canadian Indians.

Stephen Robinson of Kenora, Ont., said if the government's white paper had come to the Indians 19 years ago, there would have been no "red paper" in reply because the Indians would not have spoken back at that time.

"We are asking the government to go away, to listen to Indians and understand them," Mr. Robinson said. "We as Indians as part of the mosaic of Canadian society and not simply swept away into a melting pot."

Mr. Robinson is the director of a fellowship centre maintained by the Presbyterian church in Kenora.

A "team for youth" was authorized Friday. It will be set up by a special ministry committee and at first will comprise nine field worker in the Atlantic provinces, one in Western Canada and a national co-ordinator.



The youth team will work with local groups in areas of Christian concern that interest these groups. It will respond to congregational requests to provide and train potential youth leaders.

The proposal came originally from 18 young adult observers who for the second time were invited to the general assembly.

James Cunningham of Rocky Mountain House, Alta., said the church "must soon" provide for young people as assembly commissioners, with the full right to speak and vote, if it wants to make progress in its youth relationships.

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"My, you're grouchy this morning!... I did NOT slam the door when I went out."

Province OKs Urban Council

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough told the Ontario legislature Friday that a federal proposal for an urban council of federal, provincial and municipal representatives "is on the right track."

But he said any such council should include representatives of all municipalities, not just urban municipalities.

Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing, made the suggestion Wednesday at the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities convention in Halifax.

Mr. McKeough said the Ontario government has no objection to municipalities meeting with the federal government, with or without provincial participation, but no agreement should be completed or negotiated without provincial participation.

Mr. McKeough said he had not yet been formally approached on the idea by Mr. Andras.

In other legislature business Friday:

—Agriculture Minister William Stewart said the Ontario Water Resources Commission is investigating the dwindling supply "ground water in some agricultural areas. He said he hopes the OWRC will stop the removal of water for urban use if water supplies if there is "further severe deterioration" of the ground water situation.

—Attorney-General Arthur Wishart introduced legislation designed to prevent premature foreclosure on mortgages. It compels mortgage companies to provide clients with detailed statements of any arrears so they can calculate the exact amount of arrears.

—John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, introduced a bill which gives municipalities the right to establish and operate centres for elderly persons, with financial assistance from the province.

Stanfield Says Government's Fault Housing Starts Have Shown Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield told the Commons Friday that the government has bungled its housing policy and created a disastrous housing shortage through its anti-inflation policies.

He was speaking on a Conservative motion—on which there is no vote—calling for new measures before the Commons summer recess to stimulate expansion of house construction, reduce housing costs and reduce or eliminate unemployment in the construction trades.

Mr. Stanfield said housing starts had dropped 43 per cent in the first five months of this year, with May the worst.

Robert Andras, minister responsible for housing, responded with predictions announced earlier that "close to 200,000 units" would be started by the end of the year.

He said "we should get starts of at least 30,000 low-income housing units in 1970."

The minister said three-quarters of the decline in housing starts in April and May was due to a decrease in starts of low-income housing and the impact of construction strikes in Quebec and British Columbia.

The rate of low-income housing starts was depressed by decisions of provincial agencies and non-profit or low-income housing corporations, he said.

Mr. Andras said a committee of officials from the finance department, Bank of Canada and CMHC are monitoring housing starts and mortgage-lending.

The government would consider "remedial action" if things did not go smoothly, he said.

Mr. Stanfield accused Mr. Andras of a "very high degree of incompetence" in his predictions and blamed the government's fight on inflation for the current housing shortage.

He said the government's tight money policy—including high interest rates—had discouraged housing starts and raised prices.

This had led to demands from labor for ever-higher wage and salary settlements, the Conservative leader said.

Mr. Stanfield suggested some "bold and imaginative measures" required to meet the housing crisis: easier terms for Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. loans, abolition of the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials and removal of the "unsettling effects" of some of the proposals in the white paper on taxation.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) Conservative housing critic and mover of the motion, said CMHC had predicted increased housing needs while the rate of housing starts had dropped in the first part of the year.

He called the housing situation "an emergency for people on low incomes and a serious problem for people at the middle-income level."

J. A. Mongrain (L—Trois-Rivieres) said the causes of the housing shortage are not entirely the government's fault.

Also responsible were the rise in interest rates, inflation and the failure of unions to join the government's attack on inflation.

But fellow-Liberal Tom Goode (Burnaby-Richmond) put the blame squarely on the government for the "unforgiveable" drop in housing construction.

The cabinet has made housing the "whipping boy for inflation," the Vancouver businessbuilder and land-speculator said.

He said Liberal back-benchers concerned about housing aren't speaking out and that there are "more plodders than prodders" in the opposition.

'Increased Kinks' Promised For July 1st Motorcycle Races

Spectators at this year's Muscular Dystrophy Benefit here more kinks in their necks than usual.

Faster neck-turning will be required July 1st as Canada's top dirt - track racers tear by the Fairgrounds grandstand straightaway on 750 C.C. machines, a one-third larger engine displacement than ever competed on this Canadian Motorcycle Association circuit.

The six-lap motorcycle race and the half - mile Fairgrounds oval is 27 seconds, with most heats in the 750 and 500 C.C. classes being won in 30 or higher.

But at least two of the anticipated 60 entries will be flirting with 25-second lap times. That means an average speed of 72 miles an hour, much of which is spent cornering.

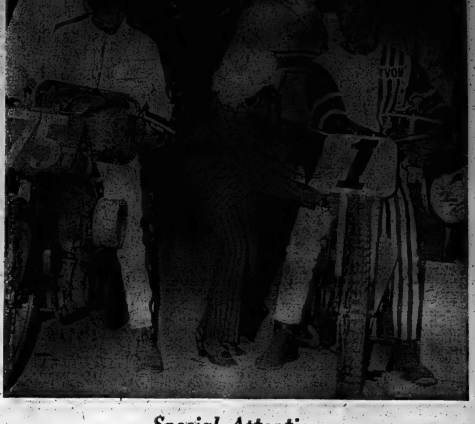
Brothers Dave and Doug Sehl of Watertown, Ont., are each turning laps in the 25-second neighborhood in current U.S. Nationals competition, with Dave driving his 750 C.C. Harley-Davidson to his first U.S. Nationals win last weekend in the 30 - lap Louisville Nationals.

Sehl, in his early twenties, took last year's number one plate away from Yvon Duhamel, the LaSalle, Quebec speedster who has held the honor as Canada's best dirt-tracker five times.

Duhamel's Jawa sponsor has entered him in the July 1 Belleville meet and a win would give him three points towards reclaiming the Number One plate, usually won with a total of 18 points. Ontario go to the winner of the National Dirt Track championships won last year in Belleville by Duhamel and being staged again at the Fairgrounds this August 26.

But Dave Sehl's prime worry could be closer to home.

Brother Doug, 28, has won three U. S. Nationals events this year, Doug is classed as an amateur south of the border, the equivalent of a junior on the Canadian circuit but has earned an expert rating from the Canadian Motorcycle Association.



He turned a 25.9 second lap en route to topping the "amateur" field in last month's Cumberland, Maryland 30-lap Nationals, and will be pushing his Triumph all-out against brother Dave in the expert 750 class here.

The Muscular Dystrophy Races are the next stop for the Sehl brothers after the Columbus, Ohio Nationals on the June 27 weekend.

The following Wednesday, they and about 30 other top Canadian drivers will converge on the Fairgrounds in the third annual meet staged by the Belleville Firefighters' Association, with the assistance of the Picton Pushers Motorcycle Club.

Admission will be $3 for adults, $1 for children under 12, with free parking provided. Time trials get under way at 6 o'clock, with first race on the year's July 1st program scheduled for 8 p.m.

Last year nearly 3,000 spectators jammed the grandstand to help boost the Firefighters' contribution to Muscular Dystrophy research to $1,500.

Special Attention

Canada's number one 1969 motorcycle racer, Dave Sehl, looks on with interest as top rival Yvon Duhamel's bike gets some feminine attention. Duhamel — who was Canada's leading dirt-track driver when this photo was taken at the Ontario championships in Belleville two summers ago —lost his title to Sehl last year. Both drivers are expected to duel at the third annual Muscular Dystrophy Benefit Races in Belleville July 1st.

Rollins Rolling?

Rollins Construction of the city Commercial Softball League got a chance to tear down one of Toronto's top softball clubs, when they take on the Toronto Monarchs, Sunday.

The Monarchs are currently the league leaders in a metropolitan industrial league that is supposedly "about on par with the Commercial league."

Rollins, who are currently holding down second place in the Belleville loop will be backed by the pitching services of Richard Ellis harler Scott Reid.

Game time is 2:15 p.m. at the Alemite Field.

National Soccer Squad 'Circled'

In the only minor soccer league contest played last night, Circle TV outmuscled National Billiards to earn a 5-0 decision.

Britton hooted two goals for the winners with Drummin, Archer and Belleville scoring the others.

Plans Made For Summer Hoop Loop

Belleville basketballers wishing to sharpen next season's shooting eye, or even a few cagey veterans, who would only like to deflate last winter's spare-tire waistline, are being given the chance to form a summer basketball league.

Brain-child of ex-city high school players, Bill Leslie and Bob Moon, the idea is receiving the full co-operation of the Belleville Recreation Department.

"We want to stress the point that it's just meant for having a good time," said Moon, "we don't plan on keeping individual statistics and that sort of thing. We can get our officials from some of the players who are not competing."

Cliff Belch reports that already the Recreation Centre, has received about eight or nine entries. "If enough people are interested in it, I don't think there will be any problem finding someplace to play," he adds.

Open to all senior basketball players, including high school students, the program would be of great help to cagers planning on trying out for university or post-secondary school teams, as well as those interested only in enjoyment or conditioning.

"I've talked to several people who are interested," says Leslie, "if it isn't possible to get enough players for a regular league, I think that we'll at least be able to hold a scrimmage each week."

All interested parties are asked to leave their name, phone number and the night they would prefer to participate at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street, as soon as possible.

Seek Financial Support For Dolphins Swim Club

Trenton residents will get the opportunity to support one of the few sports in which Canada holds its own in world competition, when the Trenton Dolphin-swim club holds its swimathon.

The competition will be open to anyone, confident of being able to complete one length (one) for each length of the maximum of 200 lengths in the two-hour time period has been set.

Sponsors are asked to contribute a specified amount of the 25-yard pool and a pool completed.

Delicate Conditions

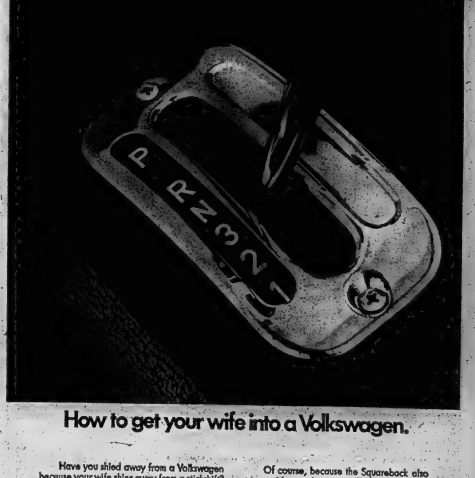
MIAMI (AP) — Race track veterinarians can be expected to know something about the condition of the horses they put their money on, but what about a pregnant jockey?

"I couldn't help but think about those fans betting on a pregnant horse ridden by a pregnant jockey," said Mrs. Bacon, 30 in an interview. "My mount that day was a mare that was in foal. We were last all the way."

Mary Bacon has ridden quietly through her pregnancies. She now is riding at Tropical Park here while her husband John, also a jockey, recovers from a broken arm.



Canada is currently ranked in fifth place in world amateur competitive swimming and to maintain and improve this position, clubs like the Dolphins must remain in operation across Canada.

Members of the club are seeking aid to increase membership, aid in their training program and maintain competition in swim meets.

Participating swimmers will have an official printed Canadian Amateur Swim Association pledge sheet in their possession.

Of the money collected 70 per cent will remain with the local club and the remainder will be passed on for national and provincial use.

People wishing to participate as swimmers are asked to call Mrs. Ewing at 392-6019, Mr. Pearson at 392-6722.

Annabelle Becomes A Mother

Remember Annabelle the Wonder Horse? She's the flop-eared, nondescript filly whose owners, newspapermen Paul Rimstead and Fred Ross, were going to enter in the 1968 Kentucky Derby until she was injured. Now she's produced a successor: a bouncing baby colt born Monday night. (CP Wirephoto)

Laycoe Wants Talent, Not Genius

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hal Laycoe keeps his coaching philosophy in his back pocket on a carefully folded newspaper clipping he picked up when Los Angeles Kings opened their National Hockey League training camp last fall in Barrie, Ont.

It quotes Sid Gillman when he gave up coaching to concentrate on managing San Diego Chargers of the American Football League:

"If'm going to get on top of the talent situation. There are no geniuses. You got to have talent."

Laycoe, the zoodest 47-year-old coach of Vancouver Canucks, next fall will get his second chance to prove he belongs behind the bench in the NHL. He has no reservations about his ability, despite his bizarre 34-game stint with owner Jack Kent Cooke and the Kings.

"I never had a sleepless night in L.A.—I was so sure I was doing a good job," said Laycoe, who spent 11 seasons as a defenceman with New York, Montreal and Boston.

"I really believe in myself and I had a great record in Portland. But 34 games. I became a nobody in one of the world's great cities."

In his nine years as coach in Portland, the Buckaroos finished on top of the Western Hockey League seven times—including the last five years in a row—and won two Lester Patrick trophies.

After 24 games with the Kings, Laycoe was "promoted" to director of player personnel and Johnny Wilson was brought in from Springfield to replace him.

"I think my dismissal was foolish because I honestly thought I was doing a good job," Laycoe says.

"It's just impossible to accomplish a great deal in 24 games, even with good conditions.

Laycoe started the season with one goaltender, Gerry Desjardins.

Defenceman Bill White, "possibly my best player, was sitting at home in Toronto," unable to come to salary terms. Forward Brent Hughes spent the training period in hospital with an eye injury and Laycoe was forced to play Larry Cahan, who was talked out of retirement and was 20 pounds overweight.

"Ten days before my dismissal, Mr. Cooke told me: 'Play Hoganson (rookie defenceman Dale Hoganson), even if it costs us games, Hal.'

"There was never any indication it was wit-or-die."

Ironically, Laycoe had turned down Cooke's offer to become general manager of the Kings, prior to the 1967 expansion draft, instead, he bought a part ownership in the Buckaroos and established a working agreement with the Chicago Black Hawks.

As a coach, the bespectacled Laycoe operates on the theory: "If a fella does his best for me, I'll do anything I can for him."

"The only thing that's ever bugged me in 14-plus years of coaching is that I might do something whereby a player might say: 'He wasn't fair.'"

Laycoe's behind-the-bench humanism is in marked contrast to his blood-and-guts trademark as a player, and it is a well-worn rumor that the late Frank Selke of the Canadiens imposed a "boycott" on him following a stick fight with Rocket Richard in 1955.

Richard was suspended for his part in the brawl—a ruling that led to riots in Montreal—and the story was that Selke never forgave Laycoe, who in his opinion started the brawl.

As a player Laycoe was a "sponge," learning about the game from everyone he could

—Frank Boucher, Dick Irvin, Lynn Patrick;

And he says Boston trainer Win Green paid him one of the highest compliments following a Bruin practice when he told reporters: "Laycoe had the weitest underwear."

"When a hockey player starts with a team, it's like he's opening a bank account," says Laycoe.

"As long as the account is healthy, he's okay. His whole playing career is a series of deposits and withdrawals.

"I think I can give you a real, live quote from the greatest defenceman who ever played in the NHL—Doug Harvey.

"He said: 'You know, Hal, you can't teach them much when they get here. They've either got it or they haven't.'"

Laver Seeks Third Crown

LONDON (CP) — Rod Laver, the well-muscled southpaw from Australia, will again attempt to show any skeptics at the 1970 Wimbledon tennis championships, June 22-July 4, why he is considered by many observers the most complete player ever.

The red-haired 31-year-old veteran will be seeking his third straight title since professional ranks ended a dirty word in 1968 at Wimbledon, home of the premier event on the international tennis calendar.

With his breathtaking footwork, marvellous reflexes, and whiplash backhand, Laver has recently dominated the game, last year winning the Grand Slam for an unprecedented second time. Grand Slam events are the Wimbledon, Australian, United States and French championships.

This year he will be competing, for the £3,000 first-prize money, in the tournament which now will distribute a total purse of £41,650, (about $102,240), up £8,280 from last year.

The lean Australian will be seeking his fifth title at Wimbledon. As an amateur, he was runner-up in 1959 and 1960 before winning in 1961 and 1962.

Tennis commentators argue whether Laver has any point of real vulnerability. His shot equipment is considered all-embracing.

Lance Tingay, tennis reporter for the London Daily Telegraph, has written:

"He combines power and touch to a masterly degree. With this, he has a high mobility, a fine match temperament, and a capacity to pace his efforts throughout the tournament, accelerating towards his finest effort at the end rather than burning himself out too early."

The most dangerous competitors for Laver's title are expected to be fellow Australians Tony Roche and John Newcombe, runners-up to the lefthander at Wimbledon in 1968 and 1969 respectively.

Also considered threats are two-time Wimbledon champion Roy Emerson, another Australian, and silver-haired Pancho Gonzales, 42, of the U.S., both of whom defeated Laver in tournaments this year.

Other challengers include Dutchman Tom Okker, Americans Arthur Ashe and Stan Smith, Australian veterans Ken Rosewall and Romanian amateur Ilie Nastase.

In women's single play, Britain's Ann Jones has announced she will not be back to defend her title. Australian Margaret Smith, a former champion, although bothered by a neck injury will still rate as the favorite. Her rivals cannot match her speed, reach and service power.

Billie Jean King, champion for three consecutive years from 1965, should stroke her way into finals against Mrs. Smith.

Winter Games Good Gamble

REGINA (CP) — The 1971 Canada Winter Games society has been issued a licence by the Saskatchewan government to run a lottery with a total of $100,000 in prizes.

The lottery arrangement, announced Friday by Attorney-General D. V. Heald, is to help Saskatoon, the host city, and the Saskatchewan and federal governments to defray expenses.

Tickets will be $2, sold by service clubs and charitable organizations.

The lottery would be similar to one run now by the Manitoba Centennial Corporation.

Gurney Fills Founder's Spot On McLaren Racing Team

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Dan Gurney of Colts Mesa, Calif., joined the McLaren auto racing team Friday as projects opened for Sunday's race for Group 7 sport-racing cars, the first in the $1,000,000 Canadian-American Challenge Cup series.

Gurney, 37, replaces builder-driver Bruce McLaren, who was killed in Belgium two weeks ago while test driving.

Gurney and team-mate Delta Hulme of New Zealand drove the new McLaren M8D cars Friday. Hulme, despite severely-burned hands suffered in a practice run last month for the Indianapolis 500 race, ran the 2.5-mile lap in one minute, 13.6 seconds, cutting one-tenth of a second off the record for Group 7 cars, set at last year's Mosport One-Afir race by McLaren's Jack Brabham of Australia and Jackie Ickx of Belgium share the official record of 1:13.7.

Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla., was taken to hospital at nearby Cobourg after his Lola T-165 was demolished in a practice run. The car went out of control and came to rest in bushes. Gregg suffered a bruised chest, cuts and suspected whiplash.

The loss of Gregg reduces Sunday's field to 21 cars.

An official's ruling Friday placed the AVS Shadow III into the double-starter category.

A race scrutineer told California's Don Nichols of AVS Shadow Co. that the rear-mounted air spoiler wing on his car does not conform to regulations.

The Shadow, driven by George Follmer of Arcadia, Calif., burned in some fast practice times and was expected to be among the leaders if it was allowed to start.

Toronto driver George Eaton ran into trouble Friday when his Chevrolet-powered BRM car failed to start and did not make it until the track closed for the day.

Eaton, required to qualify today for Sunday's race, has yet to drive the new car a single lap.

Bathgate Leads Hockey Tourney

TORONTO (CP) — Andy Bathgate Friday posted a four-under-par gross score of 67 to win the annual Professional Hockey Players' golf tournament.

Bathgate, who played last season for Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, was the tournament's star for the fourth time. He collected four birdies to top eight strokes.

Peter Ford of Gagetown, Ont., took second place by registering one over Toronto's Jim Morrison after both finished at four-over-par 76. Second place was decided by Ford's better hole score on the back nine.

Morrison is a defenceman with Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League. Ford played defence last year for the Moncton Hockey League's Hawkey Bears.

Steve Atkinson of Barrie, drafted this week by St. Louis Blues from Boston Bruins, captured low net with a 79. His 15 bandicap gave him a net score of 64. Vancouver's Murray Hall tied Atkinson but lost the playoff.

Palmer Second In Western Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Hugh Royer, who nearly gave up the game, and Arnold Palmer, who owes his millionaire status to golf, share most of the attention as the $130,000 Western open golf tournament moved into its third round today.

Royer, 33, of Columbus, Ga., Friday recorded a six-under-par 65 for a two-round total of 132 and a four-strokes lead over Palmer and Bobby Nichols.

Palmer, seeking his first 1970 victory, was the only leader affected by a late-afternoon wind and rain storm which halted play for 80 minutes.

Palmer had to quit after hurriedly three-putting the 15th hole and wound up with a 68. Palmer and Nichols, who also carded 69, had a 36-hole totals of 138.

Vancouver's Wayne Vollmer, one of two Canadians entered, posted a 73 Friday for a final two rounds by one stroke. He shot a two-over-par 73 Friday to go along with Thursday's even-par 71 for a two-round total of 144.

Ben Kern of Toronto was five-over-par 78 Friday, missing the cut with a two-round score of 151.

Steve Reid led by 4 strokes after a first-round 66, but Friday blew to a 77 for 143. Reid is one stroke behind Jack Nicklaus, who is tied with six others 18 strokes off the pace.

Palmer, three-putted the 15th and 17th holes and missed birdie putts of 12 and four feet on 18 and 18 in his round, which included a 28-foot eagle putt on the second hole.

Bunched at 137, five strokes behind Royer, were Johnny Pott, Tom Weiskopf, Don Bies, Dow Finsterwald and Tom Shaw.

Argos Raise Roster

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League increased their training camp roster to 58 Friday with the signing of two American imports, Tom Bland and Joe Lazzilli.

Bland, 29, joins quarterback Don Jonas, a former teammate, as a candidate for the Eastern Football Conference club. Bland played eight seasons in the Continental Football League. A wide receiver, he caught 70 passes for 1,022 yards in 1968 and collected 12 touchdown passes to set a league record.

Lazzilli, 24, is a defensive tackle. A graduate of NorthEastern University, the 240-pound lineman failed to make the grade with Miami Dolphins of the American Football League and finished the 1969 season with the semi-professional Quincy, Mass., Giants.

Soccer Fans in Shock as Mexico Loses Flip to Soviets

MEXICO CITY (CP-AP) — The dims for consecutive soccer has today for the eight survivors of World Cup round-robin play.

Now it's sudden-death, starting with the four quarter-final matches Sunday.

Is the two-day gap between conclusion of group play and the start of the quarterfinals, the teams of Russia, Mexico, Italy, Uruguay, Brazil, West Germany, Peru and England temporously celebrated their victories, calmed their nerves or sought to correct errors and build desire, according to the various national temperaments.

Mexican fans created scenes of pandemonium after their national squad tied the Soviet Union at the head of Group I in round-robin play. The celebration after the team's 1-0 victory over Belgium Thursday went on for a dozen hours, leading to the death of one person and injuries to more than 70, mostly by falls from moving cars and buses which paraded through the streets overburned with passengers.

Those same Mexican revellers were stunned Friday when Russia won the draw to decide which of the teams, tied got only 3 points—had in goal spread, would play Sunday in this city's huge Aztec Stadium.

It was almost cause for national mourning when World Cup officials announced that Mexico would have to play Italy in Toluca. The modest Toluca stadium holds only 22,000, and that's one you can't produce the kind of vociferous team support that 113,000 did Thursday in Aztec Stadium.

The International Football Federation—FIFA—rejected a request by the Mexican Football Federation to play the Mexico-Italy game Monday in the huge stadium here, without closing the remainder of the schedule.

The quarter-final pairings are:

In Mexico City: Soviet Union vs. Uruguay.

In Toluca: Italy vs. Mexico.

In Guadalajara: Brazil vs. Peru.

In Leon: West Germany vs. England.

Seventeen sports writers polled by The Associated Press picked Brazil, West Germany, Italy and the Soviet Union to advance to the semi-finals.

These sudden-death matches will be refereed, respectively, by a Dutchman, an Israeli, a Belgian and an Argentine. None of their countries has a team in competition.

Decisions by the referees—all amateurs who collect only $25 a day in expenses—are of tremendous importance to players seeking the Jules Rimet Trophy, the biggest prize in professional soccer. For that reason many players and commentators have been demanding that soccer establish a new breed of professional referees to handle the game's highly-paid and temperamental stars.

In three matches Thursday, crucial decisions by referees were challenged. England and Mexico scored 1-0 victories on hotly-contested penalty calls. Italy, held to a scoreless tie by Israel, protested that at least one and possibly two goals, disallowed for offside, should have counted.

Many of the eight survivors of the 16 teams that started out here have yet to show their true ability. They played without taking risks, concentrating on defensive soccer in order to avoid surprise losses and keep their goal averages in good shape. Strategy was based more on the calculated possibility of qualifying for the quarter-finals than on putting on a good show.

Now it's win or else. If teams are tied after extra time in games prior to the June 21 final, the winner will be decided by drawing a name. In the final, if the teams finish in a tie the game will be replayed June 22.

At Leon, every German player will be looking for revenge in the replay of the 1966 World Cup final which England won 4-3 in extra time with two questionable goals. The English, on the other hand, will strive to prove that their World Cup triumph was no fluke.

First No-Hitter of Season

Ellis 'Pirates' Son Diego Safeties

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dock Ellis knew he had something going, but the Pittsburgh right-hander needed a slight adjustment and a diving teammate in barring the first no-hitter of the 1970 baseball season.

Ellis, 8, overcame his own wildness Friday night to stop San Diego Padres without a hit as the Pirates won 2-0 in the first game of a National League doubleheader.

He was supported by a pair of homers by Willie Stargell and an acrobatic catch by second baseman Bill Mazeroski.

The Padres won the second game 3-2 while Cincinnati Reds topped Philadelphia Phillies 2-1, New York Mets crushed Atlanta Braves 8-1, St. Louis Cardinals whipped San Francisco Giants 4-1, Chicago Cubs edged Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 and Montreal Expos nipped Houston Astros 7-6.

"I thought I had a no-hitter going after the fourth inning," Ellis said. "A lot of guys don't want to talk about them, but why not?"

Ellis, in his third major league season, now has a 5-4 won-lost record for the year.

He struck out six Padres Friday night, but walked eight and hit one batter.

"The ball I was throwing was moving and I was trying to throw it away," Ellis said. "After the fifth inning, I just tried to throw ball down the middle and I was catching the corners."

The only close call was pinch-hitter Ramon Webster's line drive in the seventh inning that Mazeroski had to dive to make a backhand stab.

The Padres came back to win the nightcap as Danny Coombs fired a five-hitter. Al Ferrara cracked a two-run fifth-inning homer to break a 2-2 tie.

Tony Perez, the major league's home-run and runs-batted-in leader, ripped his 22nd homer, driving in his 65th and 66th RBI, to back the eight-hit, 11-strikeout pitching of the Reds' rookie right-hander Wayne Simpson, who won his ninth game against one loss.

Tommie Agee slammed a pair of solo homers, two singles, and scored four runs for the Mets.

Bob Gibson who won his seventh game by limiting the Giants to five hits, crashed a homer and a double.

Dor Kessinger, a late arrival due to a military commitment, stroked a seven-inning run-scoring double for Chicago to score Billy Williams with the winning run. Ken Holtzman hit his 15th home-run of the season for the Cubs.

John Bateman drilled a three-run homer in Montreal's four-run first inning as the Expos held off the Astros.

Claude Raymond relieved in the eighth inning with Montreal leading 7-6 and Houston's potential tying run on third base with one man out. He held the Astros hitless.

Bateman homered across three runs in the opening inning for the second straight game. The blast made up for a passed ball and a catcher's interference error charged to the former Houston player that led to a 1-0 Astro lead.

ANDY CAPP

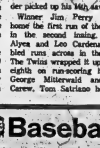
Milwaukee Road Company Meets Success—Finally!

The road company of Milwaukee Brewers, with Russ Snyder in the leading role, finally put on a hit Friday night after 17 consecutive flops.



Snyder walloped a grand-slam home run in the eighth inning, Cleveland pitcher Rich Hand issued three walks with two outs. The Brewers posted a 4-1 American League victory over the Indians for their first triumph away from home in 18 games.

Elsewhere Friday, Minnesota Twins trimmed Boston Red Sox 5-2, California Angels downed Detroit Tigers 5-2, Oakland Athletics tripped Baltimore Orioles 4-2 in 11 innings, New York Yankees blanked Kansas City Royals 5-0 and Chicago White Sox whipped Washington Senators 6-0 on Tommy John's two-hitter.

Milwaukee and Cleveland were locked in a scoreless stalemate until Hand walked Gus Gil, pitcher Marty Pattin and Tommy Harper and Snyder belted his third home run of the season in the eighth inning. The Indians scored off Pattin in the eighth on a walk, a wild pitch and Eddie Leon's single.

The Brewers, a respectable 12-15 at home, had lost 24 of 29 road games, including all 10 in May, and hadn't won away from home since a 5-3 victory in Boston April 28.

The Red Sox, 20-8 in Boston, lost for the 18th time in 22 road contests as Ron Perranoski relieved in the seventh to strike out Mike Andrews with two on base and two out. The left-hander der picked up his 14th save.

RUSS SNYDER

Winner Jim Perry singled home the first run of the game in the second inning. Brant Alyea and Leo Cardenas doubled home runs across in the fifth. The Twins wrapped it up in the eighth on run-scoring hits by George Mitterwald and Rod Carew, Tom Satriano homered for the Red Sox.

The Angels remained 2½ games behind Minnesota in the West Division as Jim Fregosi hit two homers and Billy Cowan one off Tigers' starter John Hiller. Detroit's Bill Freehan homered off winner Andy Messersmith, who scattered seven hits.

The East Division race, which once looked like a runaway for Baltimore, tightened as the Orioles lost and the Yankees won to pull within four games of the leading Orioles.

The Athletics and Orioles went to the 11th inning tied 2-2 on solo homers by Campy Campaneris and Rich Monday in the first for Oakland Clay Dalrymple and Don Buford in the sixth for Baltimore.

In the 11th, Dick Green was hit by a pitch from Eddie Watt. Mudcat Grant sacrificed, Campaneris hit a tie-breaking double and scored himself on Reggie Jackson's single.

Fritz Peterson hurled a five-hitter for the Yankees as he came the first pitcher to blank the Royals this season. Two errors helped New York to three runs in the third inning off Dave Morehead. Danny Cater singled in a run home in the fifth and Jerry Kenney tripled in the seventh—scoring on Bobby Murcer's single—and homered in the ninth.

Syd O'Brien slammed a solo homer and Ken Berry a three-run shot in support of John's pitching as the White Sox only checked the Senators. The only hits off the left-hander were singles by Bernie Carbo in the fifth and Ed Brinkman in the ninth.

A boy in business for himself doesn't worry about summer jobs

Or fall jobs, or winter jobs, for that matter. Because the boy with a newspaper route — a junior independent merchant — has a year 'round income. The few hours he puts in each week not only provide monetary returns but the even more significant dividends of learning how free enterprise operates.

The business of learning the value of money, of keeping books, collecting, buying at wholesale and selling at retail is important. But not even money can buy the other skills acquired from route experience — learning to deal pleasantly with people, for instance, or the value of punctuality.

Your newspaperboy is learning all the time. His route experience helps him acquire the intangible skills so necessary for success both socially and professionally. He makes money as it, too.

Only about one boy in ten gets the opportunity to have a newspaper route. If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by newspaperboy route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

This animal could be the best investment you ever made.

EXTRA SECURITY
Guaranteed Income

Raise chinchillas with the largest and most modern breeding farm in Canada.

Start your ranch with top quality animals fully guaranteed for 2 years.

The demands for top quality chinchillas exceeds by far the supply of pelts available.

Chinchilla's period of fertility spans twelve years; its food cost only $2.75 per year.

A modest investment of $2,150.00 (with an initial deposit of only $780.00) will buy you 6 females and 3 males, cages and food included.

Let Colour teach you to care an annual income of $3,000.00, $10,000.00 or $15,000.00.

SAVE LOTS OF MONEY
BE SURE TO COMPARE
BEFORE YOU BUY

Our prices are far below all competition. In most cases not just a few hundred dollars but many hundreds of dollars. When checking value; determine the size of the respective houses in relation to price.

We have 4 bedroom 2 bathroom houses for the unheard of downpayment of $2,700.00. See if you can equal that any place in town.

Try and find a 3 bedroom ranch split with stone fronting on a finished street in town for less than $22,000.00. We have one.

Investigate the chances of getting a 3 bedroom ranch split level with finished family room on main level. You will find the price to be far above our $25,000.00 range.

Check interest rates. Most of ours are under 10%.

For a real eye opener compare our prices for 6 and 12 unit buildings. You can save thousands of dollars dealing directly with us.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Procrastination, the brother-in-law of Fear. Thousands of patients shy away from their doctor simply because they are afraid of hearing the truth. It is a common human trait. Why hear the bad news when you don't have to? Especially does this apply to the fear of cancer.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I submit I'm a coward. I've noticed a small lump below my lower lip that doesn't go away. I often cut it when I shave. It crusts over, heals, and then comes back again. It also seems to be getting larger. I know I should see my doctor. But I keep putting it off. I'm certain that he'll say it's cancer. What do you call pathological self-help? — Mr. F.

* * *

Comment: I don't call yet anything but being human. Everybody's afraid of cancer — and for good reason. But one thing we often forget is that cancer is curable, if diagnosed and treated early enough. You see, therefore, that what you are doing is lessening your chances of recovering by procrastinating. I think you'll be happy to know that at least 95 per cent of facial cancers are curable if treated early. What you are doing is inviting "late" cancer and its treatment. (All based on the supposition that you really have cancer. We may be in for a decent and innocuous.)

Why do we advise women to take Pap tests? So that uterine cancer can be diagnosed early, if present, and cured. Why do we advise routine chest X rays? To pick up early cancers of the lung so that it may be cured. And so with many other tests.

Early diagnosis promotes early preventive treatment which turns "cold" cancer cells and prevents them from crowding out normal body cells. It prevents the cancer "seed" from hatching more wild cells that migrate and menace the liver, brain, spine and other organs of the body.

I hope I have convinced you, Mr. F., that you have more to worry about by procrastinating than by learning the truth. And bear this in mind. Not every lump is cancerous. After a visit to your doctor you may joyfully skip out of his office relieved in being that the suspected lump is innocent.

* * *

For Mrs. Y.: I agree that tice, mercy, generosity — all the positive drives — are paid extravagant lip service, but, rarely practised except under the pressure of external circumstance.

This seems to be the human condition. It goes beyond politics or ideology. The impetus of evildoers is greed; the impetus of communism is envy; the impetus of fascism is hate. And the common denominator of all is killing whoever gets in their way.

Of course, some systems are better than others, in that they learn from the errors of the past without killing. This is our last great hope.

But it is foolish and fruitless to imagine that any given socio-politico-economic structure can or will transform, or drives from a negative to a positive charge. Societies and governments change individuals only for the worse, turning them into a mindless mass of blind fellow wherever national expediency seems to lead.

Religion ought to be the force that moves individuals to lift societies and governments from a power-base to a people-base. But religion, also, has succumbed to negative motivation. It is split into a score of factions, each faction more intent upon affirming and strengthening its own authority than upon finding a common goal to work for.

This ecclesiastical drive for position and prestige has driven millions out of the churches, and into profound disillusion with religious institutions. It has alienated the young people, who are seeking salvation in their own picaresque (and sometimes perverted) fashion.

The real question, perhaps the only question, for the survival of the human race is: how do we make the leap from the negative to the positive? How do we switch the current so that we no longer need a crisis or a catastrophe or a common enemy to act in brotherhood before it is too late?

If we can do this, our form of government won't matter. And if we can't, it won't matter whose revolution wins, everyone will lose.

Procrastination Can Be A Killer

Sydney J. Harris Says

We Unite Only in Fear

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If you want to know why the human race doesn't get anywhere — why we have increased our technology a millionfold but still live in a primitive social system — it is because we are negatively motivated.

We unite only in the face of a common enemy. We unite out of fear or hatred or despair. As soon as the danger has passed, and the enemy is licked, we revert to our narrow, selfish, shortsighted behavior.

In a flood or a fire or a war, we behave superbly, doing what has to be done for the good of all, subordinating personal comfort for the needs of the community. It takes the worst to bring out the best in us.

The species has not yet learned, however, to be positively motivated. Love, justice, mercy, generosity — all the positive drives — are paid extravagant lip service, but, rarely practised except under the pressure of external circumstance.

This seems to be the human condition. It goes beyond politics or ideology. The impetus of evildoers is greed; the impetus of communism is envy; the impetus of fascism is hate. And the common denominator of all is killing whoever gets in their way.

Of course, some systems are better than others, in that they learn from the errors of the past without killing. This is our last great hope.

But it is foolish and fruitless to imagine that any given socio-politico-economic structure can or will transform, or drives from a negative to a positive charge. Societies and governments change individuals only for the worse, turning them into a mindless mass of blind fellow wherever national expediency seems to lead.

Religion ought to be the force that moves individuals to lift societies and governments from a power-base to a people-base. But religion, also, has succumbed to negative motivation. It is split into a score of factions, each faction more intent upon affirming and strengthening its own authority than upon finding a common goal to work for.

This ecclesiastical drive for position and prestige has driven millions out of the churches, and into profound disillusion with religious institutions. It has alienated the young people, who are seeking salvation in their own picaresque (and sometimes perverted) fashion.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For June 14

Your birthday today: A fortunate year of sound transition and growth begins. Start fresh, resolving to keep things direct, uncomplicated. Arduous diversifications are not likely to work well. Personal expression should be more graphic, precise. Today's natives are usually talented and able to put great faith in themselves and associates.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Make this a memorable Sunday of quiet pastimes, freedom of expression toward the community. Look about; there is something special you have to do.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Personal contact is more important than a letter or phone call. Join in your community's traditions. Let older people know of your regard.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): New acquaintances turn out to be lively and unexpectedly pleasant. Make the most of all the activity. Entertain this evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Take short trips or at the least, a leisurely stroll through your neighborhood in the company of others. The evening presents a festive mood.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Vistas will open for you. Dress neat and well worth bestirring yourself. Collect addresses and phone numbers for further communication.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 23): The unexpected happens and most of it is beneficial. Enjoy this particular Sunday outdoors with your friends. Express yourself to distant relatives before the day is finished.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): Everybody will probably go along with your plans today, so think over all your ideas for revision. Include something for everybody — influential people as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Some personal satisfaction comes from unforseen incidents. Charitable affairs involve your help. Add to the comfort of older people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): — Differences with friends and loved ones can be smoothed out today. Social activities serve many purposes, fill many needs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Now the course opens for a vast improvement in your way of life, perhaps material as well as spiritual. Think bigger, pray for understanding.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Career matters should not be pursued today, but will benefit greatly from an active social life. Creative study may yield exceptional insight.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): There should be little to hinder your free relaxation. Invite friends for a get-together. Don't neglect older people — they enjoy fun too.

For June 15

Your birthday today: Your path through the coming year smooths out according to your ability to adjust to the changing attitudes around you. Career enterprises thrive reasonably well considering outside factors. Emotional ties grow with the sharing of experience. Today's natives are somewhat reserved in manner, capable of specializing in technical careers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Comparing notes with family and fellow-workers brings agreement on group projects. There are chances of improving strategy. Romance blossoms.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The affairs of relatives may require some action. Your co-operation is appreciated and produces good results, but don't expect "thank you."

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Get your work done first, then the lighter side of the day turns out to be exceptionally rewarding. Odd circumstances favor sentimental ideas.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your intuition slides into more energy for creative enterprises. Progress in building emotional security paves lasting happiness.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Think of ways to increase the value of your hourly job doing so, you may find social way of getting around an old problem. Romantic interest increases with the day's incidents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Finish your routines first in order to be free for social activity later. It turns out to be a tremendously successful day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The opportune change in circumstances and with it your enthusiasm rises. A special incident satisfies a long held wish.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): While your energy is at full force, hasten forward with every project. The openings of today will not last long. Ask cooperation from family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Emotional satisfaction comes easily today in laughter and pastimes shared with friends. Any romance now comes to a moment of revelation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): People can be marvelously helpful today, particularly if you have made it easy for others to pitch in. Social activity is exciting in proportion to your state of readiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Under the spell of your present efficiency you can express yourself vigorously. Press ahead with projects. Prepare for a long day.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You should now be able to see improvement in your work from your recent endeavors. Come to agreement with distant contacts, people on the move.

"With His Newspaper Route — Ed's All Set for a Happy Summer"

● DAD KNOWS there's nothing like a growing newspaper route to help keep an enterprising son busy and happy all summer long.

IT GIVES a boy something regular to do each day, assures him a steady income, and offers him so many extra opportunities to make money and have fun, that he's often the envy of less ambitious young friends.

WITH THE pleasing profits from his route, and plenty of hours free for doing odd jobs, he has the time and cash to enjoy summer sports, outings and hobbies! As well as a good chance to win exciting trips and prizes for carriers who excel in sales and service.

IF YOUR SON is missing these profits and benefits this summer, urge him to apply for the first route available in your area. It's an all-year activity that enables him to earn, learn and gain valuable experience — and have fun doing it!

THE PICK OF Punch

PUNCH

"You really must stop quoting that bird, Arthur."

Wildlife Warnings

TWEED (Special) — Nature lovers who are strolling through the woods just now, are warned by the Tweed office of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests to not touch a young bird if they should come upon one.

It is not just, the mother-hen, although there, is likely close by and it is illegal to have a hawk in your possession.

This is the month when the gloss produce, according to Bill Bible of the Tweed office (wildlife).

Another warning, the nests and young of our wild birds should not be disturbed.

The call of the loon will someday never be heard unless boaters learn to leave the bird alone. Also it is an offence to remove eggs from a nest or possess the young of any game or non-game bird unless under the authority of a licence.

Polls Close at 10

Slow Vote Count Expected in UK Election

LONDON (CP) — Britons are likely to know an election night, Thursday, June 18, which party they have elected to power, but hundreds of individual candidates will have to keep their fingers crossed until the next day.

From present indications, about 440 of the 630 Commons constituencies will count their votes Thursday night—enough to establish a solid trend and perhaps even show an outright majority.

In the other 190 or so ridings, counting will not start until the morning after voting.

This is an old British custom to reside or scattered constituencies. This year the delayed count is shorter than usual—it affected 189 seats in 1966—for two reasons.

One is that the polls close this year at 10 p.m. (5 p.m. EDT), an hour later than previously. The second is that the British electorate has risen by 2,359,000 since the last general election, largely through reduction of the voting age to 18 from 21.

A breakdown of ridings likely to be subject to the slow count shows that 104 were Tory-held seats also will be on tenterhooks overnight.

No major national figures are involved in the delayed-action marginals. One of the best known internationally is Brigadier Dorothy Pitman, the fighter for Ireland's minority Roman Catholics and the youngest member of the Commons for generations.

Under the banner of Independent Unity, Miss Devlin snatched Mid-Ulster from the Unionists in a 1969 byelection, but is in trouble because she hasn't been able to hold together the faction-ridden Catholics who initially rallied behind her under the drums of Ulster violence.

Major figures among the delayed results are Liberal spokesman Jeremy Thorpe and Sir Alec Douglas-Home (Kinross and West Perth), former prime minister and now Tory spokesman on foreign affairs; Reginald Maudling (Barnet), Labor deputy leader; and former Tory cabinet ministers Quintin Hogg (Loudon St. Marylebone) and Selwyn Lloyd (Wirral).

No Bands or Buttons for Britain's Vote Seekers

LONDON (AP) — Walk down a British street these days and you'd hardly know an election campaign was in full swing. There isn't a brass band, a billboard, a bumper slogan or a lapel button in sight.

Campaign rallies are held inside schools and hired halls and listeners need a ticket to get in. Prime Minister Wilson makes sidewalk speeches, but to confuse his rivals he refuses to announce his movements in advance.

Early in the campaign, Edward Heath, the Conservative leader who seeks to topple Wilson in Thursday's election, walked past thousands of pedestrians in Birmingham, the No. 2 city in Britain, without shaking a single hand. Hardly anyone recognized him.

Not one poster or slogan hung outside Birmingham's Labor party headquarters where Wilson was leading a campaign rally.

Heath began shaking hands fervently as the campaign developed, but he looked uncomfortable doing it. Even Wilson lacks a certain panache when he finds himself in crowds.

Around party offices in the country's 630 constituencies a few posters and banners herald each local candidate but the fever and hullabaloo of a national campaign are missing.

Once the speeches get started, though, politicians undergo indignities and treatment of in other countries. Hecklers but insults and abuse. This year they've been throwing eggs, tomatoes, bags of flour and glasses of water as well.

Wilson has been the target of about a dozen eggs. Most of them missed and he noted an "inaccuracy of projection."

PM Still Tops at Garden Party

OTTAWA (CP) — If crowds at Governor-General Roland Michener's garden party Friday were an indication, Trudeaumania still runs strong.

Prime Minister Trudeau, wearing a dark blue suit and sunglasses, stole the show at a party which is becoming increasingly less formal over the years.

Men, women, teen-age girls and even many children were out in force, swelling the number to 3,500, and crowds surrounded the prime minister wherever he went.

Shortly after he arrived at Rideau Hall, the Governor-General's residence, the prime minister sat briefly at a table on the lawn with Governor-General Mrs. Michener, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Mrs. Stanfield, and the Danish Ambassador, Hugh Andersen and Mrs. Andersen.

And while he sipped an orange drink and chatted, people pressed around, kept at a distance of a few feet by military personnel.

At former garden parties, Mr. Trudeau has had some freedom from the crowds by joining the diplomatic corps in a special roped-off area.

But this year the absence of the restricted area—along with the Governor-General's switch to a tropical suit and no hat from his formal dress and top hat of other years—helped to emphasize the relatively informal note.

At one point, a white parasol with red hearts printed on it weaved overhead, as Francine Cote, 21, of Cornwall edged in for her autograph. Miss Cote wore a backless, scoop-necked, long gown of material matching her parasol.

It wasn't only the young who she clutched an autograph, 75-year-old Irene Rossell of Ottawa appeared as pleased as anyone.

Tri-service Best Claims Simonds

KINGSTON (CP) — The effectiveness of Canada's armed forces has been undermined by unification, a retired army chief of staff said Friday.

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, army chief of staff in 1951-55, told a news conference after a reunion dinner attended by 450 veterans of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery Brigade:

"I hope the federal government will quickly realize they have impaired the effectiveness of the services and make a partial return to the tri-service system."

He said the integration of the Canadian Armed Forces Feb. 1, 1968, had destroyed the regimental system, causing military morale and efficiency to suffer.

"I have always favored the concept of unification at the technical defence headquarters level, but total integration is a failure."

AUDITOR'S REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF THE HASTINGS AND PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY ROMAN CATHOLIC SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD

We have examined the Revenue Fund and Capital (Building) Fund Balance Sheets of the Hastings and Prince Edward County Roman Catholic Separate School Board as at December 31, 1969, and the Statements of Revenue and Expenditure for the year ended on that date. Our examination was made in accordance with such tests of accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and such other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, these financial statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1969 and the results of its operations for the year ended on that date in accordance with generally accepted principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
FOR THE YEAR ENDED DECEMBER 31, 1969

1. LOCAL TAXATION UNDERWRITING

In accordance with Section 15 of RSO 261, regarding the School Administration Act, local taxation underwrites represent the difference between the total of the assessment requisitions and the requisitions paid during 1969 and the amount that would have been collected if taxes had been levied at the rate of 100% of the requisitions for the year and collected in the year. The amount underwritten in 1969 for the year ended December 31, 1969 will be recovered by the Board from additional taxes during the year ending December 31, 1970 as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Deficit at December 31, 1969 | $ 177,423 |
| Deficit of former school boards as at January 1, 1969 | 3,442 |
| Deficit of former school boards for the year ended December 31, 1969 | 114,350 |

Under the provisions of Section 7(3)(b)(ii) of the Separate School Jurisdictions in the Counties of Ontario, a number of municipalities in the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, and Prince Edward County Roman Catholic Separate School Boards, the Board has the right to levy and collect taxes on the assessment of the Roman Catholic Separate School Supporters in the school divisions or in the area in which the Separate School Board has jurisdiction. The municipalities affected by the Board are listed below. The amounts shown have been collected by the municipalities and paid to the Board during the year ended December 31, 1969. At December 31, 1969 no such arrangements had been made.

| | |
|---|---|
| Trenton | $ 103,447 |
| Belleville | 3,560.72 |
| Separate school purposes | 243.760 |
| Furniture and equipment | 332,533 |
| Portable classrooms | 50,000 |
| | 4,190,000 |

Under an agreement for the amalgamation of the Township of Sidney, there was an outstanding debenture amount to be assumed of $14,338 at December 31, 1969.

4. UNMATURED DEBENTURE DEBT

The debentures now issued at various rates and are repayable as to principal and interest as follows:

| Year | Principal | Interest | Total |
|---|---|---|---|

Computer Will Be Co-pilot For Tomorrow's Motorists

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — A co-pilot in the form of a computer that will tell a driver how to manoeuvre his car is undergoing research at a branch of the University of Missouri.

The research group at Rolla's Transportation Institute is testing a driver-assistance system that will use a small computer and a highly-sensitive sensor installed in an automobile. It would pick up information stored in magnets in the road.

The system may eventually tell a driver such things as whether he is to the right or left in a lane, whether the road curve ahead, whether there are icy spots coming up, and how well he is driving over-all.

The chief investigator on the project is Dr. Ken Dunlace, associate professor of electrical engineering. The system may work in several different ways, he says, but probably something like this:

Magnets will be installed in the road at a certain spacing. The sensor in the car will pick up road information from the magnets and feed it into a computer. The information will be relayed to the driver visually via arrows and dots projected on the windshield.

Dunlapace says the arrows will point straight ahead if the car is in proper position, to the left if a left turn is necessary and to the right if a right turn is upcoming. And the dots will outline the road ahead.

New information could be fed into the magnets each day by highway safety officials, such as what spots are icy after a winter storm.

Agnew Complains Press Telling Only One Side

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew said today telling both sides of a story is "something that has gone out of vogue in some of the major news organizations o f America."

"The price for not presenting both sides of a story is loss of credibility as a public institution," Agnew said. "It is a heavy price to pay for a fleeting exercise in power or influence."

The vice-president commented in remarks to a meeting of the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers.

Unlike earlier attacks on the press, Agnew omitted mention in his prepared text of any specific newspaper or broadcast station or network.

Agnew said he finds it extremely frustrating "that only one side of the Vietnam war is being told by some of our most influential newspapers and television networks and that, overall, their coverage comes off slanted against American involvement in that war without any attempt to balance."

"We are paraded daily all of the reasons we should not be involved and none that we should.

"We read of the alleged American atrocities of civilians in a hamlet called My Lai but virtually nothing of the even more atrocious slaughter of Vietnamese civilians in the major city of Hue by the terrorist invader."

Agnew said newspapers and television are giving Americans horrified accounts of how the United States has equipped South Vietnamese soldiers to fight in Cambodia.

But, he said, "there is virtually no mention of whom they are fighting—namely the Russian-equipped North Vietnamese who have invaded that country by the thousands as they did South Vietnam and Laos."

Hundred Executed In Canton in May

HONG KONG (AP) — The South China Morning Post says at least 104 persons were executed in Canton last month for such crimes as spying and racketeering.

Wall posters have been put up in Canton and Fatshan listing their names and their crimes, the English-language newspaper says. "Many thousands" more were sentenced by people's courts to forced labor terms in the interior of China.

Other crimes for which people were executed included murder, arson, sabotaging production, rape, corruption, theft, black marketeering, profiteering, being a former rich landlord, being the relative of an escapee to Hong Kong and "failing to understand the evils of imperialism."

Fire Razes Cottage
Father, Daughter Critically Burned
C. Rashotte, Janet Rescue Four Others

TWEED (Special) — A 37-year-old Belleville father and his 14-year-old daughter are in critical condition in Belleville General Hospital following an early Sunday morning blaze which destroyed the family's cottage near Actinolite.

Clare Rashotte, 34 Purdy Street, suffered burns to 80 per cent of his body as he led his wife and three children to safety from the burning cottage.

His daughter Janet is in fair condition with burns to her hands and face suffered when she went back into the burning cottage to save a visiting friend.

Two other Rashotte children were sleeping in an adjoining cottage when the fire broke out.

The Rashotte family, formerly from Tweed, had gone to their cottage at the junction of the Black and Moira Rivers to spend the weekend.

Some time before 2:30 Sunday morning, Mr. Rashotte was awakened by the sound of an explosion and found the cottage ablaze.

He hastily woke Mrs. Rashotte and led her to safety through the flames.

Then, dousing his flaming night clothes by diving into the river, he returned to the burning cottage to save his daughters Judy, 13, and Janet 14, and three-year-old son Mickey.

Then with the Rashotte family members safely outside, Janet noticed that her girl friend, Robin Berrinpe, was not present.

Janet ran back to the cottage, smashed a bedroom window to gain entrance and found her friend still sleeping.

The Berrinpe girl suffered burns to her arms, legs and face and was reported in fair condition today by hospital officials.

Mrs. Rashotte and the Rashotte's three-year-old son were treated for their burns but were not hospitalized.

The Tweed fire department with four men answered the call for assistance but could do nothing to save the cottage which was almost down before firemen arrived. The injured were taken to hospital by City Ambulance from Madoc.

Origin of the fire is unknown. An investigator from the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department has gone to the scene in an effort to determine the cause of the fire.

"Where's he off to now?"

Forty Freed To Save Envoy

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters) — Forty leftist prisoners, including several prominent Brazilian guerrillas and a cook who made bombs, were readytoday to fly to exile in Algeria in exchange for the life of kidnapped Ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben of West-Germany.

A Brazilian Varig Airlines jetliner was standing by to take the prisoners on a 14-hour flight to Algeria as hopes increased that von Holleben, kidnapped after a gun battle near his residence Thursday, will be released when they arrive safely in the Algerian capital.

Algeria granted political asylum to the prisoners Sunday after the Brazilian government accepted all the ransom demands of the 62-year-old envoy's abductors.

A problem over the identification of one of the prisoners cast a shadow on the exchange operation Sunday night.

The problem cropped up when the justice ministry announced it could not trace a prisoner called Adnazare Guerra Freitas.

The ministry made an urgent appeal to the ambassador's kidnappers for more details as soon as could find Freitas, and shortly afterward they announced he had been found and that all 40 prisoners had been located.

As the prisoners were taken to the navy ministry in the Rio port area overnight from prisons in various parts of Brazil, Varig Airlines made two jetliners—a Boeing 707 and a DC-8 —ready for the flight to North Africa.

The government will decide which of the planes it will use for the flight.

Dubcek Said Fired by Reds

NEW YORK (AP) — Newsweek magazine says Alexander Dubcek has been expelled from the Czechoslovak Communist party and dismissed as his country's ambassador to Turkey.

An article in the magazine's current issue says enemies Dubcek made during his ill-fated experiment in liberalization as Czechoslovakian leader in 1968 were responsible for his expulsion.

Newsweek says Czechoslovakia's Communist party presidium decided to oust Dubcek at a stormy session last week. Dubcek was defended by Gustav Husak, the man the Soviet Union chose to replace him, the magazine adds.

Husak was heavily outvoted by hard-liners, thereby placing his own position in jeopardy, Newsweek says.

The magazine says Dubcek, who flew home last month to be at the bedside of his 86-year-old mother, may face a political show trial in which he would be scapegoat for his country's worsening conditions.

His fate, Newsweek says, "will depend on whether or not the men in the Kremlin decide to support Husak against the neo-Stalinist Zealots who surround him."

Contracts Shatter Guidelines

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Federal attempts to promote a six-per-cent annual wage guideline in the fight against inflation continued to take a beating over the weekend.

Contract settlements gave 1,150 British Columbia lowbed officers an increase of 28.3 per cent over three years; 1,400 construction workers in Toronto got a 30-per-cent increase for 1970; 180 salt miners at Goderich, Ont., settled for an increase estimated at 24 per cent and three years by their union leaders.

At Toronto members of Local 721 of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Workers, representing 600 men, will receive $3.62 an hour by November. They now are paid $4.70 hourly.

About 200 Toronto concrete ready-mix drivers, members of Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, were awarded a total of $1.19 in hourly wage increases over the next two years. The drivers currently earn $3.40 an hour.

Both unions were granted several additional benefits.

About 300 delegates to an Ottawa convention of the Ontario division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees held a brief demonstration against the guidelines on Parliament Hill Saturday.

The convention approved a resolution proposing the 160,000-member CUPE provide funds for any labor group caught up in a strike against the six-per-cent ceiling.

John Young, chairman of the federal prices and incomes commission which first proposed the guidelines on June 8, took a swing at organized labor in a television interview Sunday.

He said the commission had been working last summer toward voluntary restraints by both labor and business, but that organized labor's rejection of the plan had been "a severe setback to achieving an across-the-board arrangement."

Mr. Young said the six-per-cent guideline should be lowered within a year, a statement which tallied with Prime Minister Trudeau's prediction in an interview Friday.

Boeing 707 Looms Large

The massive tail fin of the Boeing 707 long-range jet looms over spectators waiting in line for walk-through tour of the sleek transport aircraft. The 707 "stole the show" at CFB Trenton's annual Armed Forces Day which attracted a record crowd of 18,000 people on a sunny Saturday afternoon. (See story, Page 2.)

CFB Trenton Show Attracts More Than 18,000

TRENTON (Staff) — Armed Forces Day at CFB Trenton was a dazzling display on a bright, sunny day.

More than 18,000 spectators viewed the annual "open house" Saturday afternoon at Air Transport Command headquarters.

Major Chuck Patrick, publicity director for the event, termed the day "very successful" and noted that many spectators in the record crowd commented "it was the best ever."

Highlight of the day for many spectators — 173 to be exact — was a 45-minute flight in the Canadian Forces' new Boeing 707 long - range jet.

Passengers for the flight — which followed a figure-eight pattern over Prince Edward County and north to Stirling — were those who picked up special "Canada 67" programs on entering the base.

A running commentary by service personnel during the flight enabled the passengers to gain an insight into the flight, and the plane's capabilities.

The 707 lived "down to snow" in another manner.

One of the sleek new jets set aside for walk - through tours was the most popular exhibit of all and drew thousands of interested spectators.

Prior to the air show, many persons flocked to see the displays and demonstrations arranged in number 10 hangar.

There were many facets to the air show, but some of the more interesting included a Caribou — the same model now being used in Peruvian relief operations — demonstrating short-takeoff and short-landing capabilities in the span of only 30 feet.

A pair of para-rescue experts from: 424 Search and Rescue squadron also made an impressive drop, landing almost exactly on target.

The CF101 fighter drew many gasps of admiration, as past and aerial display while the 707 also performed impressively during the air show.

In all, over a dozen different aircraft types and crews an 121I Search and Rescue

Get the Point?

Darts was one of the games played by provincial members of the Army, Navy and Air Force who arrived in Belleville last weekend to participate in the provincial games championship. Other games included shuffleboard, cards and horseshoes.

ANAF Hosts Sports Meet

One of the most successful and largest provincial sports meet was held in the ANAF Belleville clubrooms Saturday. There were well over 100 contestants in darts, shuffleboard, cribbage, euchre and horseshoes.

Units from Ottawa, Toronto, Kitchener, London, Simcoe, Lakeview and several other cities including Hamilton and Belleville had teams entered and the unit sports committee had the program well arranged with play commencing shortly after 10 a.m. and continuing until after 9 p.m.

The many handsome trophies were presented by Cdr. Ed Nicholson at 10 p.m. and then the draw for the hi-fi took place with Mrs. C. Sprague, 171 Front Street, Belleville the winner and the day ended with a dance.

The winners of the various trophies are as follows:

Shuffleboard: F. Hoke and A. Strack; J. Oleinder and B. Wixon; T. Francis and B. Murray, all from Kitchener.

Darts' singles and overall winner: T. Smith, Kitchener.

Dart team play: T. Smith, R. Hale, B. Hagarth, D. Kuehl, B. Guckenberger and A. Sinclair from Kitchener.

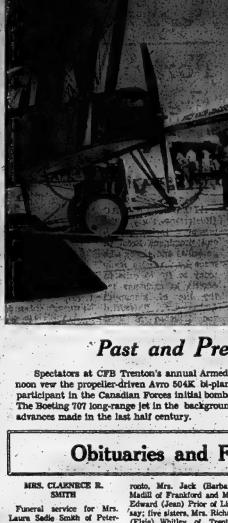
Horseshoes singles: C. Taylor, Simcoe.

Horseshoes team: E. Janicker and H. Gilbert, Simcoe.

Cribbage singles: T. Lipperton, Lambton Unit, Toronto.

Cribbage team: I. Bowley and C. Lawday from the Duke of Edinburgh Unit, Belleville.

Euchre B team: H. Whitall and A. Drewery from Lakeview.



At the conclusion of the presentations provincial sports chairman Rennie Crawford gave a short speech of thanks to the host unit complimenting them on a well organized day and the hospitality shown both by the club and the Belleville citizens. President Dick Burns replied in a suitable manner and turned the Tartan Day affair over to the visitors for songs and dancing.

Overdose Accident Factor

PICTON- (Staff) — A coroprescribed medication could ner's jury inquiring into the traffic death of Irene McCrimmon, 39, Main Street, Picton, agreed that an overdose of it have been a contributing factor in the accident that claimed her life.

Mrs. McCrimmon collided with a car driven by Gilbert Hale, 18, RR3, Picton, near the intersection of Main and Washburn Streets on April 9. Taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital, she died less than an hour after the accident. It was reported during the inquest by Coroner Dr. C. R. Richmond that Mrs. McCrimmon, under a doctor's care at the time, had taken an overdose of prescribed medication. Crown Attorney Richard Sheehy said the following day that evidence indicated Mrs. McCrimmon was to some extent "slowed down" by the medication.

The five-man coroner's jury recommended that doctors give prescriptions sheets for smaller quantities of drugs. A second suggestion supported improved lighting in general area of Main and Washburn streets where the accident occurred. Gilbert Hale, driver of the car which struck Mrs. McCrimmon was absolved of all responsibility in the incident.

Past and Present

Spectators at CFB Trenton's annual Armed Forces Day Saturday afternoon view the propeller-driven Avro 504K bi-plane, designed in 1913 and a participant in the Canadian Forces initial bombing raid during World War I. The Boeing 707 long-range jet in the background illustrates the aviation advances made in the last half century.

Faulkner Works In Napanee

NAPANEE— Works by Belleville artist Philippa Faulkner have been on exhibit here — attracting the attention of a steady succession of visitors to the Allan Macpherson house.

The paintings are a variety of works — mainly of scenery in the Belleville-Napanee area, including one of the main street of Newburgh.

More than 200 elementary students and tourists were among recent visitors to the exhibition.

Gerald Robert Desford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Desford of Springbrook, received his Bachelor of Arts degree in religious studies and sociology at Waterloo Lutheran University recently.

Gerald plans to enter Queen's Theological College, Queen's University, Kingston in September to further his study for the United Church ministry. He has accepted the Sydenham United Church charge and he and his wife will move there July 1 to assume his duties.

Obituaries and Funerals

The interest free loan granted under the province's Equalization of Industrial Opportunity Program will not have to be repaid provided the company meets certain conditions over a six year period.

Want Welfare Repaid

Claimants for unemployment insurance benefits should repay welfare monies received while waiting for their initial benefits.

This is the feeling of Hastings county council which has passed a resolution asking that the provinces consider amendments to present regulations to provide for the repayment.

It was pointed out that claimants for unemployment benefits are required to wait a qualifying period before receiving benefits. In the interim they often find it necessary to apply for general welfare assistance.

The resolution asks for an amendment under the act to provide for repayment of these monies either directly by the recipient or from unemployment benefits for which the recipient may be eligible.

15-year-old Driver Injured in Crash

TWEED (Special) — Michael Provost, 35, of RR2, Thomasburg, is in Belleville General Hospital with chest injuries following a head-on crash Saturday afternoon with another vehicle on county road 8.

The driver of the second vehicle, Daisy Jordan, 15, of Flint, Michigan, had five teeth knocked out and suffered a broken kneecap and lip lacerations but was treated and released.

The grinding head-on smash took place on the top of a sharp knoll on what is known as the "beck" road to Stoco.

Damage estimated at $1,500 resulted to each of the two vehicles.

Passengers in the two cars, Marsha McCoy, 16, of Flint, and Mrs. Provost's son Leon escaped with little more than a shaking up.

Instruction for New Flyers

Francis Lenk, glider student, Hillory Brown, glider student, and James Wright, power student, listen to some instruction by glider instructor, R. B. Mason, at the Belleville Flying Club yesterday.

15-year-old Qualifies For Glider Licence

There's a new idea in summer recreation for young people who yearn for adventure and the facilities are waiting at the Belleville Flying Club.

Officials at the club hope to initiate a special summer set up for young people who want to take flying lessons. The decision has been prompted by the number of young people that have already shown interest.

Yesterday The Intelligencer arrived at the Belleville Flying Club as one such student was soaking in the club's glider.

Francis Lenk, 15, has been soloing for two weeks, in preparation for receiving his glid er licence in September when he is 16 years old.

"I started this year around March," he explained. "I came down to the flying club intending to take power flying but I wasn't old enough. I decided to take gliding."

And he's been at it ever since, arriving at the club every Saturday and Sunday to take lessons from his instructor, R. B. Mason.

His requirements for a licence include 20 solo flights or three hours in the air.

"I always wanted to see what flying was like. I went up for an introductory flight in the glider and I liked it."

Francis, a Moira Secondary School student, does not intend to stop at his glider licence. When he is 16 he hopes to take up power flying.

Investigation Clears Picton Schoolteachers

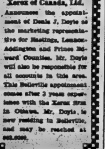
PICTON (Staff) — A police investigation of a grade eight student's allegation that he had been mistreated by teachers at Queen Elizabeth school has provided "no evidence capable of being corroborative of these serious allegations," according to Crown Attorney Richard Sheehy.

Mr. Sheehy reopened his investigation of complaints by Donald Bates, a 15-year-old pupil at Queen Elizabeth school when the boy produced a petition alleging mistreatment by teachers circulated by 15 of 30 among fellow students and signed by 14 of them. The Crown Attorney remarked at the time that he would be remiss if he did not reopen the case closed earlier because of insufficient evidence.

A member of the Picton police force, Constable Harry Sisty was assigned to fully investigate the allegations that students in senior grades were being beaten by four teachers.

The report of his findings was delivered by Const. Harry Sisty to the Crown Attorneys office at noon Saturday.

After reading the report Mr. Sheehy said, "Following a very thorough investigation with which I am completely satisfied, there is no corroborative evidence substantiating these serious allegations by the boy (Bates)." He added that parents, teachers, students and others had been interviewed by Constable Sisty during his investigation.



Incorporating facts disclosed by Const. Sisty's investigation, Mr. Sheehy will submit a report to the director of public prosecutions "for whatever disposition he sees fit to make of it."

The Crown Attorney added that, with the submission of his report, the investigation will close at his office. All future information must come from the offices of the Department of Justice.

Learning the results of Constable Sisty's investigation, Robert Bates, father of the boy who complained of repeated mistreatment from his teachers, declined to comment. Earlier reports stated that Mr. Bates has retained Picton attorney Jack Ward to act in his son's behalf.

National Grocers on Strike In Nine Ontario Centres

Employees of National Grocers Ltd. at nine locations including Belleville are out on strike following a breakdown of wage negotiations.

Eight branches of the chain closed last week due to strike action by the Teamsters' union and the 11 members of local 91, Belleville, walked off the job at 9 p.m. Sunday.

Affected are the drivers and warehousemen who belong to the union.

They have been offered an increase of $1.30 an hour and benefits which would amount to a $5.31 hourly wage at the end of three years. The union is asking for the same wage and benefit package over a two-year period.

Under the contract which expired April 1, 1970, warehousemen were earning $3 an hour and benefits amounting to another 91 cents, for a total wage of $3.91 an hour.

Drivers' rates were 5 cent an hour higher with the same benefits.

"Overtime was time - and - half and double time for weekends and holidays and the early hours of most employees," said William Slade, manager of the Belleville branch, this morning.

Mr. Slade said the company's offer amounts to a 36 per cent increase over the three-year period of the contract.

"In the light of business conditions and the pressures on the food sellers' profits, the company feels its offer has been very generous," the manager said.

Mr. Slade noted that the federal government has requested business and labor to try to "hold down prices and wages.

"It appears that any settlement at the current union request will inevitably lead to food price increases," he remarked.

Other centres where workers went out on strike last week are Kingston, Pembroke, North Bay, Windsor, Chatham, Casselman, Sarnia and Niagara Falls.

National Grocers is part of the international Weston organization which also owns the Loblaws supermarket chain.

Soap Box Derby Draws Big Crowd

At least 400 people were on hand Saturday afternoon on the Catherine Street hill for the racing and custom showing event handled by the Road Angels Rod and Custom Club.

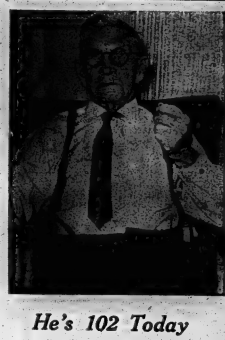
About 30 youthful hotrodders showed up to display their cars and to race down the hill, while the spectators cheered, to eliminate their competitors.

And the derby had almost all the thrills of motorized racing, from strategic driving to spinouts and collisions.

The heats were run with two cars participating in each. Winners were chosen by process of elimination until the final heat featured the two best derby racers.

In the junior heats, run first, Brian Green was the winner. Runner up in the junior category was Jim McArdle.

In the senior ranks Harold Steenburg took top honors with last year's winner, Brian Allore, racing to a second place finish.



Loot for the winners was donated by local merchants and the Road Angels Rod and Custom Club.

The winner in the junior class was awarded a trophy, a premium coast braker bicycle and a helmet racing jacket.

The senior winner also received a bicycle and a helmet racing jacket.

Other prizes included trophies for the best constructed car and free flights in airplanes as well as food vouchers and cases of drinks.

The Road Angels were acclaimed for the safe, competent handling of the derby.

He's 102 Today

John B. Bruyea was born on June 15, 1868 in Murray Township near Wooler and lived there until he came to Belleville. He has been a resident of the Shepherd Nursing Home at 259 Albert Street since September 30, 1969. The folks at the home will be holding a party for him this afternoon and there's a good chance he can be coaxed to sing, which he does remarkably well. Music seems to come naturally to him, although he finds it difficult to play the violin any more.

Arts Council To Meet Tuesday

The Quinte Arts Council will hold its annual meeting Tuesday night at Centennial Secondary School, it was announced this morning.

Guest speaker for the event, will be J. M. Porter, president of Sheridan College of Applied Arts and Technology.

Mr. Porter, a former teacher and director of education for Galt, will discuss the arts and education, with some references to the well-known Sheridan School of Design.

A Comparison

Here is a brief look at aspects of life in three countries which have assorted social and political problems. In the case of two of them they are seen through the eyes of prominent personalities.

Gary Player, back home from another successful tour of the United States golf circuit, has been quoted as saying: "South Africa is the best country in the world to live in. It is free from race riots, campus troubles, and still maintains discipline and law and order.

"What's more I think we have a greater love for and understanding of the non-white people in this country than they have in America for their Negroes."

The golfer says nothing about the undoubted absurdities of many aspects of apartheid, or about the republic's political prisoners. His says nothing about police repression. Nevertheless the widely-travelled golfer more than most of us is in a position to judge the situation in both his own country and the U.S. Consequently his appraisal is not to be taken lightly.

Meanwhile here is what Samuel Beckett, Irish-born Nobel prizewinner for literature and author of Waiting for Godot and other works thought of New York on a recent visit: "People look so unhappy here. Young housewives carry about them a sense of despair, and I sense a great hostility in the faces of men.

"It is the weight of every man's fear and emptiness that produces this look. He must know when he faces himself, he is looking into the abyss. He must know that self-perception is the most frightening of all human observation."

And lastly, Sweden, which with one of the highest standards of living in the world tends to look smugly at the problems of racism and violence elsewhere. But Sweden itself has no race problem, being a conveniently homogenous, white society. It does however suffer from the problems that accrue from affluence, permissiveness, cradle-to-the-grave State welfarism and the flabbiness of character that stems from lack of challenge and the fact it has not had to fight a war in a very long time.

Thus, it was not surprising that on a recent weekend, when overworked Stockholm police, fed up among other things with guard duties against anti-U.S. and other demonstrators, went on sick leave, the city's young bums (in Sweden they call them "raggere") went on a rampage of looting and wrecking, burglaries, holdups and assaults.

But still the international political posturing goes on, with one country slinging off at another, and whole groups of countries calling in question the policies of another, forgetting that politics and the unsettled squalor life of people have little in common. Let him who is without blame, in other words, cast the first stone.

In the Money

What does a bread-and-butter player on the Professional Golfers' Association tour have in common with, the captain of a 747 "jumbo" jet?

They make the same kind of money, that's what. Even though a golfer like Charles Coody is not often seen in the winners' circle, he has won more than $50,000 in each of the last three years. That is the way it is on the pro tour; you can be say in the first ten at the end of a tournament but still wind up with a fat cheque.

And $50,000 a year — now, that is more than Prime Minister Trudeau makes, and a lot more than our highly-paid directors of education receive.

As for the jumbo jet pilots, senior captains on American 747s are reported to have agreed to accept a salary of $59,000 including allowances. They are far and away the highest paid among this new breed of flying men. A BOAC senior captain will get £11,400 ($27,560) and Lufthansa will pay its top men up to $24,400.

To get back though to Charles Coody. He was the subject recently of an interview by Alan Grayson of The Christian Science Monitor. "On Commonwealth airline pilots say they are not only among the world's best but excel in certain spheres. Canada's George Knudson, he thinks, is probably the best driver on the tour — as regards long hitting that is. And Bob Charles of New Zealand is his choice for putting. Not surprisingly, he also singles out Palmer, Nicklaus, Player and Casper as well as Dan Sikes, Frank Beard and Chuck Courtney as the best strikers of the ball with various clubs.

Hitting an airplane . . . or the pro golf circuit. They are both interesting ways to make a living. And lucrative into the bargain.

A Positive Approach to Summer Employment

Ottawa Journal

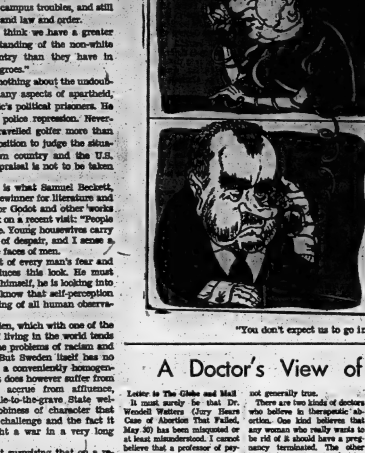
Students seeking summer holiday employment are entering the job market in difficult times.

Manpower Minister MacEachen told the House on May 4: "Taking both secondary and post - secondary categories, we expect that approximately 941,800 students may be seeking employment, the largest such an increase of 60,000 over last year."

The United Student Employment Mission (USEM), co-ordinating placement of Ottawa and Hull students, lists 7,000 job seekers, estimates 8,000 more are looking on their own, not 10,000 will be added when high schools close.

USEM says general arts students with no particular skill are hardest to place. Placement services across the country report engineers, geologists, commerce, science students easiest to place.

For the general students who find the job door shut, some particular skill might help open it. It need not be exotic; it may be gardening, window washing or car washing. But the skill would put the student in the position where he can say "Here's what I can do for you," as opposed to "What have you for me?"



Perhaps the job scarcity is overstressed. Students can gain valuable experience in volunteer work and get a reference that will help secure a paying job later. In Ottawa, the central volunteer Bureau of the Social Planning Council has a register for 500 in clerical work, playground and daycamp supervision, hospital clinics, assisting the retarded or elderly.

For parents, the unemployed student cannot appear to be a burden but responsibility for his support still rests with them. The jobless student can't properly be considered part of the country's "unemployed".

For the student, who doesn't find a job, a new world opens up if he will but name it. Libraries, art galleries, museums can offer a wealth of mental stimulation; beaches, tennis courts, cycling offer exercise and the scenery near the cities. Short, seasonal work might be found on area farms.

We have little sympathy for the well-fed young men and women who whine that there's "nothing to do." Have they taken any time to watch Parliament in action, or the Supreme Court, or County Court? Have they attended City Council meetings, gone to the free education courses at the Art Gallery, watched skilled carpenters or mechanics at their trades? Are they reading persistently or leisurely, do they find it hard to budget between the libraries through the Experimental Farm, the Mint, the Archives, the National Aeronautical Collection at Rockcliffe Airport, the new Museum of Science and Technology?

Some of the greatest men of history and today had no summer vacations. They had continuity, energy and ambition. A summer vacation is all these and pay more than any summer job we know. It is the annual generation of a real job need year.

"You don't expect us to go in pursuit of peace unarmed?"

A Doctor's View of Therapeutic Abortion

Letter to The Globe and Mail

It must surely be that Dr. Wendell Watters (Jury Hears Case of Abortion That Failed, May 30) has been misquoted or at least misunderstood. I cannot believe that a professor of psychiatry at McMaster University would make such an irresponsible and inaccurate statement as that Canada's liberalized laws make abortions almost rubber stamp affairs. While this may be so in some places it is not generally true.

There are two kinds of doctors who believe in therapeutic abortion. One kind believes that any woman who really wants to be rid of it should have a pregnancy terminated. The other kind believes that the decision should be governed by the law of the land and that therapeutic abortion should be carried out only when the doctor genuinely believes continuation of the pregnancy will seriously endanger the life and health (physical and mental) of the woman. The decision is now made by a majority of at least three doctors — the hospital therapeutic abortion committee.

The implications are obvious. If two or more of the committee belong to the first group, "rubber stamp" authorizations will be the rule; but not otherwise. I suggest Professor Watters examine the records of the therapeutic abortion committees of a representative number of hospitals, and compare the proportion of authorizations and refusals.

The doctor of humanitarian bent will seek a reason for justifying a therapeutic abortion in the eyes of the law in all its aspects. Since many are healthy young women, sound in body and mind except for a natural disturbance of the emotions due to the unwanted pregnancy, it is only in this realm of psychiatric disease that an excuse can be found for terminating the pregnancy. (As one patient said to me, "Do I have to attempt suicide before you can do anything for me?") Consequently, the psychiatrist is asked to apply the rubber stamp.

But it is the committee that decides.

A woman wanting an abortion must first find a doctor who is willing to make out a case and present it to the therapeutic abortion committee. She must then see a complaisant psychiatrist. And her doctor must be sure the committee who considers her case contains a majority of his colleagues who are humane rather than law-abiding.

The "liberalization" of Canada's abortion laws has expanded rather than eliminated the deceit by which therapeutic abortions are arranged, and in some places has made it more difficult for a woman to escape from what is often a terminally distressful situation.

Young Seek Identity In Unsympathetic World

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Referring to the frequency of news reports on student demonstrations and protests I am of the opinion the dissenters form a minority group. Their protests obviously are aimed at focussing public attention on themselves. I do not know which of two adages is most applicable — "the squeaky wheel gets the grease" or "an empty bottle makes the most noise" but it tend to favor the latter.

The adults are not faced with the problem of bridging the so-called generation gap. They have already done so through the simple (and, we hope, inevitable) process of reaching maturity.

Much of the student unrest stems from a lack of identity. The young people have not discovered the freedom that is experienced when they dare to become an individual. They are strict conformists who mass together to enjoy whatever sense of security is derived from association with other equally insecure youths. Their conformity to dress, hair styles, language and radical viewpoints supports this opinion.

The unrest and dissatisfaction they blame on society is really an internal problem of the few who are dissatisfied with society at being suspended between childhood and maturity and are seeking their own identity. Most have not considered what they want and they only know what they do not want — discipline, criticism, authority and in a number of instances, responsibility.

They protest that adults do not understand them, that we ignore them and do not care about them, and that we fail to recognize their problems. To the majority of the young people, these "problems" are not insurmount able. To a few they are crucial and insoluble.

The dissenters fail to recognize that adults too have problems — and one of these is the care and maintenance of the young. I'm tired of the ones who criticize and rebuke the adult society that supports them. They want us to provide for them materially but they offer nothing in return. We must be willing to accept their bad manners, unkempt bodies and sick notions of them. If we rebel at their abuse we are accused of being "down" on the young. Most of us are not against the young — and we do not think most of the young are "down" on us. We are just weary of the ones who are and it's no fun for us to be a football fr them to kick around as they choose. We're tired of feeling the guilt they try to put

John Gunther's Prolific Genius

Christian Science Monitor

A generation of Americans have a livelier appreciation of world realities and problems, thanks to John Gunther, whose career has just come to a close. His "Inside" books — "Inside" Europe, Asia, Africa, Russia, Latin America, U.S.A. — and three and one - half million copies and 18 of his books were translated into 30 languages. Reading John Gunther gave millions a "none ever light" education.

He had a flair for making instant history readable, even exciting. This was not only because he could spot the colorful off-beat fact. He knew what the public would relish, but he also had a zeal to tell people what they ought to know — about Adolf Hitler or the newest African potentate.

The Gunther books were not in-depth studies, they were gossipy, and he sometimes got a fact wrong. Sometimes the superficialities stuck in one's mind — such as the statement that in Eastern Europe people look first at a person's shoes, to judge his status. (Is that a superficiality?). Yet those who read his detailed summations, interpretations, were furnished and understandable world than the institutionalized dispatches of routine journalism often revealed.

Quebec Premier's 'Economic Federalism'

Montreal La Presse: Unlike the Union Nationale predecessors, the new Liberal leader (of Quebec) went to the federal-provincial finance ministers' conference in a spirit of complete co-operation with Ottawa and the other provinces.

He spoke calmly and like a technician, leaving it to Ontario to raise its voice this time. His conciliatory attitude, better than past ultimatums, apparently led the federal government to increase funds which will enable Quebec to avoid raising taxes, at least during the present fiscal year.

In any case, Mr. (Robert) Bourassa's statement in Winnipeg is the best possible illustration of what he means by "the new economic federalism," the means the new Quebec administration intends to use to get the province rolling financially. . . .

Like his Ontario counterpart, Mr. Bourassa notes that the white paper proposals would bring more revenues to the federal government. But the needs of the provinces in the fields of education, health, welfare and urban development are increasing at a much faster rate than are the spending programs under federal jurisdiction.

Mr. Bourassa stated that regional development programs, like that of Sic. Scholastique (site chosen for the new Montreal airport) . . . should certainly be welcomed. But it should be remembered that such programs bring only long-term benefits, and that they entail increased spending by the province on services and planning. . . .

In the last part of his text, Mr. Bourassa sets out to demonstrate that the distribution of tasks between the provincial government and the municipalities varies from one province to another, in consequence, it is necessary to improve gradually the technique of distributing wealth among the various regions of the country.

Postal Conflict It's Time for Settlement

Granby La Voix de l'Est: It is always painful to see intelligent men, aware of their responsibilities, who are unable to reach agreement.

In the postal conflict, for example, both sides have dragged on for several months.

The government and the postal workers have had recourse to conciliators and finally, following more negotiations, to a mediator. Now even this man admits his defeat. It is impossible for him, at least in his own opinion, to find a compromise acceptable to both parties.

And yet this compromise exists, and in the final analysis will have to be reached some day. Whether we have rotating strikes or a general strike, a development which is not viewed favorably is inevitable.

The gap between the offer and the demand is not so wide at this point that it could not be bridged somehow with a little goodwill. Only obstinacy, stubbornness can explain the present conduct. . . .

River Litter Lifters

Three members of the Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce pick litter from the Moira River in downtown Belleville during Saturday's "litter lift" day sponsored by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Litter Lift Saturday A Shocking Success

Saturday's "litter-lift" day, sponsored by the Moira River Conservation Authority was a shocking success.

In Belleville alone, public school children gathered up an estimated 18 tons of litter.

Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce members pulled more than a ton of debris from the Moira River, while public school children in Madoc, Tweed and other parts of the watershed, collected proportionate amounts of litter.

School children filled plastic bags with litter picked up all around the city.

The Jaycees picked their way down river from 401 highway and filled a truck to overflowing. When time ran out at noon, the litter pickers still had a considerable length of the riverbank in downtown Belleville to clean up.

Heavy litter from the river such as floating logs, metal bedsprings and other cumbersome articles was piled on the river bank for later pickup by the city parks department trucks.

Parks superintendent Lloyd Sye said the three-ton parks department truck hauled more than three loads of litter to the city dump from schoolyard collection sites.

"I figure there was more than 10 tons of litter picked up in Belleville by the school children.

The "litter lift" day was organized by the Moira Authority information and education advisory committee under the chairmanship of city alderman Robin Jeffrey.

The litter picking project was the kickoff for final observance of conservation week June 12 to 20.

ANAF News

The sad news of the passing of Provincial Past President Reg Davies was received by the Unit last week. The well known member from Hamilton will be missed after his long years of service with the Association.

Dominion President J. C. Lundberg attended the funeral and, being a member here, also represented the Duke of Edinburgh Unit to pay last respects. The condolences of the unit are extended to his family.

A big turnout is expected on Thursday, June 18 when fifty new members will be eligible for initiation. It is expected that Cdr. Jack Lundberg will officiate at chairman. A social evening after the ceremonies will be held, so come out and help welcome the new members.

The charming president of No. 6 Ladies' Auxiliary, Terry Curnock, was honored last weekend for her dedicated work with the St. John Ambulance Brigade. She went to Toronto and was presented with the Illuminated Priory of Canada and received thanks from Lt. Gov. Ross MacDonald in St. Paul's Cathedral. President Dick Burns and all unit members extend their heartiest congratulations to her for the well deserved recognition of her invaluable services since coming to Belleville.

Where there are winners, there must be losers, but neither one or the other, the more than 100 sports-minded comrades from all across Ontario certainly enjoyed their visit to Belleville and, with their wives unanimously agreed that the city is fully justified of having the name of being friendly. The day ended with the presentation of trophies by Cdr. Ed Nicholson and a dance. It was about the biggest crowd that ever attended a provincial sports day and sports chairman Greg Ackerman and his committe deserved all the many words of appreciation that were expressed on all sides.

Comrade M. Wright has been admitted to the Peterborough Civic Hospital; L. Temporale is still in the Belleville Hospital. Cdn. B. Feather is still confined to his home and would welcome any comrade who would drop in and say hello to him.

Grant A. Sills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sills, Roslin, received his associate diploma in Agriculture from the University of Guelph at convocation ceremonies on May 27. He is now employed with Ralston Purina Company, Melbourne, Ontario.

Nader Says Enzymes in Detergents Can Sear Lungs and Skin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader said Saturday the enzymes in laundry detergents can sear human lungs and skin without appreciably whitening the wash. He called on the U.S. government to ban their sale.

The freelance consumer spokesman, in a position filed with the Federal Trade Commission, asked the agency to order them off the market "on the ground that these products pose a serious health hazard to the public under normal conditions of use."

A spokesman for Procter and Gamble, a major manufacturer, said:

"There is no basis for these questions raised by Mr. Nader about the safety of enzyme detergents. Exhaustive research, and extensive use of enzyme detergents in millions of homes have clearly shown that these products are perfectly safe for the consumer."

The firm said the products have been used for 18 years in Europe and for several years in the U.S. without allergic reactions.

Enzymes, organic ingredients of laundry products which supposedly break down stubborn dirt and stains in a process similar to fermentation, have created a business jumping $78,000,000 to $80,000,000 yearly in pre-soak preparations in addition to their use in more than half the detergents now sold, Nader said.

Despite advertising claims, he added, tests by consumer experts in England and the United States cast doubt on the effectiveness of enzymes. In addition, he said, tests have indicated that:

Enzyme detergents pose the clear danger to the public of chronic, acute and potentially irreversible lung disease, as well as of severe skin reactions.

The seriousness of the danger from enzymes has led to the banning of proteolytic enzymes in detergent manufactured by the Swedish national co-operative.

"We similarly request the Federal Trade Commission to establish the sale of enzymes as ingredients in this country as an unfair and deceptive trade practice because of the serious health danger they present to the general public."

Britain, he said, showed persons who worked with enzymes developed, over a period of time, serious respiratory illnesses similar to asthma, Nader said. Even though the workers benefited large concentrated amounts of enzymes, the same danger exists for the general public through exposure to small doses over an extended period of time, he said.

In addition, "the effects of enzymes are not limited to allergic respiratory conditions," Nader said. "Severe allergic skin reactions to enzyme detergents have been reported in both the United States and Great Britain."

Nader said the only tests favorable to enzymes were those conducted by scientists who work for the soap industry.

The Procter and Gamble spokesman said that in the firm's testing procedure, 11,000 women used the products for prolonged periods of time and not one reported any hay fever or other such allergic reactions.

The spokesman said some persons in factories were exposed to "large amounts of highly concentrated dust and developed minor skin rashes and allergy symptoms, like hay fever, which responded readily to a standard medical treatment." He said the company corrected this situation and "the problem in plants is now under control."

He added that household exposure is about "one fifty-thousandth the troublesome factory exposure.

Communist Governments Recognized by Ceylon

COLOMBO (AP) — Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike's coalition government, in a sharp swing away from the West, announced Sunday that Ceylon will recognize North Vietnam, North Korea, East Germany and the provisional revolutionary government of the Viet Cong guerrillas of South Vietnam.

It also said it will suspend relations with Israel until the Jewish state withdraws from territory occupied during the June, 1967, war.

Domestically, Mrs. Bandaranaike's government announced that all foreign banks will be nationalized and that new, specialized banks will be established to finance development in industry, agriculture and foreign and internal trade.

Outlining proposed policies in the traditional speech from the throne, read by Gov.-Gen. William Gopallawa, the government also said steps will be taken to declare the Commonwealth country a "free, sovereign and independent republic."

No specified dates were given for implementation of these foreign and domestic policies, although the government said it intends to take the action during the coalition's five-year term in office.

Mrs. Bandaranaike's Common Front-backed coalition was swept into power in May 27 parliamentary elections, winning 117 of the 151 elective seats.

Most of the statement was taken verbatim from the coalition campaign manifesto issued by her left-leaning Freedom party and the country's two Communist parties, both of which are part of the new government, occupying key portfolios in the cabinet.

The speech read in Sinhala, English and Tamil to cheering thousands in Colombo's Independence Square—had a definite anti-Western bias.

Without elaboration, the government announced that "all subversive imperialist agencies which operate in Ceylon will be wound up."

There was no indication in her speech as to what she had in mind, although the cultural affairs minister said last week he was studying whether to let about 25 United States Peace Corps volunteers continue working in Ceylon. He said the main consideration would be whether they are harming Ceylon's culture.

"Must we? They're already in danger of becoming extinct."

Hussein and Guerrillas Try to Keep Amman Calm

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Jordanian capital of Amman remained tense today as the government of King Hussein and leaders of Palestinian guerrillas sought to keep the city calm after a week of bloody fighting that left from 700 to 1,000 persons dead or wounded.

Two bursts of solitary and unexplained machine-gun fire shattered the calm of the Jordanian capital early today, an indication of the tension left by the fighting between Jordanian army troops and the guerrillas.

The machine-gun bursts were heard in a northern suburb of Amman and were followed by tracer bullets lighting up the sky.

Political talks between the government and the commandos continued today as joint committees set up to implement a ceasefire investigated the shooting and the attempted slaying Friday of Maj.-Gen. Mashour Haditha, Jordanian army chief of staff. The attempting slaying of Gen. Haditha, who is close to King Hussein and also respected by the guerrillas, came after reports of an alleged mutiney by a Jordanian army tank corps.

The unit is reported to have opposed the king's dismissal of his two senior army commanders under pressure from the commandos.

Palestinian guerrilla leaders said Sunday that two Arabs were executed for raping two United States women during last week's fighting in Amman.

Meanwhile, Israeli warplanes resumed their attacks on Egyptian military positions along the Suez canal after the weekend, and Israeli commandos staged a raid into Jordan.

Flanked by two bodyguards armed with sub-machine-guns, Yasir Arafat, head of the Al Fatah guerrilla group, held a news conference in the Jordanian capital that one rape case had been brought to his attention. He said the guilty Arab was arrested, tried and executed.

Later another Al Fatah spokesman told reporters that a second Arab had been executed for raping another American woman. He added that both women had been evacuated from Jordan.

Arafat accused the United States of setting off the fighting in Jordan and warned that U.S. intervention would turn the Middle East into another Vietnam.

Jordanian Interior Minister Najob Rusheidat said in a broadcast that reports from throughout the country indicated conditions were normal again. Joint army-guerrilla patrols toured Amman, urging the people to return to work. Representatives of the government, the army and the guerrillas announced an agreement that the guerrillas would not carry arms in the towns and cities.

The Egyptian government said 40 Israeli planes attacked positions along the Suez canal in a series of raids that started Saturday night.

Nine Named by Nixon To Probe Campus Woes

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (Reuters) — President Nixon Saturday appointed a nine-man commission to investigate campus unrest in the United States and report back to him by Oct. 1 with suggestions on how to solve university and college troubles.

The panel will be headed by William Scranton, former Pennsylvania governor, and includes four Negroes, one of them a 19-year-old university lecturer.

Nixon's announcement coupled the commission with the killing last month of four white students at Kent State University in Ohio and of two black students at Jackson State College in Mississippi.

"There is nothing that any us can do now to restore the lives that have been lost or to undo the other effects of past campus violence," Nixon said.

"But the commission can help us to avoid future incidents of the sort which occurred this past spring, the most appalling of which were the tragedies at Kent State University in Ohio and Jackson State College in Mississippi."

Nixon said the commission would be given assistance by federal government departments and he would call Congress to give it the power of subpoena to order witnesses to appear before it.

The president said the aims of the panel would be to assess the reasons for the breakdown in the processes for orderly expression of dissent, to suggest specific ways in which legitimate grievances can be resolved and to suggest ways to protect and enhance academic freedom and rights.

Auto Workers Want Pay Linked To Living Costs

ONAWAY, Mich. (AP) — The new president of the United Auto Workers Union says the 1970 contracts with the industry must be tied to a no-limit rise in the cost of living.

"I can foresee no possibility of the membership accepting or our taking to the membership a contract without restoration of our cost-of-living formula geared to quarterly change," Leonard Woodcock said in an interview Sunday.

A dispute over limiting the cost-of living formula led to a seven-week strike at Ford Motor Co. three years ago when the last contracts were written. Ford refused to settle without a limit. The union finally accepted an eight-cent annual limit in contracts expiring Sept. 14.

Top management at General Motors, Ford and Chrysler indicated they have no intention to return to an unlimited formula this year. Union negotiators are under a UAW convention mandate to win its restoration in bargaining that begins next month.

Art Show Held

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands meandered through the ninth annual Toronto outdoor art show in front of City Hall during the weekend, eyeing 2,000 entries and the colorfully-dressed artists.

A shaped canvas in glowing op-art colors took the major prize of $1,000 for Denis Cliff of Toronto.

Jet Drops Tank

COPENHAGEN (AP) — A U.S. Air Force Phantom fighter-bomber jettisoned a blazing fuel tank into a lake crowded with bathers and pleasure boaters near here Sunday.

Swimmers clambered quickly from the water as a 100-yard-wide slick of fuel spread quickly across the surface of Lake Furesoen, but no one was hurt.

What's Bugging You!

If it is the cost and difficulty of finding a new home for your family, there is good reason to be bugged. But you are overlooking a very easy solution. You can knock hundreds of dollars off the price of the home you want by doing some of the work yourself.

The Rollins Lumber Self-Help Home Plan is designed with the not-so-wealthy family in mind. Top quality materials are used by skilled workmen to erect the basic shell home. Then the materials required for the interior finishing are supplied along with helpful directions. You take over and do the interior work yourself and save a great deal on labor costs.

In addition, financing is available with no down payment required and most of the red tape eliminated.

All in all, a great way to build a new home for your family provided work doesn't bug you too.

Diefenbaker Anti China Recognition

OSAKA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker yesterday ended a 12-day fact-finding tour of the Far East, convinced Canadian recognition of China will seriously damage the anti-Communist cause in Asia.

He said in an interview his talks with people in and out of government in Taipei and Saigon "reinforced my view" that Ottawa's acknowledgment of the Peking regime will undermine "the determination of people of Southeast Asia who, at tremendous personal sacrifice have stood against communism."

He said Asians, like warm, to communism, will conclude "their resistance and determination to resist has received a set-back from a nation that enjoys a respect and a regard far beyond our population."

Diefenbaker was also critical of Prime Minister Trudeau for failing to visit South Vietnam and Taiwan on his recent Pacific tour.

He said since Trudeau was set on recognizing China, and Canadian representatives on the International Control Commission were giving a good account of themselves in South Vietnam "it would have thought those two countries would have been on the prime minister's itinery."

"As a matter of fact," he added with a grin, "I filled in for him. I'm always ready to assist the government. I shall pass on to the Prime minister suggestions derived from my trip. It remains to be seen if the government finds them helpful."

He said he found "among Asians of intelligence a genuine difficulty of understanding that Canada should be in such a subservient mood as it apparently is towards Mao and his representatives.

"I suppose I'm to be saying 'Here I am, Mao—take me.' And for the past 3½ months Mao and his representatives have'n been seen—much less spoken to."

Conceding that "much is being done in bringing about trade and the expansion of trade" between Canada and the Far East, Diefenbaker held that "much more remains to be done."

"This is no political criticism but I feel there should be a very pronounced increase of trade in Asia for Canada."

"But," he added, "I certainly don't think recognition of Communist China is going to bring any trade . . . Recognition has not brought about any extension of trade for any nation I know of."

Diefenbaker spent four days in Saigon and five in Taiwan.

After a two-day stop in Tokyo he flies home to Ottawa Tuesday.

All Out For Labor

ROSS, England (AP) — Eighteen-year-old Sandra Rusch stood up at the Conservative party election rally and took off her blouse. Tape across her bare bosom in red letters was "Vote Labor."

Sandra turned and walked out of the hall. Across her back was "Labor has nothing to hide."

"It was all I could do to make staunch Conservatives take notice," said Sandra, wife of a laboratory technician and mother of a baby girl.

Buffalo Honors Toronto Mayor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Mayor William Dennison of Toronto toured Buffalo Sunday, receiving a key to the city, symbol of the city, and presenting awards at the 13th annual Allentown Art Festival.

Mayor Frank A. Sedita presented Dennison with Buffalonian and added him through Buffalo and the festival. The two handed out $2,300 in awards to winners at the outdoor arts show.

The Toronto mayor helped reward winners of the exhibit, because, organizers said, many of the 90 contestants came from southern Ontario. The show is open to any artists, providing that the artist shown is hand-made or crafted.

After the officials left, trouble broke out with hundreds of youths hurling rocks and bottles at police and police countering with tear gas.

At least two policemen and several other persons were reported injured. About 20 persons were arrested.

The trouble broke out in early evening in the Allentown area.

Police said the violence erupted after they had gotten reports of an officer in trouble and spread through a 19-block area.

Questioners Harass Surfing Prime Minister

TOFINO, B.C. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau spent Sunday afternoon surfing in the cold Pacific Ocean and hiking along a heavily-forested coast trial once walked by Spanish explorers.

He flew here from Ottawa in a government jet and switched to an armed forces helicopter for a three-stop tour of Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island, Canada's newest national park.

The prime minister flew back to Vancouver for the night. Today he joins Premier W. A. C. Bennett in the official opening of Roberts Bank deepsea port, 15 miles south of Vancouver.

Mr. Trudeau, a wet suit over his blue swim trunks, tested the boiling surf for about half an hour despite the 47-degree temperature of the water. He was joined by four other surfers but only one managed a stand-up ride. The prime minister rode his board on the belly most of the time.

His feet were still in the water when he was approached by 25-year-old Mary Etta Halter of Tofino and asked him to speak up on the birth-control issue.

Carrying her one-year-old child, Mrs. Halter gave the prime minister a brochure prepared by Zero Population Growth, an organization promoting birth control.

Earlier he was presented with a red rose and a 16-inch glass float swept onto the beach about 15 years ago from a Japanese fishing boat.

Several hundred persons were at the two beach stops made by the 50-year-old prime minister, but he was confronted by three hippies during the hike along Lifesaving Trail, a two-foot-wide trail which once had a cabin every eight miles for the use of sailors who made it to shore from the more than 800 shipwrecks recorded for the area.

What do hippies say when they meet the prime minister unexpectedly on a lonely trail in the middle of nowhere?

"Where you going to legalize marijuana?" asked one of the bearded youths.

Mr. Trudeau replied with his own question: "Do you mean you need grass to get high in this magnificent area?"

The two fellows, a girl and their dog disappeared in the thick forest.

Powell Making Play For Party Leadership

LONDON (AP) — With political commentators and public opinion polls generally predicting victory for the Labor government in Britain's general election next Thursday, press and politicians are paying more attention to the struggle within the Conservative party between its leader, Edward Heath, and right-winger Enoch Powell.

Powell, the most outspoken opponent of total integration to British politics, has consistently attacked Heath's leadership of the party, an attack widely interpreted as a thinly-veiled bid to replace the party leader.

"He'll never make it," Heath told friends during the weekend. "I'll see to that."

The outcome may depend on the size of the Conservative defeat. A Labor landslide could strengthen Powell's position and generate pressure for the party to move to the right.

Most opinion polls indicate a Labor majority of up to 100 seats in the 630-seat House of Commons. Only one, a Gallup Poll in The Sunday Telegraph, showed Conservative improvement last week and it predicted a likely Labor majority of 25 seats.

At dissolution, party standings in the House were:

Labor 341, Conservatives 253, Liberal 13, Republican Labor 1, Welsh Nationalist 1, Scottish Nationalist 1, Independent Unity 1, independents 2, vacant 2, Speaker and Deputy Speakers 3.

Heath was far more confident when the Conservatives lost to Labor in 1966: if he loses again by a big margin, there is already certain to be grass-roots pressure for a new party leader. Whether Powell can hope to succeed Heath is less certain. One of his chief backers said during the weekend that Powell could expect only a handful of votes if the leadership is decided by vote of the Conservative members of Commons, the usual procedure. But pressure from right-wingers in the party rank and file could make the leadership question an issue at the annual party convention in October.

Powell has a strong appeal on two national issues that cut across party lines—race-white immigration and joining the European Common Market. He wants to send back the non-white immigrants already here, and bar any more from coming. He is the only major political figure who flatly opposes British membership in the Common Market.

Powell's appearance at a Birmingham rally Sunday night touched off one of the wildest scenes in the national election campaign. He predicted at the rally that the race bias issue will play a major part in the voting. Screech bombs and tomatoes were hurled at Powell and a girl shouted "Fascist pig." Ten demonstrators were forcibly removed from the hall.

Sickness, Poverty Linked Says Nurse

FREDERICTON (CP) — The principal nursing officer in the federal health department will cease to exist, Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott said Sunday.

Speaking to the annual convention of the Canadian Nurses' Association here that most of the health profession will cater to middle- and upper-class opulence.

"Curative services often tend, at the same level, to make the rich richer and the poor even more poor, if not become poorer, she said.

"We cannot deny the piles of studies which demonstrate an inextricable link between poverty and bad health," she said. "Poverty and age 'goo often go hand in hand."

Worse than physical deprivation is human loneliness imposed upon many by society's seeming rejection of the aged."

In the past, Miss Hoffman said, the emphasis has been on the treatment of the acutely ill at the expense of prevention and care of chronic disease.

"Curing, without prevention, will never produce a healthy population."

Liquor Seized

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Large quantities of beer and liquor were seized on the weekend as police stopped and searched cars and trucks going into Mosport racetrack.

About 100 persons were issued summonses for illegal possession.

Saturday, 29 provincial police officers searched vehicles carrying more than 4,000 persons who slept overnight at the track. Sunday, when another 20,000 arrived for the first of the Can-Am races, police made spot checks.

Buffalo Honors Toronto Mayor

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Mayor William Dennison of Toronto toured Buffalo Sunday, receiving a key to the city, symbol of the city, and presenting awards at the 13th annual Allentown Art Festival.

Mayor Frank A. Sedita presented Dennison with Buffalonian and added him through Buffalo and the festival. The two handed out $2,300 in awards to winners at the outdoor arts show.

The Toronto mayor helped reward winners of the exhibit, because, organizers said, many of the 90 contestants came from southern Ontario. The show is open to any artists, providing that the artist shown is hand-made or crafted.

After the officials left, trouble broke out with hundreds of youths hurling rocks and bottles at police and police countering with tear gas.

At least two policemen and several other persons were reported injured. About 20 persons were arrested.

The trouble broke out in early evening in the Allentown area.

Police said the violence erupted after they had gotten reports of an officer in trouble and spread through a 19-block area.

Environmental Control Program Is Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario New Democratic Party Sunday called for a provincial environmental control department and a provincial land use program.

In a two-day policy meeting a weekend conference, the party's provincial council said the environmental control department would have four main responsibilities:

—Collection and interpretation of environmental data;

—Conduct of environmental research;

—Provision of analytical and inspection services;

—Formulation of pollution standards.

The land use program would ensure that high-potential recreational areas, especially lakeshore territory, be reserved for eventual public use.

The council also voted to support postal workers currently negotiating a contract with the federal government.

The government's six-per-cent wage guideline, it resolution said, "represents the crudest kind of class legislation."

It was "an arbitrary restriction on one kind of income while profits, dividends and other forms of corporate benevolence go untouched."

Police Seek Five Youths

OTTAWA (CP) — Police are seeking five youths who beat up and robbed two teen-agers they took for a car ride after picking them up on an Ottawa street.

The victims, Kevin O'Connor, 18, of nearby South March, and Robert Marley, 17, of Ottawa, are in fair condition in hospital with serious head injuries following their experience.

Both emerged battered from the carfull of youths, apparently believing they would be safe because there were two girls in the car.

The girls were let out and O'Connor and Marley were forced to hand over the little money they carried. They were pummelled in the car and driven out of town to a lonely side road where they were beaten again and left semi-conscious and bleeding in a ditch.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID MUIR

Muir – Elliott

St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton was the scene of the recent marriage of Carol Elaine Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elliott of RR1, Corbyville and David Gordon Muir of Perth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Muir of Belleville. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. J. Hobbs, organist was Mrs. H. Farnham and soloist Mrs. Lois Yellowlees, cousin of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floral A-line gown of white silk collar flattering the empire bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace and seed pearls. The full-length sleeves were accented by matching lace and seed pearls, and a cathedral train was enhanced with insets of lace and pearls. Her matching headdress of satin petals was encrusted with seed pearls and caught to a scalloped shoulder-length fourtier silk illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Rosanne Chapman wearing a floor-length A-line gown of green figured organza over taffeta featuring an empire waist trimmed with multi-colored lace, long chiffon sleeves with matching lace on the cuffs and a high neckline enhanced with three multi-colored organza buttons. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and wore matching daisies in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Miss Maureen Martin, Bowmanville dressed identically to the matron of honor in pink and junior bridesmaids were Miss Heather Muir of Belleville, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Darlene Morgan, RR 2, Sidney, cousin of the bride, dressed identically to the matron of honor in yellow.

Flower girl was Miss Shelley Reid of Springbrook, cousin of the bride. She was dressed identically to the matron of honor and carried a bouquet of white daisies and green mums.

Best man was Doug Dickey of Montreal and ushers were Garth Muir of Belleville, brother of the bridegroom; Wayne Muir of Belleville, brother of the bridegroom and Larry Elliott, of Brampton, cousin of the bride.

Ring bearer was Master Craig Miles of Oshawa, cousin of the bridegroom.

For the reception held in the church parlor, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a blue crepe and lace cost and dress ensemble featuring a stand-up collar and long sleeves. She wore white accessories and a corsage of red sweetheart roses and feathered aqua carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a lime green crepe dress and jacket ensemble featuring a jewel neckline and three quarter length sleeves. She wore beige accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses and feathered green carnations.

For the wedding trip to points south, the bride wore a pink and white floral lace coat and dress ensemble with white accessories, and a mauve orchid corsage.

The couple will reside at 8 Glen Ave., Smiths Falls.

Miss Donna Joan Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Morrison of Belleville, received a Bachelor of Nursing Science degree at Convocation in Grant Hall, Queen's University, Kingston on June 6, 1970. "Miss Morrison" is a Registered Nurse, graduated from St. Michael's School of Nursing, Toronto, and a former graduate of Nicholson Catholic College, Belleville. Miss Morrison has accepted a teaching position with the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing, Belleville.

Engagement Notice

Miss N. R. Aitken — Mr. R. C. Fletcher

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Aitken, Scarborough, announce the engagement of their daughter, Nicoleta Ramtonda, to Robert C. Fletcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Fletcher. The marriage will take place in St. Rose of Lima Church, Lawrence Ave. E., Scarborough, on Saturday, July 4. Miss Aitken recently graduated from the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital school of nursing, while Mr. Fletcher is a recent graduate of Centennial College of Applied Arts and Technology in Scarborough.

Couple Wed 42 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Litchford of Cannifton were honored recently when their children and grandchildren gathered on the occasion of their 42nd wedding anniversary.

The surprise event was held in the form of a barbecue at the home of a daughter Mrs. George Hamilton.

Following the presentation of gifts, the couple expressed sincere thanks to everyone and for the remainder of the day the family enjoyed a time of fellowship.

UCW MEETINGS

FRANKFORD UCW

The general meeting of Frankford UCW will on Tuesday, June 2 in the sanctuary with members present from Batawa, Wooler and Stockdale. The president, Mrs. R. Tomacek, extended a welcome to all the guests.

Mrs. C. Moran, treasurer, gave a favorable financial report.

During business a number of items were discussed including: The sending of birthday names placed on the birthday calendar are to contact Mrs. F. Rabel. The price is 25 cents per name or $1.50 per family. Mrs. Rabel is also in need for bandages to be sent to Angola for use in a mission hospital. It was agreed to purchase the yarn and commence knitting these bandages, with Mrs. G. Rabel as convener. The reports from the individual units were given by Mrs. R. Zwier, Mrs. R. Rumney, and Mrs. M. Grills. The next executive meeting will be held on September 8.

Mrs. G. Harrington opened the worship service. Meditation was read by Mrs. Harrington. Mrs. Bleecker closed the service. A duet was sung by Mrs. Wesa and Mrs. Partington accompanied by Mrs. D. Keller.

Mrs. Minnaffe, president of the Coboung Presbytery of the UCW, was introduced by Mrs. Jack Beach. Mrs. Minnaffe has always been active in local and presbyterial levels of the UCW as displayed through her very personal faith. Her message was on 'Live-Love'. She reminded us that "we each have a personal life of our own and there are only two ways to live; this life - either wise or foolish. Our main purpose of life is to know God, and we come close to God wherever we find love, beauty, and truth." Mrs. Minnaffe closed her message with this thought "we are the servants of God - but not what if not here, where? If not now, when?"

MR. AND MRS. ARNOLD VANDERMEER

Vandermeer – Woodcox

Christian Reformed Church, Belleville was the setting for the wedding of Cheryl Gladys, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Woodcox, Belleville, to Arnold Vandermeer, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Vandermeer, RR 8, Belleville.

Rev. E. Gritter performed the ceremony and traditional wedding music was provided by the church organist John De Vries.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length A-line gown of white peau de soie with yoke and three-quarter sleeves of nylon sheer outlined with Chantilly lace. An A-line chapel train attached to the back yoke with satin bows. Her lace petal headpiece veil fell from a cluster of satin rosebuds and baby's breath and her bouquet was a colonial cluster of white Shasta daisies, gladioli petals centred with yellow roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Arta Kolasci, Annandale, Va., sister of the bride wore a floor-length gown of yellow chiffon over peau de soie, featuring a high neck line, long full sleeves and back panel all edged with matching lace. Her bouquet, also a colonial cluster consisted of yellow tinted Shasta daisies and matching daisies were woven in her hair.

The bridesmaids Miss Anne Vandermeer, Brantford, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Joyce Morris, Lake, Germany, sister of the bride and Miss Marilyn Richardson, Belleville were dressed in lilac gowns, identical to that worn by the matron of honor and carried lilac tinted shasta daisies and baby's breath and wore the same in their hair.

Miss Jennie Vandermeer, sister of the bridegroom and Miss Robin Morris, niece of the bride, dressed in floor length gown of lilac chiffon over peau de sole were junior bridesmaids, carrying lilac shasta daisy bouquets.

Two small nieces of the bride, Colleen Meeres and Joey Kim Kolasci, as flower girls wore yellow dresses of chiffon over peau de sole, matching the other attendants and carried small white baskets of pink daisies with satin ribbon streamers.

Best man was Arnold Vandermeer, Kingston, cousin of the bridegroom, and the ushers were, Hans Vandermeer, Belleville, brother of the bridegroom. Wayne Brooks, Belleville and Robert Morris, brother-in-law of the bride of Lahr, Germany.

Brother-in-law of the bride, Joseph Kolasci, Annandale, Va., was master of ceremonies during the reception at the Canadian Legion Hall.

The bride's mother received the guests in a mint green, long sleeved gown of polyester crepe, with sleeves, lace cost and white accessories with corsage of yellow carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted in a suit dress of Fortrel double knit, in shades of pink with white accessories and corsage of pink and white carnations.

Following the wedding dinner, music was provided by Frank Howard's trio.

For travelling the bride chose a yellow knit dress with multi-color scarf, white accessories and corsage of sweetheart roses.

The couple have taken up residence at 28 Daly St., Kingston.

One of Great Names in Canadian Entertainment Is Nova Scotian

HALIFAX (CP) — A Nova Scotian, "quickly becoming one of the great names in Canadian entertainment," the master of ceremonies intones. "Please welcome . . . Anne Murray."

He has a definitive fingerbackstage and, striding, almost bouncing out of the darkness the psychedelic carpet of red, blue and orange throws down by overhead, stage lights, comes five feet seven inches of shapely blue-eyed blonde.

Beaming at the audience, glancing first right, then left to acknowledge her accomplists, guitar held in the classic folk position, 24-year-old Anne leans to the microphone and literally throws her first song at the listeners.

"Hey-ey-ey-ey, ey-ey-ey, what about me?" The audience applauds in recognition of one of her first hit songs, but even with the commotion, the clear contralto sound reverberates throughout the high school auditorium.

The low timbre of the voice at first startles, then is surprisingly pleasant, and combines with the words of each song and the music to produce an agreeable blend of folk-country melody.

As the opening number ends, the applause and applauds again. Anne bows slightly, almost shyly, in acknowledgment. She looks happy.

"I'm always happy when I'm entertaining. I don't have to sing . . . I could go back to teaching," she says in reference to her former occupation one year as a physical education teacher in Summerside, P.E.I. in the 1966-67 school year.

It wasn't always that way but gone now, is the uncertainty of 1967, when the girl from Springhill, N.S., decided to end her brief teaching career and turn to entertaining.

"I gave myself a year to see if I would like it," she says. "But I'm not going to quit now . . . I like it too much."

Now the struggling days are gone, replaced by a calendar full of personal appearances, nightclub shows, concerts and recording sessions, television and radio work.

"I'm taking it easy. . . I'm picking and choosing what I do . . . taking the things I like." But she cautions: "Don't get me wrong. I'm not a showbiz bitch.

"It's just that if I like a song, I'll do it; if I don't, I won't. I don't turn down much, but there there are not many things I don't like to do.

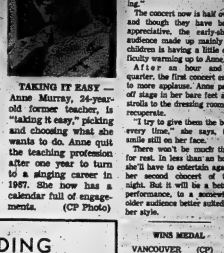
"My goal is just to make it."

In blue jeans and blouse, shirt-tail hanging out, her first name — trademark — Anne spreads her arms in emphasis a point.

"I'm secure here in the Maritimes . . . I know the people. The pace is slower — and the people are not in such a hurry as elsewhere."

There have been recording sessions in Toronto this year, a taping of a television special called Nashville North with Canadian composer and singer Ian Tyson and his wife, Sylvia.

Though Toronto is a big cold city and I don't feel at home there," she says, there is a hint that opportunities are better.



"I guess I'll have to move there. . . . I'd like to commute but it would be living."

The concert now is half over and though they have been appreciative, the early-show audience made up mainly of children is having a little difficulty warming up to Anne.

After an hour and a quarter, the first concert ends to more applause. Anne pads off stage in her bare feet and strolls to the dressing room to recuperate.

"I try to give them the best every time," she says, the smile still on her face.

There won't be much time for rest. In less than an hour she'll appear on stage again, her second concert of the night. But it will be a better performance, to a somewhat older audience better suited to her style.

TAKING IT EASY — Anne Murray, 24-year-old former teacher, is "taking it easy," picking and choosing what she wants to do. Anne quit the teaching profession after one year to turn to a singing career in 1967. She now has a calendar full of engagements. (CP Photo)

WEDDING

LAVALLEE — BROUGH

TWEED — St. Michael's Church, Belleville, was the scene of the recent marriage of Deborah Susan Brough, daughter of Mr. Mildred Brough of Moosonee and John Paul LaValle, son of Mrs. Oscar LaValles of Tweed.

Father Patrick Carty performed the double-ring ceremony and celebrated the Nuptial Mass. Organist was Slater of Tweed and soloist was Ronald LaValle.

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Frank Colt, Tweed, wore a white moon crepe floor-length gown in A-line styling featuring round neckline, and long sleeves. The lace-edged floor-length veil was held in place with a wedding ring band of white lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations, intermingled with orange tiger roses and white Shasta daisies.

Maid of honor was Miss Barbara Coles, cousin of the bride. She wore a mint green moon crepe floor-length gown in A-line styling featuring round neckline and long sleeves. Her headpiece was a bow of matching material.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Linda Kitchen of Toronto, and Miss Marlene LaValles, niece of the bridegroom.

They were dressed identically to the maid of honor, but in orange ice moon crepe. All carried bouquets of white shasta daisies centred with orange roses.

Best man was Richard Beare of Tweed and ushers were James Kitchen of Toronto and John Kitchen of Tweed.

For the reception at Park Place community centre, the bride's mother wore a powder blue fortrel A-line dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a dress of rose crimpolene with white accessories and a corsage of deep rose and white rosebuds.

For the wedding trip the bride chose a two-piece suit of lord green, black accessories and a corsage of coral roses.

Upon their return the couple will reside at 504 Victoria St. North, in Tweed.

Claims Bus Passengers Have Lousy Manners

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you'll never print this because it's slam against your city, Chicago, but here it is anyway.

We moved here from Montana to where folks treat each other with consideration. Chicagoans have the lousiest manners in the world. For example on the buses, people will not even say "excuse me" when they step on my foot from leaky fresh paint to ruin my sweater from a child's icy, 10¢ lollipop. The last straw — a woman asked me to hold her baby. You can guess what happened. When I handed her back the soppiok wet child all she could say was, "Oh, my goodness."

If you have any significant observation for the benefit of your fellow citizens, I'd like to hear it. — IRATE MAN FROM MONTANA.

DEAR IRATE MAN: I thought until I read your signature that you were a woman! I can offer no defense for people with such gall that they would ask strangers to hold their lunches and parcels. But that last incident is another tale full of woe, my friend. A man who would remain seated on a bus and let a woman stand with a baby in her arms deserves whatever he gets.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Until six weeks ago I was going with a very interesting guy. A buddy of his came in town and asked me to get him a date. So I fixed him up with my best friend. The four of us went out together. After that evening my very interesting guy never called me again. He has been seeing my friend "Helen" ever since.

I tried to act as if I didn't care, but I cared plenty. Not because I lost him to her, but because she thought so little of our friendship that she would go out with him, when she knew he was mine. Finally I got fed up pretending. I lost my cool and told her exactly how I felt. She was dumbfounded — acted as if she had no idea I cared.

Am I justified in my feelings that she betrayed me? Please comment. — KANSAS CITY KITTY.

DEAR KITTY: The guy you refer to as "yours" obviously was not. You didn't lose him. You never had him. A woman rarely loses a man to someone else. He first loses his interest in her — then someone else comes along.

Bury the hatchet and pass the peace pipe.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have a friend who is a perfect gentleman, but he has an oddball habit which baffles me. He extends his left hand instead of his right when greeting friends. At first I thought his right hand was injured by arthritis, or an accident, but I've watched him carefully and he uses his right hand normally. Last night I decided to ask him what the problem is. Instead, he replied, "It's a Scout custom." I didn't want to show my ignorance. What is he talking about? — NOT SMART.

* * *

DEAR NOT: In the manual of English Scouting, "Tenderfoot Queen Scout," it says, "When a famous Ashanti chief Kwamesah met Lord Baden-Powell, the latter extended his right hand as a token of friendship. The chief hesitated on shaking with the left hand, explaining that the bravest of his braves shake hands with the left hand. In order to do so, he must throw away his greatest protection — his shield. Scouts shake hands with the left hand as a token of good faith and true friendship.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am very hurt and I need your help. At last week's bowling league I've been replaced as the handiest last month. I couldn't understand why. I heard yesterday that the club is now meeting again and they have asked someone in my place. The reason: They resented my husband since his retirement he has been idolizing the game when the women played at our home. I didn't realize the women didn't like to have him around. The truth is, he was more interests now other than mine. I hate to admit it, but he has been getting on my nerves, too. What should be done? — FORT LAUDERDALE.

* * *

DEAR FORT: More women are writing about this problem now that so many men are making a serious effort to get your retired husbands involved in activities that will take them away from the house. Florida has some good Golden Age Clubs. There are volunteer jobs to be done. Investigate. Look in the phone book under Organizations. Check them out with the Chamber of Commerce. Don't let his retirement ruin your life.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Son: "You don't know what you're talking about, or you wouldn't make such statements. Why don't you check the facts?"

Father: "You can't talk to me like that. I never spoke disrespectfully to my father and I won't permit you to do it."

You may be able to command silence, but you cannot command respect and agreement with your views. Today's teen-agers are likely to assert themselves strongly under stress, but you can help bridge the gap by your willingness to listen with interest, and hopefully, with understanding.

Noble Grands Enjoy Supper

TWEED — Members of the Past Noble Grands Club met recently at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. Harold Foster, Tweed, for a potluck supper.

Business meeting was conducted by president Lois Elliott after the supper with installation of new officers as follows: president, Bernice Lough; 1st vice — president, Grace Perritt; secretary-treasurer, Ruth Maskell.

Cards were played and Mrs. Mabel Foster and Mrs. Hilda Sexsmith tied for high score, and Mrs. Grace Perritt was low score.

Talking Out Situation Better Than Scolding

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: How can I get closer to my Mom? My mom calls lots of things over with their mothers, and get help from them.

When I bring anything up with Mom she tells me to scold me and start laying down the law and finding fault with my friends. It's gotten so I'm afraid to tell her anything. — Losing Hope and Lonely.

Dear Losing: Sometimes the logic doesn't work when a mother gets to talk with other mothers. She comes to see that fight downs when it comes to the best of families — and that her girl is pretty nice after all.

Mothers who listen without scolding — and give a little loving understanding are actually giving themselves daughters who are their pals for life. Could you ask Mom to have coffee with you? Don't "confess" and see what you're up to?

* * *

Dear Doris: Why does it seem that my husband's talk more freely to other people than to me? I've asked him why he does this and he tells me it's all in my head. But that's no quick and yet to someone else you can't stay him from talking.

Also, how would you husband lie to you? By doing things and not even telling me about them?

I've been married for a year. Do you think he loves me? — Desperate.

Dear Desperate: Did you talk before you were married? Have you, since then, soon, to the point where you take each other for granted?

Do you ever talk to him? I don't run after a street car after you have caught it —

Quebec Girls to Work in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — For the third summer in a row, Richard Portis is bringing teenage girls from Quebec to work as mother's helpers in Ontario where the girls can learn English.

Mr. Portis is director of Mothers' Summer Helpers, an employment agency that places Quebec girls, 16 and older, in Ontario homes during the months of July and August.

Under the scheme, the family employing the girl are charged a percentage of the amount of money the girl is willing to pay her as weekly wages. This fee ranges from $10 to $30 a week.

"For example," Mr. Portis said, "if they offer $15 a week, the girl receives $10 and we receive $5."

Under the Ontario Employment Act, said Mr. Portis, one of the employment standards branch of the provincial department of labor, domestics are not covered either for minimum wages or for number of hours worked.

The mother's helper hours beforehand, said Mr. Portis, that her duties include cooking, cleaning, laundry, bedmaking, cleaning and supervising children.

Girls employed by the agency must submit a teacher's recommendation, a dental consent, medical certificates showing they are fit for work, and a 200-word autobiography.

After a screening interview in Quebec they come on to Toronto, paying their own way.

"We do arrange for them to come in a group," said Mr. Portis, "so they can get a discount on CN."

An official with the Toronto branch of Canada Manpower, the employment agency of the federal government, said its policy is to discourage the movement of people under 18 years of age from one province to another and even within their own province.

The girls are brought from Quebec, Mr. Portis said, because "girls in that province generally won't accept the salaries."

Accountants, doctors, lawyers and dentists, he said, do most of the hiring. The majority of girls are placed in two-children families. Few are placed in homes with more than three children.

"The placement made is always pending acceptance by the employer," he said. "She has the final say."

The girl is encouraged to stay in the program by an "incentive bonus."

"They are given a postdated cheque for $25 above and beyond their salary. If they leave before eight weeks they forfeit that."

Major complaints Mr. Portis has encountered from the employers are lack of common sense in a girl or her lack of industry.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Chicken Breasts Cordon Bleu

By MARY MOORE

Three years ago I gave you a recipe called Chicken Breasts Lena Lenard, it was boned-out chicken breasts in which were rolled slices of ham and Swiss cheese. It was served with a chicken broth sauce.

Now I left Chicago's O'Hare Airport on my return Air Canada flight on May 8 we were served Breaded Chicken Breasts Inside of which were rolled slices of cheese and ham. I was starving so this tasted divine and I decided to try to replicate it. It is somewhat similar to Chicken Breasts Lenore Secord but without the cheese.

You will have to do one of two things: 1) Buzz out your chicken breasts yourself or 2) wheedle your butcher into doing it for you especially when he is not rushed. Do not remove skin. Use the bones for which a great deal of meat clings, for a rich chicken soup. I have geared my recipe to 10 single chicken breasts because one is enough for an average serving. I had eaten two dinner but the men came back for seconds.

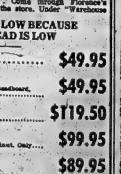
CHICKEN BREASTS CORDON BLEU

(Serves 7 or 8)

10 single boned-out chicken breasts

5 thin slices cooked packaged ham

5 slices Swiss cheese 1" wide



2 small eggs

1 tsp. salt

1 tbsp. water

2¼ cups buttered fine breadcrumbs (see below)

Prepare the breasts beforehand first by spreading about a six slices of bread with butter and drying out in oven until crisp up in refrigerator, but warm to room temperatures before baking time.) Bake, still fall covered, at 300 deg. Fahr. about 1½ to 2 hrs. Do not overcook. Transfer to preheated platter. If any cheese should melt and run out onto foil scoop it up and drizzle over the chicken breasts.

Crosta Rica is a deliciously medium dry red table wine made from French hybrid grapes grown in Niagara.

This is a chicken dish for your gourmet folder. "

Re-union Party Held

On Sunday afternoon, June 7 a reuning party was held in River Valley Women's Institute Centre for the Mayhew — Montgomery family. Attendance were 70 men, women and children, descendants of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mayhew.

The centre was decorated with summer flower for the occasion and all sat down to a luncheon. Mrs. Percy MacMullen welcomed the group.

A short musical was held in Mrs. Percy Hubble with Mrs. Philip Conley as accompanist. During the sing song Douglas Montgomery of Carrying Place was honored with a birthday song.

The party was planned by Mrs. Percy MacMullen and her committee included Leonard, Mrs. Cecil Rowley and her cousin, Harvey Pitcher.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

BAY OF QUINTE SQUADRONETTES

The Bay of Quinte Squadronettes held a social evening meeting at the home of Mrs. Kay Smith, Belleville. June 16. Squadronettes will make every effort to get your retired husbands involved in activities that will take them away from the house. Florida has some good Golden Age Clubs. There are volunteer jobs to be done. Investigate. Look in the phone book under Organizations. Check them out with the Chamber of Commerce. Don't let his retirement ruin your life.

The slate of officers for the coming year is as follows: past commander, Lorne Reid; commander, Kay Smith; lieutenant commander, Patricia Marsh; secretary, Miss Devine and treasurer, Noreen Bonnell.

Past commander Dorothy McCulloch gave a brief resume of the Canadian Junior Safe Sailing program which has been taught in the public schools by the squadronettes. Those who taught this year were Stella Jouard, Dorothy McCulloch, Sylvia Hendeway and Elizabeth Edwards. One hundred and fifty students enrolled and 87 passed the course which was taught at the Harry J. Clarke School and Sir Mackenzie Bowell School.

CNEA LADIES' AUXILIARY

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Club Canaera entertained the board of directors and their wives with a potluck supper, and social evening, on Tuesday, June 12 with a large number present.

President Alice Storms was chairman for the evening, with Vera Reynolds assisting.

The following were winners of the Auxiliary draw: Ollie Gerow, Donna Rose, Margaret Hall, Lois Milne, June Newcomick, John Ronsky, Gertrude Lynch, Marcie Spencer, Bob Reid, Linda Milne, June Newcomb, and Wayne Storms.

The entertainment for the evening was by "Aunt Sarah's Kitchen Band", Norm Meldrum as pianist, Marg. Campbell with the accordion and Peggy Rorabt with the bones, and enjoyed by all those present.

Board of directors president E. Goodman thanked the auxiliary for the special evening, after which the male members were tagged with the kitchen duties and proved to be good sports about the duty.

Wage Guidelines Called Cynical, Savage

OTTAWA (CP) — Receiving enthusiastic approval from his labor audience, Ontario New Democrat Stephen Lewis gave the federal government a hot rhetorical lashing Saturday with its own wage-restraint guidelines.

The guides—a proposed six-per-cent limit on wage and salary increases—are "the most savage political cynicism we've seen in Canada since the Second World War." Mr. Lewis told delegates at a convention of the Ontario division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

"Wherever you hear politicians talk about restraining wages, prices and profits you know they only mean wages," he said.

Mr. Lewis accused the federal and provincial governments of using the wage guides as a weapon in a three-pronged attack against labor's income, job security and organizational strength. It is war against workers, he said, "a battle from which you cannot retreat."

The NDP member of the Ontario legislature for Scarborough West delighted his audience with a sarcastic review of the highlights of the government's prices and incomes policy.

He suggested that while such people as Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, are "not suffering impoverishment from the immortal sacrifice" imposed by the six-per-cent ceiling, "some of you of more modest income may be."

He also attacked the government for what he described as its failure to protect the jobs of Canadians employed by multi-national corporations.

Listing a series of plants which have been closed recently by their foreign owners, he claimed, "it is impossible any longer in the province of Ontario to have a sense of job security."

Mr. Lewis' speech was the cap to two days of angry conflagration over wage restraints at the CUPE convention.

Earlier in the day, most of the 230 delegates marched on Parliament Hill in a brief show of support for Canadian postal workers.

"Six per cent of not enough is not enough," their placards advised a few hundred who gathered to see which.

The delegates also succeeded after three tries in wringing from their executive a militant resolution condemning government policy.

The resolution proposed that the 160,000-member national union give financial support to any labor group caught up in a strike against the six-per-cent ceiling.

Although chastised, the union executive was re-elected to office without major changes.

Returned with 3-to-1 majority in presidential race Percy Haggett of Toronto. Also chosen were: Thomas Place, Toronto, 1st vice-president; Clarence Dagg, Sault Ste. Marie, 2nd vice-president; Bruce Martin, London, executive secretary; Thomas Mayo, Toronto, treasurer.

Elected as executive officers were: Robert Bradshaw of Hamilton; Shirley Carr and Les Blackburn of Niagara Falls; William Levee of Toronto; Audrey Morrison of Sudbury; Paul Seney of Windsor.

Construction Laborers Favor Strike Action

BRANTFORD (CP) — Construction laborers in the Brantford area have voted in favor of strike action if necessary to back their contract demands, a union official said Saturday.

Laverne Schertzberg of Brantford, business agent for Local 1081, Laborers' International Union of North America, said the vote authorized the negotiating committee to call a strike July 1.

The union, representing about 700 laborers in the counties of Brant, Norfolk, Waterloo, Wellington, Dufferin and Grey, have been negotiating since March with general contractors and sub-contractors.

Talks broke off last Thursday with no sign of agreement on a new contract to replace an agreement which expired April 30. At issue are wages, overtime pay, job security and working hours.

Mr. Schertzberg said the 150 contractors involved had made a final offer of a 77-cent-an-hour wage increase in a one-year contract.

The union is seeking an 85-cent increase comparable to the $1.20 an hour given bricklayers and masons one week ago by the contractors.

COLLECTOR BUSY

ROME (AP) — Government statistics show Italy collected $3,500,000,000 in taxes last year, or $280.50 for each of the country's 54,300,000 citizens.

Pollution Fighters Gather

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Anti-pollution groups from 11 Ontario cities met at the University of Western Ontario Sunday to discuss plans for a survival day campaign and the possibility of establishing a national organization.

Tentative plans call for students to be hired on a national basis to conduct pollution research projects, a spokesman said.

A committee with representatives from London, Sarnia and Toronto was set up to establish guidelines for the national organization which would function as a co-ordinator of group activities.

It was also decided a national conference will be held September 4 to 6 at Lake Couchiching, 60 miles north of Toronto.

Pollution groups from Sudbury, Barrie, Toronto, Hamilton, Waterloo, London, Sarnia, Windsor, Port Huron, Niagara Falls and Guelph attended the conference.

Artillery Shells Discovered

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Police Chief Tom Law said Saturday a large quantity of artillery shells and mortars has been discovered at the bottom of Owen Sound harbor.

He said police divers were searching the harbor floor for stolen property when they discovered the ammunition.

Harbormaster W. A. Alexander said the shells were probably dropped into the harbor while being loaded onto a tug in the fall of 1945. The tug was taking war surplus shells out to Georgian Bay to dispose of them in deep water.

Navy divers are to be sent to Owen Sound to dispose of the ammunition.

Policemen Raid Cyclists' Club

MIDLAND, Ont. (CP) — One charge of possessing an offensive weapon and 10 charges under the Liquor Control Act were laid Saturday following a raid by Midland police on the Paradise Motorcycle Club's camp at nearby Muskie Bay.

Charged with possessing an offensive weapon—a knife—was John McGale, 23 of Toronto.

Trial of Hippies Charged With Murder of Six Opens Today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The climactic trial set for today in Hollywood's strangest off-screen mini-drama—the story of ritualistic killings of beautiful starlet Sharon Tate and six others—is set to begin today.

While grim greyness of a tiny room on the top floor of the Hall of Justice, four of six defendants—all members of a roving hippie-type band—go on trial charged with murder-conspiracy.

Miss Tate, 26, pregnant wife of Polish film director Roman Polanski, was found fatally stabbed the morning of Aug. 9. Clad only in bikini pants and a bra, she lay dead in the living room of her rented mansion.

Also slain in and about the house, aged her former boyfriend, handsome, nationally-known hairdresser Jay Sebring, 35; a pretty San Francisco coffee heiress, Abigail Folger, 26; a bright, wiry European playboy, Wojciech Frykowski, 37, and a chance visitor, Steven Parent, 18, friend of the caretakers.

Police found few clues. Then, the next night, only a few miles away, wealthy market owner Leno LaBianca and his wife Rosemary were found slain in their house in a similar manner. There were the same scrawlings in blood, as well as hoods over heads.

The second act shifted the spotlight to a new cast of characters.

It was late autumn when Police Chief Edward M. Davis called a news conference to declare Tate and LaBianca cases "solved." He said it had taken 8,750 hours of work by 60 detectives.

Those arrested were identified as the hippie-type "family" of a mesh-bearded, 34-year-old convict, Charles Manson, known as "God" and "Satan" to his followers. Some said the piercing-eyed Manson exercised near hypnotic power over clansmen, who did his bidding without question.

The prosecution accused Manson of sending five black-garbed followers on murder missions from their commune at a ruined, but movie ranch. They claimed the first killings were motivated by Manson's grudge against the rich and, the second, were to show the killers hadn't lost their nerve.

The accused all pleaded not guilty and began a series of pre-trial courtroom maneuvers that assumed epic proportions.

As the curtain rises, it reveals seven victims, the six accused, their lawyers, two co-prosecutors, the judge and dozens of witnesses.

At least one defendant, Linda Kasabian, is expected to be granted immunity and testify against the others. Four others face trial together and, according to some published reports, plan to plead the flagrant guilt at an elaborate defense. Charles Watson, who is fighting extradition from Texas.

The other defendants are Manson, 34, Susan Atkins, 21, Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, and Leslie van Houten, 20.

Prince and Sister Will Visit Nixons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans for next month's three-day visit of Prince Charles and Princess Anne were announced Saturday by the White House.

They were invited to visit the Washington area by President and Mrs. Nixon's daughters, Tricia and Julie, and the latter's husband, David Eisenhower.

They will arrive Thursday, July 31, after ending a state visit to Canada with their parents, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

During the two nights they are in Washington the prince and the princess will stay at the White House.

The royal visitors will fly here from Winnipeg in Air Force One, the presidential jet. Upon arriving they will go directly to the White House to be greeted by President and Mrs. Nixon.

Later, they will go to Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains in nearby Maryland, for a cookout.

The following day's program includes for a visit to the space exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution, a tour of the Capitol and a cruise down the Potomac River.

On Saturday, the final day of the visit, Charles and Anne will be taken to the Patuxent Wildlife Research Centre and later to attend an American League baseball game between Washington Senators and California Angels.

Canadian Diplomat Dies in Britain

LONDON (CP) — Campbell Moodie, veteran Canadian diplomat, died in hospital Saturday. After collapsing at London Airport Friday as he and his wife completed a five-week holiday.

Moodie, 63, was taken to Ashford Middlesex Hospital where he died of cerebral hemorrhage.

His widow said his ashes will be taken to the United States and scattered on the shoreline near Boston.

Born in South Africa and raised in Kelowna, B.C., Moodie was devoted to Canadian-British and Canadian-American relations.

"One of his last thoughts as we drove from London to the airport Friday was that he was worried that relations between Canada and Britain were not as good as they should be," Mrs. Moodie said. "He wished he could do something to improve them."

In a career that included 18 years as press counsellor at Canada House, Moodie was at the end of a five-year term as Canadian consul-general at Seattle when he decided on the London holiday to consider what he might want to do next.

Moodie had served at his time as a Canadian intelligence officer during the Second World War, as a private secretary in Prime Minister Mackenzie King, as press counsellor in London to three Canadian high commissioners and as member of the Canadian delegation at the United Nations.

Not All Can Buy Own Homes

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. E. G. Pleva, internationally-known expert in urban and regional planning, said Sunday Canadians can no longer expect everyone will own his own home because prices have soared beyond reach of 85 per cent of the population.

He told a conference of chamber of commerce executives from across Canada that condominium housing will more and more become an alternative because of lower cost.

Dr. Pleva said government ministers have "been dropping hints" about establishing new towns to ease large city population pressures, but added more should be done to improve small established cities with populations of about 25,000.

"People are changing their habits because of over-crowding in cities," he said. "We have to look at the flows of people, flows of information. We don't know how people behave."

Kingston Forces Day Observed

KINGSTON (CP) — More than 4,500 civilians turned out Saturday to view Canadian armed Forces Day celebrations here.

The program included military band music, physical education displays, mock-combat situations and displays of military equipment.

Participating in the displays were units from Princess of Wales Own Regiment, a local reserve militia unit for boys 18 years of age and under; the Canadian Forces School of Communications and Electronics Engineering and the Canadian Forces Hospital.

Watch's Colors Laid Up

MONTREAL (CP) — The 1st and 2nd Battalion, The Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment) of Canada, laid up their colors Sunday in the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul as pipes and drums played the regiment's slow march.

As shutters clicked and movie cameras whirled, as soldiers, veterans and cadets stood silent, some with tears in their eyes, the two battalions passed to what the department of national defence calls the Supplementary Order of Battle.

They no longer exist—except on paper.

Outside, hundreds of Montrealers and tourists had watched the kilted Black Watch knock on the door for permission to enter the church.

Hundreds more lined the parade route.

The Black Watch originated in 1725 when six independent companies of clansmen were organized as a police force to help the British keep order in the Highlands. A new tartan was designed to avoid jealousy within the clans comprising the force. It used the common colors, dark green, dark blue, and black.

Sure As Shootin'

Two-time Ontario junior women's skeet-shooting champion Gail Evans puts her sights on a target at the Bay of Quinte Trap and Gun Club Sunday. Miss Evans competed for the Cobourg Trap Club, which won the day's competition with 217 points and leads the local group by four points in the season total.

Quinte Trap Club Cracks Whip Sunday Mornings

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

For the unknowing observer, Sunday morning at the Bay of Quinte Trap and Gun Club could appear to sound like the slave ship scene from Ben Hur. Pull! Crack!...Pull! Crack! Pull!

The commands however are given by contestants as clays from the various trap clubs in the area, read for the marksmen at the tricky clay pigeons are just sitting ducks.

Using 12-gauge shotguns with hand-loaded shells that can be no longer than 2¾ inches, the average marksman in a Quinte Trap League competition will break over 20 of the clay birds as opposed to maybe seven or eight for a newcomer.

Guns are of various makes, with Winchesters and Remingtons the most common, and can run into thousands of dollars for the more exotic models. They have two heads for sighting rather than the one normally used for shotgun shooting.

Height that the targets travel and size of shot used are under tight controls to prevent the gunners from being able to wait until the birds are well out before shooting. Also the targets are flung at various angles, in random order by the automatic device that triggers them, giving the marksman a price requisite in picking up the target quickly.

"Co-ordination is the big thing," claims one member, "You have to keep everything smooth." Most relaxed targets are due to flinching from the gun's recoil, which causes the shooter to raise off his sighting line.

Each marksman shoots 25 rounds at a time (the number of shells contained in a box) with most competitions involving either 100 or 50-round totals. The better shooters are handicapped by moving them back further from the targets.

The third leg of the Quinte Trap League competition was held at the Bay of Quinte Club Sunday morning, with five clubs competing. Cobourg gained a four - point lead in the season standings by racking up a 217-point total. Points for each club are determined by taking the combined total of the top five shooters.

One of the top marksmen for the winning club was two-time Provincial minor women's champion, Gail Evans.

Miss Evans began handling firearms at the age of six, and took up competitive trap shooting about four years ago. She has placed highly in a number of events besides the provincial championships, including a fourth place finish in her section of the North American Remington championships.

The Ontario skillet in 1968 and again in '69, she is currently in the midst of a shooting slump that saw her fail at an attempt for a third straight win. "I was practicing seven days a week," said Gail, "but now my practice time is down to only one day and it shows. I've been trying every type of gun imaginable to shake this slump."

Sunday, Miss Evans recorded a 41 out of 50 total to rank in the top 10 of the 55 gunners who competed.

The Bay of Quinte Trap and Gun Club, which has been in operation since 1938, currently has a membership of about 85 and is increasing. Says club president Bert Burgess, "It's one of the country's fastest growing sports. We get people in here who want to practice for duck hunting and such, and many of them like the sport and stay."

Other officers elected for the 1970 season include vice-president Dick Thornton, secretary - treasurer Doug Johnston and field captains Norris Cunningham and Gord Bates. Directors of the club are Harry Farnell, Jack Dodson, Warren Pringle and Bill Pole.

"There's one thing about shooting," Burgess says. "When you're competing you can't blame anybody but the fellow holding the gun if you lose."

Fishers Survive Stiff Test, Win Quinte's 'Mr. and Mrs.'

By ERIC EMERSON
(Staff Sportswriter)

Even on the golf course there seems to be one key to a successful marriage — good communication.

While Belleville divorce courts may be piled high with husbands who drove off the fairways and spouses with a wandering nine iron, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisher have survived marriage's stiffest test, the Mr. and Mrs. Golf Tournament.

The Fishers captured the net low score on the Bay of Quinte course with a round of 68 to lead the field of 85 husband and wife teams. Mr. and Mrs. Alex Ingram were the low gross winners in the two-ball Foursome tourney with an 18-hole total of 84.

"We had some trouble on 18 and 18," claimed Mr. Fisher, "and we took shot six too many putts." "I guess what we really had going for us was good communication," added his wife Anne.

Key hole for the winning couple was the 17th, where the half ball of the winning team found himself behind a tree for his third shot. He punched a line drive from the green and Mrs. Fisher holed a 30-foot putt to save their par.

It was the second win in the event for Mr. Fisher, who carries a seven handicap and his wife, who has a handicap of 37.

Bay of Quinte golfers dominated the tournament taking four of the top six spots in the competition.

Following the Fishers for low net were Mr. and Mrs. Max Haggerty with a round of 69½, while holding down third spot were Mr. and Mrs. Roy McDonnald of Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. Norm Wilson toured the course in 85 strokes to trail the Ingrams by one for the low gross with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barbeau of CFB Trenton taking an 87 total.

Prizes were distributed by Ron Wellmaker, who organized the event and a supper was prepared by club stewards Don and Vi Douglass.

Deacon Squirts Overwhelming

The Belleville Deacon OASA Squirts proved to be too much to handle this week-end as they overwhelmed Springbrook 21-7 and Napanee 26-2.

Dave McBride pitched the Springbrook victory fanning 14, walking four and giving up only six hits while his teammates pounded out 16 hits.

John Jiaxopoulos struck out 11 and walked one in going the route against Napanee.

Combines Crush Mead's High Hopes

CNR Combines smashed any Mead Johnson hopes of taking over sole possession of first place in the Industrial Softball loop, with a 18 - 2 Sunday win.

A nine-run explosion in the second inning provided the CNR squad to their easy win.

Frank "Junior" Day toed the rubber for the winners allowing only five hits and a pair of walks. He struck out five batters. Terry Maynard started for the Mead Johnson team, giving way to Steve White in the sixth. They were pounded for 12 hits, allowing nine walks and fanning two batters.

Mike Fahey had three singles for the Combines, with Junior Day getting a pair of doubles and Joe Craig an equal number of singles.

Gary Genereaux produced the only Mead Johnson tallies with a three-run homer in the seventh and Reg Bennett connected for a triple.

The Post Office moved to within one game of the league leaders by "posting" a 6-3 win over the Drifters.

George Johnson hurled the win for the Postes allowing eight hits and two walks while fanning three batters. Bob Dromgool and Perry Soules worked for the Fire Department, giving up nine hits, walking five and getting two batters on strikes.

Dave McMullen tripled and singled for the Post Office with George Sinfield and Neil Geyer each getting a double and single.

Larry Pitz was best in a losing effort collecting two singles and a double while Bruce Hal had a two-base hit.

Land-bound spectators view the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club's sail past, Saturday afternoon. About 50 craft took advantage of the perfect weather to pass before the review of club commodore Richard Bird. The Bay of Quinte Power Squadron took to the water Sunday, holding their first manoeuvres of 1970.

Fair-weather Friends Converge on Bay

The Bay of Quinte Yacht Club and the Bay of Quinte Power Squadron proved to be fair-weather friends on the weekend with each club enjoying ideal conditions for their annual season-openers.

Close to fifty boats turned out Saturday for the yacht club sail past to be reviewed by club commodore Richard Bird. "It seems like we always get good weather for this event. I don't remember one ever being rained out," beamed the commodore.

A total of 12 crews were on hand for the Power Squadron manoeuvres Sunday afternoon on the bay.

Kelbon IV proved to be the top boat as skipper Bill Bonnell piloted it to a win in the class, while Irene Reed used the craft to take first spot in the ladies' competition.

Bonnell won the Will Stephenson trophy in the open class. Crew members included Fred Vaalland, Doug Wilson and Jack Devine.

Doris James, Kelly Bonnell and Arlene Shaw aided Irene Reed in winning the Teddy Bear trophy for the ladies' section.

The Ed Smith trophy for the top pilot went to the "Wimpy" skippered by Gord Hannifan with Margaret Weller, and Richard Weller as crew members.

Gurney Wins Mosport Can-Am in First Race on McLaren Team

MOSPORT, Ont (CP) — Dan Gurney joined the McLaren racing team during the weekend and the first thing he did for them was win the $75,000 Can-Am event for sports-racing cars.

It was the 31st Can-Am victory for the McLaren organization since the international series for big-bore sports cars started in 1966.

The 30-year-old Californian was driving the car that team founder Bruce McLaren would have driven in Sunday's race had he lived. The New Zealand car-builder and racer died two weeks ago while testing a car in Britain.

Gurney has gained fame both in sports-car and Formula I events.

To win Sunday he had to get past the first of McLaren teammate Denis Hulme of New Zealand and then with a 36-lap close with Jackie Oliver of England, who was driving a British-designed, U.S.-built Autocoast.

Sunday's race was the opener of the 11-race, $1,000,000 Can-Am series, refereed in closer sport. Gurney told the plane to stay with the McLarens for the rest of the season, and that includes Formula 1 racing too.

For his day's work, he won the Labatt's Blue Trophy and $14,438 in prize and accessory money. He also broke track records.

His average speed for the 200-mile race was 116.241 miles an hour compared with the previous Can-Am mark of 105.961 set by McLaren.

He also chopped one-tenth of a second off the lap record for the 2.45-mile road track when he was clocked at one minute, 18.0 seconds. The previous mark was set last year by Jackie Icky of Belgium and Australian Jack Brabham in Formula 1 machines.

Oliver, a 31-year-old Cockney who received a personal fame race stewards for one of the day's actions, was runner-up, almost 18 seconds behind Gurney.

Hulme, his engine overheating and his hands still bandaged from burns suffered in a practice accident before last month's Indy 500, was third, two laps behind the leader.

The reprimand matter resulted from an incident late in the race.

Bobby Motschenbacher of Beverly Hills, Calif., had been up among the leaders in his McLaren for most of the race. On the 84th lap, Oliver was making a bid for victory and trying to weave through traffic when his car touched Motschenbacher's. The McLaren went off the track and Motschenbacher, enraged, although his driver was unhurt.

Motschenbacher immediately lodged a protest against Oliver with the Canadian Auto Sport Clubs, sanctioning body of the race, Oliver and his boss Peter Bryant countered with a protest against Motschenbacher's "unsportsmanlike and dangerous driving."

The CASC stewards stuffed the protests for three hours before they reprimanded Oliver and fined him $50, the minimum under the International Sporting Code because the onus was on him to pass Motschenbacher in a safe and prudent manner.

Motschenbacher was reprimanded for ignoring blue flags, which track marshals display to warn a driver he must give way to a passing driver.

The stewards emphasized their decision would not affect the results of the race.

Roger McCaig of Regina drove steadily to finish fifth in a McLaren, 18 seconds behind fourth-place Tony Dean of England in a Porsche.

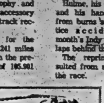
Gordon Devaur of Ottawa was sixth in another McLaren, just a lap behind McCaig. Rainer Brezinka of Toronto was 16th in an ancient McLaren.

John Cordis of Barrie, Ont., also a McLaren driver, completed only 67 of the 80 laps and was listed as 15th.

George Eaton of Toronto, driving the first British BRM in the Can-Am series, retired on the 34th lap with transmission trouble.

Another Canadian-owned McLaren, billed as the Spirit of Edmonton, caused a small sensation at the start of the race.

Although its New-Zealand driver Graeme Lawrence had done well in Saturday's qualifying sessions, it was known the car had valve trouble and it did not show up on the starting grid.



As the race was about to start, the Edmonton car appeared at the Mosport gates in a big transport. Lawrence was allowed to start two laps late after he had passed up. But he lasted only 12 laps before he retired with valve trouble again.

The weekend's Can-Am events were the first in the series history since 1966 to be marked by tragedy. In Saturday practice Richard Brown, 48, of Birmingham, Mich., went off the track and was killed.

Just before the race, a minute's silence was called in honor of Brown and McLaren.

Although the track was crowded with spectators brought out by a warm, sunny day, the race organizers declined to announce the paid attendance. No reason was given, trouble.

Dodgers Let Sudakis Find Own Cure

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Infectious hepatitis kept Los Angeles pitcher Bill Singer on the shelf for two months, but Bill Sudakis' 3½-week quarantine on the Dodgers' bench was the result of a common ailment — disintegration of the batting average.

Singer took a couple of shaky first steps back from the sidelines Sunday—and Sudakis discovered a sure cure for batting woe.

Sudakis slammed a two-run pinch homer in the ninth inning to give the Dodgers a 5-4 National League victory over Chicago Cubs.

Singer, making his first appearance since April 18, was rocked for two runs and was knocked out of the game in the third inning.

The victory, which snapped a three-game Chicago winning streak, advanced the Dodgers to second place in the West Division, half a game ahead of Atlanta Braves but 10½ games behind Cincinnati Reds.

In other Sunday play, Cincinnati trounced Philadelphia Phillies 18-1; Atlanta fell 7-5 to New York Mets, San Diego Padres stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1; Montreal Expos shaded Houston Astros 3-1 and San Francisco Giants beat St. Louis Cardinals 7-4.

Saturday, Chicago whipped Los Angeles 7-1, San Francisco tripped St. Louis 6-4, New York downed Atlanta 4-1, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 6-3, Houston clipped Montreal 5-2 and Pittsburgh dumped San Diego 4-2.

The Dodgers trailed 4-3 Sunday when Billy Grabarkewitz opened the ninth with a single off Chicago reliever Phil Regan. Two outs later, Sudakis batted for pitcher Jim Brewer and hit his fourth homer of the season.

Glover, a 29-game winner for the Dodgers last season, gave up a two-run homer to Jim Hickman in the second inning and two more runs, one of them Ernie Banks' homer, in the third before he was replaced.

Yankees Draw Bead on Baltimore

There are no big bats and no big arms but the slick-fielding, alert New York Yankees have climbed to within three games of leading Baltimore Orioles in the American League East Division.

The Yankees nipped Kansas City Royals 3-2 Sunday for their fifth straight victory and the fifth in 11 games.

At the same time, the slipping Orioles are being chased by Detroit Tigers who whipped California Angels 8-4 for their eighth win in 11 games. They trail Baltimore by eight games.

California's Lefty Phillips said after the game:

"They've got a good hitting ball club and if they're close when Denny McLain comes back on July 1 they can win it."

McLain is suspended until then.

In other games Sunday, the Orioles, who had lost eight of 13 games after opening up a 7½-game lead, righted themselves with a 4-3 win over Oakland Athletics on Dave May's two-run, two-out homer in the 10th inning. Minnesota Twins routed Boston Red Sox 10-2, Washington Senators swept Chicago White Sox 8-4 and 5-3 and Cleveland Indians beat Milwaukee Brewers 9-5.

Saturday, New York defeated Kansas City 9-4, Oakland tripped Baltimore 19-7, Boston beat Minnesota 6-4, Detroit edged California 6-5, Washington outslugged Chicago 12-7 and Cleveland took Milwaukee 10-6.

The Yankees scored their winning run Sunday in the ninth when Roy White hit a double which right fielder Pat Kelly lost in the sun and Thurman Munson drilled a pinch single. White had three hits Sunday after a five-hit spree Saturday night.

Detroit's Willie Horton belted the first of two solo homers in the second inning off Clyde Wright and the Tigers wrapped it up with four runs in the third. Dick McAuliffe singled for one run and Bill Freehan singled home two more.

May, who entered the Baltimore-Oakland game in the eighth inning as a pinch-hit relief replacement, hit his homer off Fred Talbot after Frank Robinson led off the 10th with a pinch single.

The Reds rattled four Philadelphia pitchers for 18 hits, Hal McRae leading the way with three, as right-hander Jim McGlothlin scattered six hits and drove in three, only two runs needed with a fourth-inning single.

New Zealanders Shaken Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — A vocal crowd, but opponents and their own inability to sustain an offensive led to confusion and vexation for the young New Zealand Davis Cup team Sunday.

Instead of being ahead of the Canadians after three matches in the second elimination round of the American zone tennis competition as had been predicted, Onny Parun and Brian Fairlie find themselves on the short end of a 2-1 record in the best-of-five series.

The twosome was soundly beaten in straight sets in the doubles Sunday by Canada's Mike Belkin of Montreal and John Sharpe of Toronto by scores of 6-1, 11-9, 6-3.

In the first two singles Saturday, Fairlie had opened with a win for New Zealand by defeating Belkin 6-4, 6-2 and 6-4. But Sharpe put Canada back into the picture with a defanged win over Parun, who was pulled in the fifth set with a leg cramp.

Sharpe was leading 30-40 and five games to four when Parun was taken from the match by New Zealand team captain Eric White. The outcome in Sharpe's favor were wins of 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 1-6 and 7-5.

"Sharpe was the boss," said White, following the doubles. "He's the one that gave us the pain, a real sharp pain if you'll excuse the pun.

"The Canadians played a good clay-court doubles game. They lobbed a lot and waited for a good shot before putting it away.

"Sharpe only missed about three serve returns in the match and Belkin's interceptions at the net for big points were well done and showed what an experienced boy he is."

Sharpe said he was surprised that the favored New Zealanders were taken in three sets, "but I was more surprised at their reaction at the end."

He was referring to a scene at the conclusion of the match when Fairlie refused to shake hands and drew boos from the crowd.

Both Parun and Fairlie became perturbed with the 1,000 lucky Royals 3-2 Sunday for their fifth straight victory and the fifth in 11 games.

At the same time, the slipping Orioles are being chased by Detroit Tigers who whipped California Angels 8-4 for their eighth win in 11 games. They trail Baltimore by eight games.

California's Lefty Phillips said after the game:

"They've got a good hitting ball club and if they're close when Denny McLain comes back on July 1 they can win it."

Down 2-0, Germans Oust England

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Defending champion England was ousted from the 1970 World Cup soccer championships as the competition was reduced Sunday to four countries—West Germany and Italy from Europe and Brazil and Uruguay from South America.

The West Germans, 3-2 conquerors of England in extra time, play Italy in Mexico City in one semi-final Wednesday. Italy defeated host Mexico 4-1.

In Wednesday's other semi-final at Guadalajara, Brazil will meet Uruguay. The Brazilians, now favored to win it all, beat Peru 4-2 Sunday and Uruguay topped the Soviet Union 1-0 in extra time on a disputed goal.

The semi-final matchups assure that the final will be between an European and a South American team, in a clash of contrasting soccer styles.

All four semi-finalists are previous champions. Three of the teams, Italy, Brazil and Uruguay, are seeking to make the Jules Rimet Trophy their permanent property with an unprecedented third World Cup triumph.

England, one of the favorites to reach the finals here, seemed well on the way to victory with a 2-0 lead over West Germany 67 minutes into the game.

But an attempt to slow the game to a walk and a couple of substitutions d i s t u r b e d the team's outstanding cohesion.

Franz Beckenbauer, outstanding in the German midfield, rallied his team for a tie in regulation time and Gerhard Muller, the leading scorer so far in these championships with eight goals, scored the winner at the 109th minute.

West Germany thus won revenge for its 4-2 loss in overtime to England in the 1966 cup final. It was the second victory for Germany over England in 58 years.

Alan Mullery scored in the 31st minute and Martin Peters in the 65th to put England into its 2-0 lead.

But the mighty Beckenbauer restored the German verve with a goal in the 68th minute and veteran Uwe Seeler, playing in his fourth World Cup, tied the score in the 81st minute.

England manager Sir Alf Ramsey had sent Bobby Bell in for Bobby Charlton in the 66th minute and Norman Hunter for Peters, just before the tying goal.

Reporters asked Ramsey why he had removed Charlton. He replied: "We had planned to bring in a new player, and I still think the move was justified."

Ramsey added: "Never before had England lost such a decisive game after being in the lead 2-0." He said his defence made two bad mistakes which led to German goals.

The German "won by the luck of the game," said Ramsey, who added he considers Brazil a stronger team.

Helmut Schoen, West German team manager, also was asked what he thought of the substitution for Charlton. His reply: "Maybe his engine was not running at high speed any more."

Schoen complimented Ramsey on his fine team and added: "To play England in the noon heat of Mexico for two hours is brutal. I will describe as murder, out."

All Mexico was plunged into gloom by its team's 4-1 loss to Italy, although the 23,000 fans in Toluca Stadium gave the winners a warm hand at the end of the match after having relentlessly urged the Mexican team to greater efforts throughout the game.

Critics Back Home Blame Ramsey's Tactics

LONDON (AP) — British s o c c e r commentators said Sunday that England's defensive tactics and errors by individual players led to the 3-2 West German victory that put the English defending champions out of the 1970 World Cup competition.

"I am afraid Sir Alf Ramsey's men have no one but themselves to blame for this quarter-final defeat," wrote Donald Saunders of The Daily Telegraph. "They became a little too sure of themselves and allowed the Germans to snatch the initiative."

"England finally destroyed themselves," wrote Desmond Hackett of The Daily Express.

Members of a BBC television panel blamed England's "keep ball" tactics when leading 2-0. They also praised West German substitute Jurgen Grabowski as an attacking player who helped change the game in Germany's favor.

Len Shipman, president of the English Football League, said English soccer experts probably will hold an inquest into the defeat.

"After being two goals ahead, they definitely should have been capable of staying in front," Shipman said. "The Germans, when it mattered most, used the wings and profited. We were often defensively minded."

The emphasis placed on defence by Sir Alf Ramsey, England's manager, has drawn criticism in the past from soccer experts who favor an attacking game.

Sport Briefs

CHICAGO (AP) — "I took one less at the leader board on the 15th tee and all I wanted to do was get out and get into the clubhouse." That's exactly what Hugh Royer did Sunday to win the $126,000 Western open golf tournament and cart off his first winning cheque on the tour — $20,000. Royer, who led the tournament after 36 holes only to fall one shot behind Bobby Nichols after Saturday's round, had a 36-33-69 for a final total of 272, 11 shots under par. Dale Douglass, missing a birdie putt which would have forced a sudden-death playoff, finished second and shot a final round of 36-33-69 for a 274 total to capture second money of $14,000.

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Shirley Englehorn capped a dramatic comeback with a pressure-packed birdie on the 72nd hole Sunday to tie Kathy Whitworth and force a playoff for the Ladies' Professional Golf Association championship. Miss Englehorn fired a closing round of three-under-par 70 while Miss Whitworth took a 72 to wind up tied with 285 totals at Pleasant Valley Country Club. They were to meet for the 18th LPGA title in an 18-hole showdown today. Well down the list was Sandra Post Elliott, formerly of Oakville, with a final score of 75-75-82-80-312.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Ron Feagan drove three winners at Garden City Raceway Sunday night, raising his weekend total to nine and his season's total to 90. With four Saturday winners and two Friday, Feagan's weekend efforts were worth $11,448 in purses and $86.90 to a Feagan winbettor.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League will operate a wholly-owned Class A Northern League franchise this summer out of Watertown, S. D. Expos general manager Jim Fanning announced Saturday. Originally, the Expos were to be involved in the Northern League through a working agreement at Winnipeg, but switched the Class A franchise to Watertown when they established a Class AAA International League franchise in the Manitoba city last week. Watertown will play in a six-team league that includes three other South Dakota clubs from Aberdeen, Huron and Sioux Falls. Other members of the league are Duluth and St. Cloud, Minn.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Chi Cheng, a lithe Formosan, was clocked in world record time in the women's 100- and 220-yard dashes Saturday at the Portland Rose Festival track meet. Miss Chi was timed in 10 seconds flat in the 100 and 22.7 in the 220. At first her times were announced as 10.10 and 22.74 on a mechanical timer but for the record the judges went to hand-held watches that made it 10 even an 22.7. Irene Pietrowski of Vancouver finished second behind Miss Chi in the 100 and in the 220. Irene; twice a member of Canada's Olympic team, was second in the 100 with a time of 10.77. Margaret Robb of Vancouver was fourth in 10.95.

OTTAWA (CP) —Gary Woods, 27, a six-year veteran of U.S. pro football, has signed with Ottawa Rough Riders, the club announced Saturday. Terms were not announced but it's believed the former New York Giant second-string quarterback got about $30,000 for a one-year contract. Riders, last year's Grey Cup champions, gave up tight end Tom Pullen to Montreal Alouettes for the right to negotiate with Woods. Coach Jack Gotta persuaded the club to deal off Pullen in the hopes of signing a veteran quarterback to replace the retired Russ Jackson.

LE MANS, France (AP) — Porsche outgunned and outlasted Ferrari and took the first three places for its first victory in a rain-slowed, 24-hour Le Mans auto endurance race that was marred by the death of a course marshal. Porsche led all the way, with two 4.5-litre 917s taking the first two spots an a 908 grabbing third. The winning car was driven by Richard Attwood of Britain and Hans Herrmann of Germany, who finished 342 eight-mile laps — 2,764 miles — for an average speed of 115.20 miles per hour.

Opponents of W. Brandt Score Gains in Elections

BONN (UP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt's conservative opponents made significant gains in three West German state assembly elections Sunday, but Brandt's foreign minister said the results will not affect national policies.

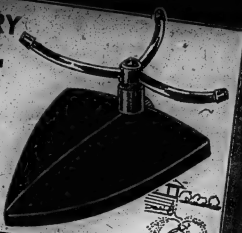
In his first electoral test since becoming post-war West Germany's first socialist chancellor eight months ago, Brandt failed to get a strong endorsement of his efforts to improve relations with the Soviet bloc.

Former chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger, leader of the opposition Christian Democrats, said that Brandt was about to sell out vital West German interests in order to achieve nonaggression pacts with the Soviet Union and Poland.

The biggest loser was the small Free Democratic party, Brandt's crucial coalition partner in the Bundestag, or national parliament. The Free Democrats were ousted from two of the state assemblies and just scraped into the third.

Foreign Minister Walter Scheel, the Free Democrats' leader, said on television that the election results "will have no consequences on federal politics." But his deputy party leader, Interior Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, said the party's ultimate survival is seriously threatened.

Brandt's coalition government has only a 12-seat majority in the Bundestag and could not survive without the Free Democrats' 30 seats. The small party's setback is sure to increase pressure from conservative members of the party to abandon the alliance with Brandt.



After eight months in office, Brandt has admitted that his party has not managed to improve on its performance in the general election of September, 1969.

He said the coalition in Bonn is faced with especially acute autocracy in the state elections in North Rhine-Westphalia, Lower Saxony and the Saarland.

SAVE LOTS OF MONEY
BE SURE TO COMPARE
BEFORE YOU BUY

Our prices are far below all competition. In most cases not just a few hundred dollars but many hundreds of dollars. When checking value, determine the size of the respective houses in relation to price.

We have 4 bedroom 2 bathroom houses for the unheard of downpayment of $2,700.00. See if you can equal that any place in town.

Try and find a 3 bedroom ranch split with stone facing on a finished street in town for less than $23,000.00. We have one.

Investigate the chances of getting a 3 bedroom ranch split level with finished family room on main level. You will find the price to be far above our $25,000.00 range.

Check interest rates. Most of ours are under 10%.

For a real eye opener compare our prices for 6 and 12 unit buildings. You can save thousands of dollars dealing directly with us.

Rollins Clobber Toronto 10-1

If Belleville is going to have its first CASA men's entry in three summers, Rollins Construction would be a likely candidate.

The second - place Commercial softball league team clobbered a short-staffed Toronto Monarch Kings 10-1 Sunday at the Alemite, and is entered in sport weekend's eight - team Campbellford tournament.

Scott Reid joined Rollins regulars Carl Donnelower and Wayne McDonnell to share Sunday's pitching chores. The trio combined to set the Monarch Kings down on three hits. Reid, picked up from the Elks Juniors, recorded ten strikeouts in four innings.

Terry Hiddleston led the 17 - hit Rollins attack by cracking one of the longest home - runs ever hit at the Alemite park. The ball cleared an open fence and came partly to rest in deep left field, and landed on Dufferin Avenue. The losers were without their regular pitcher and left and right fielders.

The new Rollins team will play one of this Friday's opening games in the Campbellford tourney, meeting Brighton at 9 p.m.

Other teams chasing the $250 first prize and $100 runner - up money include Trenton Cann's Cleaners, with pitching ace George Ferguson and Paul Wannamaker who has pitched three no-hitters in seven Trenton league games to date. Toronto, Brighton, Campbellford, and Hastings round out the field.

Friday and Saturday night games are scheduled at 7:30 and 9 p.m., with the first of six Sunday contests slated for 1 p.m. If Rollins win Friday, they play a 2.30 Sunday game. A loss would put them in Sunday's 1 p.m. fixture.

'New Kid' Tops on Track

"A new kid on the track" walked off with top honors at the Riverview Speedway Saturday night taking his 1953 Chevy to a win in the Super Feature. It was the fourth time in five races that a six-cylinder car has won the featured event.

Foster piloted his machine to a big lead over John Sinclair who finished second in the race, to receive his second checkered flag of the night.

Sam Dingman took over the lead in the Silver Piston Trophy competition for the top driver with a win in the six-cylinder feature.

Shelly Gregory won her third straight race to remain unbeaten in the Powder Puff competition.

Golden Toes

Golden Mile had "golden toes" as they trounced Jim's Pizzeria 9-2 in Belleville Minor Soccer contest Saturday.

Dan Thiffault led the attack with a pair of goals with the others going to Dennis Thiffault, Hughes and McKinney.

Midgets At Extremes

The Belleville Lions Midgets played to the extremes over the weekend, dropping a close 7-6 game to Kendal Saturday and shellacking host for a 6-6 Sunday.

At Parkdale, Sunday, three Belleville pitchers limited Newcastle to only five hits while the Lions pounded out 13. Bill Kirkham was the winning pitcher with relief help from Stan Brooks and Carman McCaffrey. White performed the mound chores for the Newcastle brewers with eighth inning help from Bennett.

The Lions threesome struck out eight batters and issued one free pass, while their opponent duo fanned nine and failed to walk a man.

Cousins led the hitting attack with two hits and scored three runs, with Webb, Collick, Smith and Geegan each collecting two hits.

In Kendall Saturday a costly error in the bottom of the 12th inning allowed the winning run to score. In all Belleville committed four errors while Kendal played errorless.

Lee Geegan went the distance for the winners giving up 10 hits and walking six each. Sam Bennett was the loser in relief of McCaffery and starter Stan Brooks.

Bantam Tom Coughlan tallied three hits for Belleville with Smith, Collkin and Brooks each pounding out two hits.

SACO's Make Quarters

The Belleville SACO Bantams survived to the R division semi - finals in the Preston Softball Tournament before bowing out to a strong East Gwillimbury squad 7-1. Belleville had reached the semi-finals by edging St. Mary's 7-6 after a 13-1 morning loss to Sarnia.

Wally Hull absorbed the loss to Sarnia striking out seven and walking five.

Chris Kalney paced Belleville with two base hits.

Bruce Sutherland went the distance for SACO's lone victory fanning four and walking five. Sutherland, Hull, Phillips, and Farrell each accounted for two hits while Thistle and Kalney contributing one apiece.

Sutherland again went the distance in the semi - final match, fanning five and issuing four free passes. He also accounted for Belleville's lone run with a solo home run in the early stages of the game.

Daca Supports Can-Am Race

Trenton's Teacher - Racer, Jerry Daca competed at Mosport Park on Sunday in the major supporting race to the Labatt's Can - Am International.

Peewees Get 50-50 Odds

The CBRT peewees half a 10-50 weekend, dropping a 10-8 Eastern Ontario Baseball Association loss to Whitby Saturday then rebounding for a 9-1 Sunday win over Port Hope.

Clyde Routley went the distance on the mound in Sunday's win, recording nine strikeouts and walking six and stroking a pair of singles on his own behalf.

In Saturday's 10-8 loss Brian Loveless and Billy Whalen struck out eight Whitby batters, walking 5. Ricky Calkin, Mike McClintock and Tony Meagher each hit safely twice off Whitby hurlers Mike Callen and David Allen, who fanned six Belleville batters and issued four walks.

Towers Tykes Take Third

Belleville's Towers Food City tyke baseball all-stars rolled to their third straight victory Sunday evening up with three runs in the last inning to edge Cobourg 8-7.

Randy Hutchison and Mike Hall combined to fire a four-hitter and fan 19 Cobourg batters.

Howie Coons connected for a triple and two singles to lead the Towers attack with Gary Seegan punching a triple and a single, and Mike Burks offering two singles.

Kinsmen Get Crowded South Hastings Berth

The Belleville Kinsmen Juniors found accommodations in the South Hastings league rather crowded as they were forced to share a four-place berth with Shannonville by losing a 4-1 game to last season's pennant winners Saturday.

Larry Lewis pitched the win, giving up five hits, fanning seven batters and walking one. Glenn Carleton was tagged with the loss as he allowed safeties, walked a pair and struck out six men.

Bill Barbeschuk paced the winners' attack, banging out three singles, while Bud Hill had a solo homer in the third inning. Mike Brant and Larry Marshall each had a single.

Carleton, who had two hits for the Kinsmen, scored their only run with a fourth inning double. A base hit by Terry Meagher chased him home.

Other hitters for Belleville were Brian Coughlin and Dale Durvall with a single each.

A two-out double by Plane's outfielder, Bob Neilson, gave the Canadian team a seventh-inning run that allowed them to snap Reed's unbeaten string at nine games with a 3-1 win.

Ted Alverson pitched the win. He was touched for seven hits, fanning 11 and walking two batters. Harold Fascon went the distance for Read, allowing eight hits. He struck out seven and walked a single batter.

Neilson led the winners at the plate with a double and single. Eric Emerson had a pair of singles and Howard Meeks doubled.

For Read, Paul Hanley was good for a double and three singles while Carm Milligan chipped in a pair of safeties.

Letts moved to within two points of the league lead by dropping his Reserve foe 4-3.

Doug Geen brought his pitching record to 4-0 firing a five-hitter. He struck out 11 batters and gave up nine walks.

Glenn Marecle and George Hill horked for the losers. They were reached for 12 Letts safeties while giving up one walk and setting seven batters down on strikes.

OHA Plans Western League

WALKERTON, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association will hear applications in London June 16 for a Western Ontario Junior Hockey League to comprise the new second tier junior hockey as established by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The tier two groups will comprise 17 teams from Manitoba, four from Thunder Bay, five from Ottawa, four each from New Brunswick, Northern Ontario, the Maritimes and Newfoundland and five from western Ontario.

The draft paper on the tier structuring reformed an automatic release provision for tier two players and limited the strong OHA Junior A Series.

The mechanics of drafting players from the tier two leagues will be established at Niagara Falls, Ont., Tuesday.

The OHA will also draw up its 1970-71 schedule and make its selections in the over-age midget draft.

Clarence Schmalz, OHA president, said here Saturday only two teams have made a formal application for the Western Ontario League. Both entries were filed by separate organizations in Brantford.

Others expressing interest, he said, include Detroit, Chatham, Thomas, Windsor, and Guelph.

Liberace In Kingston July 1

Liberace will be making one of his infrequent personal appearances in Canada, when he plays at Kingston Memorial Centre, Wednesday, July 1. The famous star of stage and television, dubbed Mr. Showmanship in recognition of his noted performances and stylish clothing, is riding the top of a popularity crest and has been playing to "turn away" crowds wherever he appears.

The glittering candelabra on a glass topped grand piano, especially brought along by the artist, plus his wardrobe of unabashed elegance all go along with the dazzling pianistic virtuosity and sensitivity to his instrument, plus a lot of spicing warmth and humor.

He is on one of his rare personal appearance tours, restricted to 20 weeks of each year by the artist. His first make him one of the top 10 paid performers in the show world.

Born Wladsiu (Walter) Valentino Liberace, and once known as Walter Busterboyx, the noted pianist and comic has played in every type of music hall, night club, arena, opera house and auditorium known. He started out at the age of 17 in a government sponsored symphony orchestra — he played the Persian Room in New York's Plaza Hotel for $35 per week and went back seven years later at star of the room with his own piano valued at $150,-000.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down fractionally in light mid-morning trading today.

On index, industrials fell .15 to 152.1), golds 1.29 to 154.36, base metals .59 to 68.78 and western oils .86 to 129.57.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 214,000 shares, down from 277,000 at the same time Friday.

Losers outnumbered gains 79 to 57 with 108 issues unchanged. The market opened with a small loss this morning.

Prices were down fractionally Friday despite an easing trend in late trading.

Volume has fallen off heavily since the beginning of last week.

More than 750,000 shares are usually traded by 11 a.m.

Analysts remain pessimistic about a firming trend in the near future.

Largest losses were in bank, oil refining and steel sectors.

Substantial gains were made in communications, food processing and trusit and loan sectors.

Among declining issues, Comlnco was down ½ to 22, Gulf ¾ to 14¾, Kaiser Resources ¼ to 11, Bethlehem 1¼ to 13¾ and Opemiska ¾ to 13⅝.

Auto Electric was up 40 cents to $4.00, Labatts ¼ to 21¼, Industrial Acceptance ¼ to 15⅞, Falconbridge ⅛ to 132 and Seagrams ¼ to 61.

Toronto Livestock

TORONTO (CP) — Considerling condition prices on all classes of slaughter cattle were steady at the Ontario public stock yards today.

Replacement cattle were steady on a firm demand, veal calf prices were barely steady. Hog and sheep prices were lower.

There were too-leg lambs sales to quote prices.

Slaughter cattle 798: Choice steers 32-33; good 30.50-31; medlums 28-30; commons 23-27.50; choice heifers 30.50-31.50 with sales to 32.50; good 28-30; medlums 27-28.50; commons 22-26.50; good cows 23.50-24.50 with sales to 25; medlums 21-23; canners and cutters 15-21; good heavy bologna bulls 27-29; commons and medlums 22-26.50.

Sheep and lambs 77: Sheep 5-14.

Cost of Living

A Decline at Last

The consumer price index dropped slightly in May, the first time the index has declined since last September. The index dropped one-tenth of a point to 129.6 from 129.7 in April, mainly because of lower food prices. The index is based on 1961 prices equalling 100.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For June 16

Your birthday today: A year of personal adventure begins, in which each day can be poignant, or dramatic. All you have to do is open your eyes to reality. There will be stimulating new contacts just when you least expect them. Today's natives are active, preferring physical approaches to all problems; dancing is an oft-sought outlet.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Today is one of those mercurial times when it seems something efforts for family dilemmas, quite. Even very ordinary people appear unusual, sharper.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Let others take the lead while you tend to financial details. An original action holds good prospects for you. Delays are unimportant.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Rise and shine with your restless curiosity. Some older people seem determined to get in your way. Improvise a way to get around them soon.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): For the nonce all your friends choose to be contrary, asking special attention. Good work takes root now, especially starting-point ideas.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Mental effort to day is more effective than physical action. If you can get around the chronic nuisances, you can hit on a new short cut and get a lot done.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Traveling does not bring the expected results, but everything else sails along beautifully. Romance matters are easily handled now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Patience with group finances finally turns in your advantage in the form of special aid in personal matters. Seek imaginative ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Try to get full co-operation from people at large resources who usually avoid publicity. Help in your career can be obtained.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Whatever you do seems uphill; you will see that the resistance has forced you to do better work and has brought other views into your final results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): People you care about involve you in their problems now. In business affairs you can carry out a bit of excellent strategy. Travel, a fresh point of view are important.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Do not slow your career is about to happen and doesn't. Even routine details, finished today, have a broad leverage on the future. Meeting people is of high importance.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Visitors bring information and perhaps gifts — the information is by far the more valuable. Marital and partnership matters flourish now.

Battle Rages For Strategic Cambodian City

PHNOM PENH (AP) — A Cambodian and South Vietnamese force battled entrenched Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops today for control of Kompong Speu and Cambodia's most vital overland supply route.

In Saigon, South Vietnamese officials reported the Cambodian and South Vietnamese troops had recaptured the provincial capital about 35 miles southwest of Phnom Penh Sunday night.

But later reports from the scene said a Cambodian army patrol had tried to make the first penetration of the city and was stopped by a curtain of fire from Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops.

Trustees Press For Extension

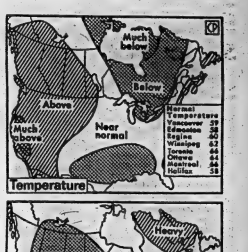
OTTAWA (CP) — The French-language School Trustees Association of Canada agreed Saturday to press for an end to taxation of the minimal payments received by school trustees.

The move was in line with a similar stand by the national trustee association.

In advance of the decision, Fernand Lefebvre, president of the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Boards, presented a brief to the French-language trustees convension favoring the no-taxable principle.



Describing taxation as unjust, he said other municipal servants are not taxed on money received for performing their duties.

Postmen Are Idle In Quebec Towns

QUEBEC (CP) — Letter carriers and postal workers across Quebec province, with the exception of Montreal and the northwestern Abitibi region, walked out early today to begin a 24-hour strike.

An official of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said at least 2,000 men were involved in the strike, one of a series across Canada.

Northern regions and Montreal were hit by the work stoppage last Friday.

Mixed Bag

British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Alberta are expected to receive above normal temperature readings, while the remainder of the country will have near normal and below normal readings during June according to the 30-day weather outlook of the United States weather bureau. Light to moderate precipitation for most of the country, with the northern Quebec and parts of Labrador receiving heavy rainfall.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Medical Treatment Methods Change

I make these predictions: Minidrinks will soon be lower; sideburns will be higher. Long hair will (by "yet") crew cuts and bobbed hair will be "in" again. There is nothing so certain in life as change.

It's true that there's always death and taxes; and that the sun rises in the east and the tide comes in and goes out. But the human being is not as unchanging as certain natural phenomena. Medicine, of course, is no exception. It has had its own revolutions during the past few decades.

For example, who would have dreamed 50 years ago that surgeons would be ordering their patients out of bed the very day (or next day) after a serious major operation? But that is mattersof-fact procedure today. And 25 years ago the efficient treatment of stomach or duodenal ulcer did not require that the patient stick to a special, bland diet for the rest of his life?

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have confidence in my doctor yet I question one part of his treatment of my duodenal ulcer. Although he has cut off my smoking and drinking, he says I can eat practically everything that agrees with me. Isn't this being a bit too radical? — Mr. U.

Comment: Coming back to what I have been saying the treatment of ulcer has changed, too. Doctors are more liberal in prescribing diets for their patients. Their only concern is to promote healing of the ulcer. There's no conclusive proof that a soft diet enhances it or that highly seasoned foods prevent it.

Long gone is the traditional theory that to cure your ulcer you must be on a diet of milk, cream, white meat, fish, pureed vegetables, etc. Each ulcer discoverer, by experience, the foods he shouldn't take.

For example, some are made uncomfortable by taking red foods; or by indulging in alcoholic drinks, very cold or hot drinks, soft drinks, corn, nuts, cabbage, sausages, pork. For some these increase acidity, and cause more pain and discomfort.

I believe that perhaps the most important part of the diet regime is to make certain that you eat something at least every two to three hours. Food acts as a buffer against too much stomach acidity and gives the ulcer a chance to heal.

Of course, psychosomatics is important, too. A relaxed way of life is essential. Tension is the enemy.

I hope I have convinced you, Mr. U., that it is likely that your confidence in your doctor has not been misplaced. Except in special instances, very strict ulcer diets are no longer in medical fashion.

For Mr. H.: I suppose we can't be too dogmatic about the management of varicocele. In reply to one reader a short time ago, I wrote that she shouldn't be too concerned about the effect on fertility until the varicocele becomes quite large. But perhaps the safest way, I said, would be to consult with a urologist even though the varicocele is still small.

Today I've come across a reference to an article on the subject in which the investigators found that neither the sperm count nor the motility of the sperms was in any related to the size of the varicoceles. So, I repeat Mr. H., if in doubt better let the urologist decide whether or not to leave your varicocele alone or operate. . . .

For Mrs. C.: I don't know how your doctor feels about it, but I do not believe it makes good sense to "fix" varicose veins while you are six months pregnant.

"Why didn't you tell me he had power brakes?"

Obstetricians Endorse Pill

JASPER, Ala. (CP) — The Society of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists of Canada announced Saturday it endorses oral contraceptives as a means of birth control.

A statement released at the society's annual convention said the benefits of taking the pill make any associated risks minimal and "therefore acceptable."

But the statement said physicians must be aware of adverse effects the pill can produce in some persons.

"Oral contraceptives, in common with almost all medications, may produce serious adverse reaction in a small percentage of users," the statement said.

"Some evidence exists that the most important side-effects of thrombo-embolic disease, especially in the women already predisposed by previous similar occurrences or by other circulatory abnormalities, such as severe varicosities or hypertension."

The statement said present evidence is incomplete but it suggests there may be a link between these risks and specific amounts of hormones in certain pills.

Preventive Maintenance Is Cheapest and Safest

First of Two-Part Series
By RAY STAPLEY

Preventive maintenance is by far the most economical approach to car repairs. Apart from the risk of sudden mechanical failure, a "leave-well-enough-alone" attitude frequently results in minor defects developing into monstrous repair bills.

Despite this, many vehicles on our roadways are more or less neglected. According to my accident investigation files mechanical failure plays a major role in our highway carnage and sudden brake failure definitely is the prime culprit.

It is estimated that about half the vehicles on the road are in need of brake work. The old excuse for putting off safety checks are built into human nature and they don't seem to change. "I'm short of money right now." "Next week for sure. If I drive carefully there shouldn't be any trouble." "I'm trading next month." When you are dealing with life and death these lame excuses are unacceptable, especially when it is a known fact that preventive maintenance is the cheapest available.

For the past 30 years all domestic cars have been equipped with hydraulic brakes which depend on about one pint of specially - formulated brake fluid to keep them operating. The loss of only a few ounces of this vital fluid results in instant brake failure and most sudden failures stem from loss of fluid. While hydraulically - operated brakes are much more efficient than the original steel rod or cable-controlled brakes, they are much less forgiving about neglect.

For several years, most domestic cars have been equipped with self-adjusting brakes which automatically keeps the brake pedal at the top of its travel. While this is an excellent safety feature, it can lead to neglect. Frequently, it is assumed that since the brakes appear to be functioning properly there is no need for regular inspection, but it must be remembered that the self-adjusting mechanism continues to operate long after the linings are worn out for replacement.

The first indication of wear comes as a nasty scraping noise as the bar metal of the brake shoes grinds against the drums. Once scored beyond a certain safety limit the drums must be replaced and, depending on the make of the car, each new drum can cost up to $50 or more.

Actually, for those who refuse to have their brakes checked on a time or mileage basis, the expensive telltale grinding sound is truly a blessing in disguise. Upon hearing it most drivers head for the nearest garage. While worn linings and scored brake drums reduce the car's stopping potential, they are not the major reason for complete loss of brakes.

Defects anywhere in the hydraulic system are the prime cause of sudden brake failure, but seldom is there warning of impending disaster before the brake pedal drops limply down to the floor.

Sydney J. Harris Says

We Are in 'Future Shock'

In the spring issue of that enlightening quarterly, "Horizon," Alvin Toffler develops the theme of "future shock," a term he coined in an earlier article five years ago, when he predicted some of the things that would be happening today.

Toffler points out that "when we hurl a man into outer space we surround him with an exquisitively designed microenvironment . . . within liveable limits." But the universe man has no less been buried into the future, and "we take few pains to protect him from the shock of change."

What is happening to us is almost as stark "as though NASA had shot Armstrong naked into the cosmos." For the "future shock" Toffler sees us suffering from is a "breakdown of rational response . . . which people are overwhelmed by demands for rapid adaptation."

Five years ago, noting the swift acceleration of change in the high-technology nations, he warned that "the malaise, mass neurosis, irrationality, and free-floating violence already rampant in contemporary life" might be no more than a foretaste of tomorrow unless we came to understand — and prevent — future shock.

The human organism, both physically and psychologically, needs to be prepared for a high rate of change, just as the astronauts need to be prepared to carry their "bio-system" with them into the lunar environment. If we move too swiftly from one state to another, we become irritable, depressed, apathetic, aggressive, or actually ill.

Toffler reaffirms his warning that "we are creating an environment so filled with accelerations, twists, reversals, eruptions, mind-jangling crises and innovations as to test the limits of man's adaptive capacities. We are setting the stage for future shock on a vast scale."

It is possible, indeed, that we are racing toward the most devastating outbreak of mass hysteria in history, over-stimulated like so many rats in an experimental cage, where a multiplicity of buttons bring forth a new and unexpected result with each pressing. This is the way insanity is induced.

Since there are no rational "solutions" except deliberately slowing the pace of change, we are offered just as simplistic answers — violence by the militants, repression by the rightists, drug-escapism by the frightened and alienated, wanton and senseless killings by an increasing number of psychopaths. Our new concern with the physical environment of man should not blind us to the perilous ways we are tampering with our limited adaptive capacities of mind and emotions.

Drug Report Will Urge No Jail for 'Pot' Users

Bomb Rocks McGill

MONTREAL (CP) — The 100-lb Montreal-area bomb explosion this year rocked several buildings on the downtown campus of McGill University early today. Police also dismantled three other devices.

Police said the explosion on the English-language university campus was heard for miles and shattered windows. "Completely wrecked the boiler room adjacent to two engineering buildings" and smashed a large steam pipe.

There were no injuries.

Minutes before the explosion, the Montreal bomb squad dismantled two devices that were set to go off within minutes." They were placed near an ISM building in suburban St. Laurent near the Montreal International Airport.

Both devices were inside a canvas bag and each contained seven sticks of five-pound dynamite attached to a timing pattern.

A third bomb device was found shortly after the McGill blast near a power transformer leading to the research laboratory of Domtar Ltd. in suburban Senneville.

The device, made up of six 10-pound sticks of dynamite inside a flight bag, was discovered following police search after a Domtar night watchman received a telephone tip.

A Lesson in 'Mothering'

Belleville schools are rapidly turning into zoos as teachers introduce animals into the classroom as adjuncts to the teaching of conservation, consideration, and family life. Queen Mary School is currently one-up on the others in the unusual pet division, with the introduction into the grades 3 and 4 classroom of Marigwih, the 4-weeks-old raccoon belonging to teacher Miss S. J. Warr. Julie Towers gets a helping hand from her teacher in giving the baby coon his mid-morning feeding. (For story, see Page 3.)

Pacifist Exemption Widened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States selective service system, told by the Supreme Court it can't force a man to fight in violation of his conscience, was left wondering today how to separate sincere objectors from the phoneys.

Curtis W. Tarr, director of the service, called in his staff for consultation after the heard of the decision and scheduled a news-conference today to discuss the impact of the ruling.

Draft law provides for exemption from military service for men who "by reason of religious training and belief" oppose participation "in war in any form."

The court decision appeared to give those seeking conscientious objector status more leeway to defend their claims, for it accepted Welsh's argument based on "political, sociological or philosophical views."

The law, as written, specifically excluded those as grounds of conscientious objection.

The Supreme Court, however, said that clause does not rule out people with strong opinions about such matters, so long as their pacifist views are held with "religious" fervor.

'Leaked' News Irritates MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Time magazine says that a federally-authorized drug inquiry has recommended softer penalties for users of marijuana, in widespread use in Canada.

Although the interim report of LeDain commission on non-medical use of drugs has not been made public, the news magazine says it proposes the removal of the so-called "soft" cannabis drugs—marijuana and hashish—from the Narcotic Control Act.

The commission, headed by Gerald LeDain, dean of Toronto's Osgoode Hall law school, suggested the cannabis drugs be switched to the Food and Drug Act which could be amended to further lighten drug penalties.

Under the revision, maximum penalty for trafficking in cannabis drugs would be reduced to 18 months from a theoretical maximum of life.

Jail sentences would be eliminated entirely for possession. The first-conviction penalty would be a year's suspended sentence. Second offenders would be liable for a $100 fine.

All criminal records for drug offences would be destroyed after two years. Police would be encouraged to end the practice of enticing young people to traffic in order to gain convictions.

Time says the report argues that the use of marijuana and hashish is spreading so rapidly that it is becoming a pervasive aspect of Canadian life. It finds the police and courts are, to a large extent, helpless to control it.

The Time account of the report's content earlier led Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) to advance a motion in the Commons to launch a government investigation of the alleged leak to the news magazine.

Lucien Lamoureux, the Commons speaker, ruled the motion out of order along with another from Mr. Howard that the report be made public immediately.

According to Time, the commission file for legal consideration on young drug offenders, and the resulting alienation and mistrust, is a major problem in the non-medical use of drugs.

Quoting from the report, the article said: "The harm caused by a conviction for simple possession appears to be out of all proportion to any good that it is likely to achieve. It is bound to blight the life of some of the most promising of the country's youth."

The commission also recommends that the production and prescription of amphetamines, better known as speed, be far more rigorously controlled. The practice of doctors telephoning prescriptions should be ended. Doctors could be required to place their medical licence number on each prescription. Patients should give their social insurance numbers as a check.

Also favored was government financial and moral support for youth-run centres that provide a haven for an addict in trouble. Youths in drug-induced panics are usually in terror of established agencies. It is essential that non-professional young people help such people in a familiar atmosphere.

Labor May Back Postmen

OTTAWA (CP) — A meeting scheduled today between postal union leaders and the executive of the Canadian Labor Congress could result in an indication of the nine-month-old contract dispute in the post office.

The postal workers have already received offers of money and other forms of support from brother unions in their fight against the federal government's wage-restraint guidelines.

A united-front strategy? however, is likely to be a topic at the CLC-postal meeting as the CLC itself formally considers what to do about the guideline policy.

Indians Re-elect Rebel

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Wilmer Nadjiwon, re-elected Monday as chief of the Cape Croker Indian band, vowed to tear down the Union of Ontario Indians.

"Formerly president and vice-president of the union, Chief Nadjiwon resigned and took his band out of the union last fall when the federal government began paying the present executive salaries of $8,000 to $11,000 a year.

"They have become civil servants and therefore can't represent Indians," he said.

"In the future my duty will be to destroy what took so much to build."

He said Indians were "little league" when compared with the federal government in having the power to determine their future.

He accused the government of implementing proposals in its white paper on Indians without the full consultation it had promised Indians.

Chief Nadjiwon defeated Joseph Akiwenzie 82-42 as about half the reserve's 200 qualified electors voted.

Aviation Authorities Seek to Stop Sabotage

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of the special assembly of the International Civil Aviation Organization will face the challenge of overlooking their political differences to agree on a resolution to prosecute civil aircraft saboteurs.

The 15-day assembly of ICAO, a United Nations agency based in Montreal, is expected to bring together delegates from about 70 countries.

The special conference was called because of the increase in terrorism and, more specifically, because of two incidents of sabotage—the crash of a Swiss airline and the loss of 47 lives and damage to an Austrian plane earlier this year.

Election Drags Toward Vote

LONDON (CP) — Conservatives tried to whip up an economic storm out of one month's trade figures as a top-sided election battle crept towards an end today.

Attempting to lift morale among some of his more worried supporters before Thursday's election, Conservative Leader Edward Heath rushed around London's weaker Tory-held seats saying that "We are winning" despite the pulse-takers who maintained that Prime Minister Wilson was still in the lead.

His party was aroused by trade figures for May which showed that Britain had a deficit of £31,900,00 following a smaller £5,000,000 deficit in April. The at ock market sagged and the strength of the pound dipped slightly.

Kidnapped Envoy Is Still Captive

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — The release of kidnapped West German Ambassador Ehrenfried von Hollenben was awaited today following the arrival in Algeria of 40 Brazilian political prisoners freed as ransom for him.

Conditions set by the kidnappers for the 61-year-old diplomat's freedom apparently were met when Brazilian television stations relayed photographs and reports of the prisoners stepping off an airliner in Algiers Monday night. But six hours after their plans landed, there was still no sign of von Hollenben.

Governments--Are They to Be Doctors' Partners or Masters?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Uncertainty about ultimate government intentions towards the medical profession "tends to keep our relationships at arm's length," Dr. Ross M. Matthews of Peterborough, Ont., said Monday.

The out-going president told the Canadian Medical Association meeting governments have not clarified if they "envisage a continuing partnership between us or some sort of master-servant relationship."

"We have a new health care complex to build. It will not be much of an edifice if we work in isolation or with hostility. We get glimpses of what could be accomplished by a genuine partnership. I think that is what our patients deserve."

Dr. Matthews said Canadian doctors have yet to reach a consensus on how to work with the government. He said this now is the fundamental issue in Canadian medicine's future.

He rejected the concept of a government-assessed fee schedule, but repeated earlier calls for restraint by provincial medical associations who now set fee schedules.

Dr. Matthews warned against recurring formal confrontations between governments and the medical profession, saying the distrust and conflict resulting could add nothing to patient benefit.

"My over-riding fear is that we could be forced into this position if our other options are closed by government action or inaction."

The president referred to recently-proposed legislation in Quebec which would deny medical care benefits to patients of doctors not participating in the plan.

The legislation was withdrawn, but Dr. Matthews said he is "fearful of the consequences" of that sort of legislation, because if the safety-valve of practising outside the plan is removed the potential for recurring turmoil would be immeasurably increased.

In meetings Monday, the CMA endorsed male and female sterilization, on conditions that operations are performed by qualified doctors in an active-treatment hospital or, in the case of men, where adequate facilities are available.

The association also stipulated written permission of the patient, which states he understands the operation may be permanent. Similar consent should also be received from the spouse or guardian when available.

The sterilization statement was proposed by Dr. Jack Walters of London, Ont., and was similar to the position the Ontario Medical Association took last month at an Ottawa meeting.

But a lunch-hour demonstration by members of the Women's Liberation Movement, designed to draw a sympathetic response to their demands for free access to abortions, prompted only inconclusive debate among the conference delegates.

Various doctors said fears of jeopardizing themselves professionally have held doctors back in considering more liberal abortion practices.

Present laws provide a pregnancy may be terminated where life or health of the mother is in danger, providing the operation is done in a properly accredited hospital, with permission of an abortion committee of at least three doctors.

Buses Will Run To Zwick's Island

Bus service will again this year be provided to Zwick's Island Park by the Belleville Transit Commission.

Yesterday city council gave approval to a commission request to operate the Island bus service commencing Wednesday, July 8. The service will operate until September 2. Regular bus fares and transfers will be accepted on the park run.

The Island service last year was operated on a trial basis.

Trenton Tenter Now in Belleville

A Trenton man, who with his wife and four children was advised by a county welfare official to move to Belleville to find housing accommodation is now living in a tent in a back yard on Dundas Street, East.

Alderman Arthur Keegan told council yesterday that he had been approached by Richard Deshane with the hope of finding housing in Belleville.

He said the man had been evicted from his house in Trenton and was advised to come to Belleville where housing was available. Welfare would pay the rent in Belleville, Mr. Deshane was told.

But the Trenton man was unable to find a house in Belleville and now is living with his family in a tent at 569 Dundas Street, East.

Rather than a housing surplus in Belleville, Alderman Keegan said the city was short 1,000 homes.

Council will investigate the Trenton man's claim that he was advised to move to Belleville.

Noisy Air Conditioners Source of Complaints

A new type of noise nuisance has hit the Belleville scene and at least one city councillor has been asked if something can be done about it.

It is the home-sized air conditioner that is placed outside the house for efficiency.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey said the noisy air conditioners are annoying to the neighbors — especially when they are placed at the side of the house close to the adjacent dwelling.

Alderman Jack Ireland, local appliance dealer, said that when the conditioners are placed either at the front or the back of the house this is not too objectionable. He said he would be happy to give the name of a dealer who sold quiet conditioners.

Alderman Jeffrey had two other nuisance complaints for consideration of council.

One was the complaint of three yapping dogs in the backyard at a Bridge and Sidney Street area residence.

Mrs. Jeffrey said the complainants had contacted both city hall and the Humane Society and were told there was no noise bylaw covering barking dogs.

Car wrecking operations in the Centre Street area of Hillcrest were the source of another complaint. Children could not be kept out of the old cars and were suffering cuts during play.

The city clerk was directed to check if the wreckers have licences to operate.

Board Approves Trenton Track

Trenton is on the way toward becoming the track and field centre for Hastings county.

At Monday night's board of education meeting, trustees took the first steps in creating an all-weather track at Trenton High School for field event meets.

"Trenton has led the way; we should support them," said Trustee Macdonald Smith.

The board agreed in principal to completion of the project next year, subject to review at budget time.

Trenton High's track coach Peter Howe presented a plea to the board asking for a commitment to finish the track, if money could be found. Funds for the purpose were spent this year on initial preparation of the field.

He told trustees the students had raised $15,000 for the all-weather track through two walkathons.

In addition, the principal of the school has agreed to reallocate funds for his school toward the track project.

By giving up entrance doors on the west side of the school, stage lighting and construction of additional cupboards, the principal was able to divert $7,000 of the school's allocation to the track.

First stage of the project would see fences constructed and the centre field drained.

But Mr. Howe sought assurance that if he committed the $15,000 his students had raised for the work, the board would agree to complete the project in future years.

"I would hate to see the money our kids raised go to make a better football field," he commented.

Total cost of the completed track is estimated at $64,000. It would have an asphalt base, covered with three - eighths of an inch of rubber and asphalt compound. The top layer was a priority item of the Trenton board of education before its amalgamation into the county board in 1969.

Mr. Howe said the track would be used by other schools in the county, whose track and field athletes are handicapped in competition by lack of all - weather track experience.

"If we continue to improve our facilities as we have in coaching, we might have county athletes in the 1976 Olympics," Mr. Howe noted.

Sketches Donated

Council Votes $350 For Youth Parkette

Are teenagers congregating on Front Street to watch the girls go by a recreational or sociological problem?

City council yesterday could not make up its mind, but it did vote up to $350 to provide some kind of downtown park area that might entice them off the street.

Several weeks ago, following complaints from merchants that the young people were blocking entrance to stores, the city recreation and arena committee was authorized to set up some kind of an off-street rest area where the teenagers might congregate.

But Alderman Robin Jeffrey said the committee had run into a dead end unless funds were provided and the matter was referred to city council.

She said there was a small, privately owned area on the river bank near the entrance to the municipal parking lot which might be ideal but money would be needed for park benches.

Also other parking space would be required for five cars which used the area.

Alderman Knox David concurred in the need for further interest and suggested development of the river bank was inviting.

"It's time we did something with the riverside beside parking cars," he said.

Alderman Donald Sonier noted that $200 had been left over from a grant provided by the city for a recreation film the record - breaking interest held in Belleville and suggested this could be used for an off-street youth area.

Council went along with the idea but Mayor J. R. Rose was not too hopeful of the success of the proposed riverside park area.

"Don't be disappointed if it doesn't get results," he said. "It's too far from where the action is."

BGH Stage II Is Approved

The chairman of the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital, the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sullivan, today announced that the Ontario Hospital Services Commission has approved the working drawings and specifications of the Stage II project so that it may now proceed to the tender stage.

Stage II involves the construction of a new laundry, medical stores and administration block and the demolition of the south and east wings of the hospital.

Alderman Queries Board's Salaries

Alderman Arthur Keegan wants the Hastings County Board of Education to explain and justify the high industrialtrution costs of the county board.

In a notice of motion presented to city council yesterday, Alderman Keegan asked that board members attend a meeting of council and explain the high costs and justify high administration salaries.

The motion will be before council at the next meeting.

In another notice of motion to council, Alderman Robin Jeffrey asks that the Ontario Water Resources Commission be requested to beautify and improve the new expansion plant addition in Foster Ward.

He suggested that flowering shrubs, trees and foundations be used to help beautify the area.

Council passed a motion from Alderman Keegan providing two weeks are asking the Ontario Water Resources Commission for information concerning a chemical analysis with respect to the Moira River south of Belleville, Deloro Smelting and Refining Company plant at Deloro.

The aldermen wants information on the latest count in the river and also in Moira and Shoco Lakes, including an analysis of water in the river at the CFR bridge in Belleville.

Alderman Knox David agreed that all information possible should be received, but said the OWRC and the Deloro company were well aware of conditions and were doing everything possible to correct the situation.

Mayor Scott admitted the arsenic content in the Moira south of Belleville is a problem. The OWRC was continually taking tests, he said.

PE School Board Ends Bates Case

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County board of education chairman, Edward Rollins, said last night complaints by Mrs. Bates, a 15-year-old Queen Elizabeth school pupil, alleging mistreatment by his teacher have been investigated and the board has taken an official stand of "no further comment."

Mr. Rutter noted that trustees first became aware of the incident when Mrs. Bates phoned Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bates had complained the Picton police department to investigate the alleged mistreatment of their son. He added that Mr. and Mrs. Bates were invited to meet with a committee of the board to file a formal complaint which they did. During a meeting between the family, board representatives and police, details of the boy's alleged beatings were obtained. An investigation was then conducted by trustees independent of police inquiries.

Mr. Rutter told fellow board members during the county board's regular monthly meeting last night that appropriate steps to conclude the matter were taken. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bates and the members of the Queen Elizabeth teaching staff named in the complaint were advised that the board was not in a position to release its findings, due to the necessity of avoiding implication in any future legal proceedings that might arise. Mrs. Bates after by the teachers or Mr. and Mrs. Bates. The chairman added that the board of trustees has investigated the complaint and that any action logically resulting has been taken.

Retiring Teachers To Be Honored

PICTON (Staff) — A group of 13 retiring elementary and secondary school teachers on staff in Prince Edward county will be honored Thursday evening at a dinner Edward Collegiate Institute.

Members of the board of education, teachers in county schools, and student representatives will attend a presentation night, recognizing retiring faculty members. A luncheon will follow the meeting.

L.A. Kells Retiring

A senior official of Hastings county board of education and well-known local educator has announced his retirement, effective June 30.

Lawrence A. Kells, BA, B. Paed., now superintendent of administrative services with the board and formerly superintendent of the Belleville Public School Board is leaving the profession he served for 41 years.

He announced his retirement last night at a regular board meeting, saying he considered his professional obligation to the board would continue until Aug. 31, "and my interest will go on without end."

The board accepted the resignation with regret, after hearing director of education Eric Runacres remark that Mr. Kells has "the vitality, experience and perception that cannot be replaced."

Mr. Kells was born in Listowel, Ont. and obtained his early education in Marysborough township and Beamsville schools. He attended teachers' college at North Bay, and taught for one year in Nipissing District following by three years at Rainy River.

Lawrence A. Kells

He entered the University of Western Ontario after preliminary work with the University of Toronto, graduating in arts in 1944 and securing a bachelor of pasdagogy degree in 1945.

In 1939 he assumed the principalship of King George School in Belleville and served with Belleville boards in supervising principal, business official, teacher and superintendent, until formation of the county board in 1969. He was instrumental in development of education summer schools for teachers.

His civic activities include acting as chairman and treasurer of the library board, member of the centennial committee, president and lieutenant-governor of the Kiwanis Club.

He was awarded the Centennial Medal in 1967 and was the first recipient of the Sir Mackenzie Bowell award for service to education.

Cleanup Approved

Belleville's century-old city hall is going to get a face lifting.

Some years ago the city hall tower was sandblasted to brighten up the smoke and weather darkened brick, but lack of funds since then has ruled out completion of the project.

This year, however, council decided it was time to complete the job and yesterday awarded a contract to E. S. Mimvos Company Ltd. of London for the work on the remainder of the city hall brick and stone.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said the cleaning would be a washing operation, not sand blasting as before.

Also, council approved a contract for $256,800 to Lightfoot Construction Ltd. for the reconstruction of Dundas Street West from the river to the top of "Devil's Elbow Hill".

City Engineer Wilbur Purnell said the contract carries a completion date of 120 working days from the commencement of work.

Sidney, Frankford Councils See Proposed Expansion Plan

Plan Future Development

Sidney Township Reeve Jack Bush discusses plans for the joint development of the township and the town of Frankford with deputy-reeve Gordon F. Wilman, and Frankford councilman Mervin Dafoe. The proposed plans were presented at a joint meeting held last night at Sidney Township council.

At a joint meeting last night of Sidney Township council and the council from the town of Frankford, proposed plans for a joint township and urban expansion program were outlined by representatives of the consulting professional engineer firm of Marshall, Macklin Monaghan Limited of Don Mills.

The proposed plan, upon final approval, will provide a basis for preparing official zoning bylaws, which will then, in turn, go before a public hearing before completion.

Not being a designated municipality Sidney Township must rely on the plan for bylaws.

The program is not restricted to residential expansion, but also includes commercial and industrial expansion of the future.

What we're doing ties in with the Quinte Planning Area," explained Sidney Township Reeve Jack Bush.

The joint plan was proposed last fall and was undertaken in January and February at an estimated cost of $6,000, with 60 per cent of the cost to be shared by Sidney Township and 40 per cent by the town of Frankford.

In the past, the town was a part of the township but obtained municipality status.

The joint survey benefits both participants both by study and planning. With the survey involving both the town and the township, plans for expansion of both are better regulated.

The 28-page plan and maps outlining the proposed designation areas were presented for the first time last night by Michael Welch and Dan Coote of Marshall, Macklin and Monaghan, and will be studied in depth by both councils before the next meeting to be held on June 29. This will give the members time to completely examine the plan and raise queries.

Indian Representative For Education Board

Hastings county board of education will soon have a seventeenth trustee a representative of the Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte Band from Tyendinaga Reserve.

Trustees last night unanimously approved the appointment of an Indian to represent the 150 Indian students now attending Hastings county schools.

The appointee will have "all the powers and duties of a member of the board as though he were eligible and duly elected as a member of the board".

But before she voted in favor of the motion, trustee Mrs. Marion Graham sought assurance that the Indians of the band would have control over the person selected for the position.

Under legislation permitting the appointment of Indian trustees, the person is appointed by the board upon the recommendation of the band council but Mrs. Graham wondered if, in effect, the recommendation would be influenced by the Indian agent.

This morning, M.W. McCracken, superintendent of the Tyendinaga Indian Agency, said the appointee would be recommended by Chief Earl Hill and his council.

The request for Indian representation came in a letter from Mr. McCracken to the board, noting that the band council on May 6 had resolved to ask for appointment of a trustee.

"They believe it would be a positive step for improved communication, co-operation, and understanding between the band and your school board," wrote Mr. McCracken.

Although the School Administration Act has since 1967 permitted such an appointment to boards with Indian children in their schools, the Tyendinaga band had never previously made the request.

Trustee Macdonald Smith was concerned with the timing of the appointment, since the Indian trustee's term of office will coincide with that of elected representatives.

"If we don't appoint the Indian trustee at the last meeting in December before the election, "there will be no Indian representation at the inaugural meeting in January," he remarked.

Appointment of a trustee from the Tyendinaga Reserve will tie up the tag ends of tradition in the Bay of Quinte district.

The first school in the county operated on the reserve for Indian children between 1792 and 1802. It was closed because of lack of pupils.

Now, 75 Tyendinaga pupils attend grades 7 and 8 in Belleville schools and an equal number are enrolled in secondary schools.

Rashotte Moved, Still Critical

TWEED (Special) — Clare Rashotte, 37-year-old Belleville man who was seriously burned early Sunday morning, saving his family from their burning cottage north of Tweed, has been moved to Kingston General Hospital where his condition is reported as still critical.

Mr. Rashotte was burned over 80 per cent of his body in saving his wife Lorna, and three children from the fire.

His eldest daughter Janet, 14, was also seriously burned, when she returned to the cottage to rouse a friend. Robin Barrage who was visiting for the weekend. Mrs. Rashotte was burned about her arms while Miss Barrage suffered burns to her arms, face and hands.

Building Permits Show Big Rise

Belleville's building list totalled almost four and a half million dollars during the month of May.

The total value of 40 permits issued at city hall during the month was $4,461,650 as compared with $633,743 for the same period last year.

Topping the May building list this year was the permit for the new Four Seasons Motel on the city's waterfront with a value of $1,650,000.

Next in line was the new sports hall building at the Ontario School for the Deaf at $1,200,000 and the addition to the Bell Telephone exchange on Church Street at $427,000.

Residential construction during the month saw issuance of a permit for $200,000 for the new senior citizens' apartment complex on West Bridge Street. Total residential construction for the month was $861,000 as compared with $383,500 for May last year.

Timmy and the Professor

Children Adopt Injured Pigeon

Professor Fidge is back in the grade 3 and 4 classroom at Queen Mary School, dispensing his unique brand of education.

But his young owners are a living lesson themselves — in thoughtfulness.

Professor Fidge first entered the classroom in the hands of grade 3 pupil Timmy Zelasko, after Timmy found him flapping around in his backyard.

The pigeon had an injured wing — veterevinarians later deduced that he had been shot — and an infection had set in.

Teacher Miss S. J. Warr called in a veterinarian for consultation and the children learned that the bird's wing would have to be amputated at a cost of $8.

The story might have ended there with Professor Fidge's humane disposal except for the tender hearts of the children. They determined to save the bird, raising the money themselves for the medical bills.

The pigeon was hospitalized and the pupils organized a candy sale for his expenses.

A month later, the pigeon returned to the classroom, where he will remain as a school mascot. Plump and healthy, although minus one wing, he is becoming acquainted with the class and its other pets — a baby racoon, a muskrat, a mouse and several tadpoles.

But with their $8 investment, the pupils are earning dividends in understanding and enjoyment of their mascot — and the admiration of their teachers, who believe their fund-raising drive's objective is unique for district schools.

Tweed C of C To Meet Tomorrow

TWEED (Special) — Members of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce will hold a dinner meeting for all members, prospective members and persons interested in the development of Tweed, along with the Highlands of Hastings and the Bay of Quinte Tourist Associations, at the Hotel Tweedsmuir, Wednesday, June 17.

This open meeting was originally planned for June 11 but the date was later changed to avoid conflict with other events.

Tickets are now on sale at the Crest Hardware and The Tweed News.

Tweed is undergoing considerable change at this time, C of C president Keith Cotton states. He feels it is imperative that all businessmen of the district should get together to talk over future plans, not only for Tweed, but for the surrounding communities.

Next Tuesday, the membership committee will begin a campaign to sign up members for 1970-71. Mr. Cotton expressed the hope that their efforts would meet with unparalleled success.

Rotarians Hear Talk on North

Trapping with the Indians, sharing their way of life, showing the youngsters their first film — of hockey night in Canada — these and other anecdotes of his hunting experiences, Bill Bedell of the Tweed forest district shared with Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

Formerly Conservation and Fur Management Officer for the North Shore (Lake Superior northward,) Mr. Bedell said he enjoyed his association with the Indians, especially those who had been unspoiled by civilization. The youngsters, he said, formerly heard the hockey programs by radio and though not fully understanding what was going on they found the roar of the crowd exciting. After they saw the film Mr. Bedell arranged for equipment to be sent up north, an initiative followed up by his successor.

Trapping and furs was the main theme of Mr. Bedell's talk and he brought with him beaver, muskrat, otter, bobcat, lynx, fox, wolf and other furs. Indian children, he said, trapped smaller animals in return for candy.

Mr. Bedell, now Game Management Officer for the Tweed area, acknowledged that the wolf was a controversial animal that preyed on deer and other beasts, but he also termed it "very sociable" in that it looked after its young and offspring abandoned by others.

City Garbage To Be Dumped In Sidney

Belleville's sanitary land fill garbage disposal area on the Bay of Quinte east of the Bay Bridge Road will be phased out within the next month and garbage from the city will be disposed of at a Sidney township site.

Yesterday city council authorized the signing of a four year agreement with Commercial Refuse Services for the disposal of city garbage at a 150 - acre site on Alker Road about five and a half miles west of the city.

The city will pay the company $24,900 per year, this amount to be revised annually to account for changes in the city's population.

"At the end of the four-year contract period Commercial Refuse Services will convey an 18 1-3 acre section of the dump site back to the city.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said that Quinte Sanitation Services Ltd. which has the present garbage collection contract would truck the garbage to the Sidney township site. He estimated the extra cost for trucking could cost the city between $15,000 and $20,000 extra per year.

Charges for dumping at the new site by other than city vehicles will range from 50 cents for cars with trailers, up to $8 for tandem trucks.

Alderman E. A. Orr wondered whether the charge for private dumping might discourage people from using the dump and result in litter being dumped, indiscriminately.

But Mayor J. R. Scott said people have had their fill of littering and if the dump wasn't used bylaws would be passed to force residents to clean up,

The mayor said new Ontario Water Resources Commission regulations would no longer permit garbage disposal areas near the bay.

Disposal at the new site will be by the trench and fill method. Trenches six to ten feet deep will be excavated and filled with garbage and then backfilled.

Alderman Donald Scatter was the only councillor objecting to the garbage disposal agreement.

He said he preferred a joint arrangement with neighboring municipalities for a municipally operated dump at a cost possibly less than that to be paid by the city to the private contractor.

Mayor Scott, however, said utilization of the present dump on the bay front was running on a collision course and that action had to be taken.

There was no reason why other municipalities could not make agreements to use the Sidney site, he said.

"We had to do something," he said.

Today City Engineer Purcell said the present garbage site would be completely filled by the end of June or early in July.

Fire Department Unrest Quelled

At a meeting of the Sidney Township Fire Commission on June 15, an agreement was reached that the resignations from the fire department, which took place a week ago, would not be accepted.

The problems were fully explained to the persons concerned with the idea being to hold the entire department of 42 men together and keep the status of a fire department.

The men agreed to comply with an earlier agreement to appoint a new captain at an early date.

Jack Bush, Reeve of Sidney Township explained last night, "we (the council) are doing everything in our power to keep the fire department together for the good of the families in the township.

The Speed Thing

Those sporty little European sports cars — where are they these days? Doubtless there are still plenty around, but it does seem as if the young bloods who go in for style, appearance, and power, have long since been hooked on the throaty lure — exhaust jobs being turned out by the industry here.

The small but speedy imports still make the scene — they are favorites with young women drivers — but as we have noted, the North American products seem to have as much more appeal for the younger set. No matter that it is simply the way the vehicle is styled that attracts the younger set, plus the fancy stripes, names and colors in which they come these days — factors which really are quite irrelevant but nevertheless get subtle play by the advertisers.

And of course there is all that power beneath the hood, which brings us to a point we made recently and which was reiterated by Crown Attorney John Pringle — the absurdity of building cars capable of more than 100 miles per hour when the top permissible speed on our highways is 70 mh.

Mr. Pringle was speaking at an inquest on a youth killed during a night-time drag race. Although neither car was involved in the fatality (the youth, who was starter for the race, was struck by a third vehicle) the jury, concerned about the excessive power of the vehicles, recommended legislation to control the licensing of drivers up to 21 years old using high performance autos on public highways.

They had heard Mr. Pringle say: "To turn these instruments loose on a highway is a little bit ridiculous."

But why stop at drivers aged 21 or less. A recent Toronto seminar on the medical aspects of safe driving heard from Dr. Donald Huelke of the University of Michigan that "mechanized death has reached epidemic proportions." Traffic, he said, was the leading cause of death for people aged one to 37.

Considering that the vehicles used in the drag race contained only standard, unfumed, motors, which nevertheless were of 375 and 425 - horsepower respectively, we support the idea that either horsepower or drivers, or both, must come under stricter control. If not, the risk of fatalities will be increased still further, with highways like 401 becoming more and more like a race track and less and less like a safe route for the travelling public.

Patronage Achieves Little

It Is A Persistent Opposition Which Gets Results

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — To hear the Government tell it — especially during a national election campaign and usually is hyperbolic — the taxpayers are wasting their time if they elect a representative of any of the Opposition parties to Parliament.

The Government Party is that the administration looks after its own.

Its members in the Commons — at this point in political time, Liberals — have, literally, the best seats in the House, beside and behind the Cabinet Ministers, those dispensers of Government goodies.

It is only human — and political — nature that the Government looks more favorably upon requests for favors by its own members than by those of the Opposition.

Which means, the way the Government would have you believe it, that if your MP is a Liberal you and your constituency are in a better way to get a better shake from the Ottawa wheeler-dealers than if, like some dun-dun, you sent a Conservative, a New Democrat, a Creditiste, or an independent to Parliament Hill.

Well, that is what the Government says, but do not believe a word of it.

For more often than not, the MP who can best deliver the goods is an Opposition member.

This is so because he can be maddeningly persistent, grinding away at the reluctant Government day after day, month after year out — as New Democrat Stanley Knowles did, through six consecutive years, on increased benefits for federal Civil Service and Armed Forces pensioners.

He is applying the same pressure for the old age pensioners — questions in the Commons, resolutions, motions, moves to adjourn the House for emergency debates . . . and sooner or later he will reach the conscience of the Government, spending its writing of the White Paper on welfare.

But Stanley Knowles is only one of many Opposition members who know how to twist the Government's arm.

A Liberal MP, a Government supporter, can not afford to do it. If he tries, he runs the very real peril of becoming a nuisance. Of getting in the Government's hair. Of inviting painful reprisals from irritated cabinet ministers.

But the Opposition MP can nag and beg, plead and browbeat, cave and ridicule, and become such a serious centre of annoyance that the Government sometimes caves in and gives him what he wants just for the pleasurable relief of shutting him up.

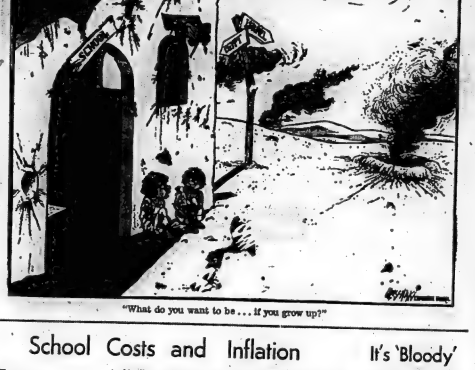
Cape Breton Conservative MP Robert Muir is one of those with the talent of a grindstone for wearing down Government resistance.

The big red-head from Sydney Mines is almost always amiably self-spoken reason itself — but even he can run out of patience.

For five unremitting years, prodding, pry-ing, pushing, he has been pummelling the federal Government and its Transport Department to set up a Cape Breton - based Search - and - Rescue Service vessel for the Cabot Strait. And for five years nothing happened, except that Bob Muir kept pounding away.

It says something for the Liberal mind of the bureaucracy, that it took a combination of two things to get Robert Muir what he knew fishermen and other mariners in the stormy straits had to have.

One was the tragedy of the loss of life which finally the Government Party Patrick Morrissey was swamped and sunk by a rogue sea when trying to rescue men aboard the foundering fishing trawler Enterprise.



The other was the happy circumstance of having a Transport Minister like Newfie's Donald Jamieson in charge of the departmental decision - making, who understood the urgency of the case Robert Muir had been pleading for so many years. Now like right was the Cape Breton's cause, and had enough concern and clout in the Cabinet to do something about it.

Bob Muir knew he had Don Jamieson on his side. Another born Maritimer that he is, he kept pushing him, day after day, for a "what about-it-decision." Quite remarkable, too, for a member of the Cabinet, he fired almost any Cabinet — except that perhaps for Don Jamieson — it was only characteristic — the Liberal Government's decision that the Tory Cape Breton fish had to be forever picking up on it and finally solved the problem.

Said Don Jamieson, with a tip of his Newfoundland Scot' cocker to the Conservative from across the Cabot Strait:

"It was my Honorable friend who suggested we should look at a vessel that is now available in Halifax (the decommissioned $1,500,000 former RCMP patrol-ler 'Sleuth,' carrying a captain and a crew of 30). That is being done. We have come to the view that we should station some kind of Search-and-Rescue vessel in the Sydney area.

A good sailor, hard hitting, never-give-up-the-ship Opposition MP like Cape Breton's Bob Muir, and a same-coasting, sympathetic and understanding Transport Minister like Don Jamieson are what makes Parliament work as well as it does.

"What do you want to be . . . if you grow up?"

Embattled Monarch

If uneasy lies the head that wears the crown, King Hussein of Jordan is a classic example. At odds with guerrilla factions within his own country, as well as with the Israelis, Hussein sits on a real powderkeg. Just recently he escaped an assassination attempt, which recalls the murder of his cousin, King Faisal of Iraq, by Arab nationalists back in 1958.

Almost startled by contrast is an item in a recent bulletin from the New Zealand Embassy in Washington. It does indicate however, that even monarchs living in such a turbulent atmosphere must have their recreation; indeed they have more need of it, away-from-it-all activity than most of us. The embassy report said that amateur radio operators, at Opotiki, Province of Tauranga, N.Z., spoke to King Hussein of Jordan. Maybe it was the only active "ham" in his country, the king is in constant touch with others around the world.

It is the trend of course these days for people to be closer to their leaders. This is the way it is in Canada, with Prime Minister Trudeau, and recently President Nixon personally telephoned the hospital where the injured pilot of a hijacked aircraft was under treatment. The president had served with the pilot in the Pacific theatre during the last war. As for King Hussein we suspect he may have expressed envy of Mr. Wightman's quiet and peaceful homeland. It would be a good spot in which to seek asylum if such a contingency ever arises.

Waning Fad

Remember the transistor radio craze. You still see the odd one cradled in some young person's arms downtown or at the picnic spot, but not many. We were reminded of this at the beach on Sunday as a young couple strolled along, the girl carrying a radio with some nondescript piece of music blaring forth from its tubes. The sound was startling if only because this form of mobile entertainment seems less prevalent nowadays. Other toys have intruded in recent years . . . and other distractions.

School Costs and Inflation

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Mr. Paul Edwin Fleming's letter regarding recent increases granted to senior administrative staff of the Hastings County Board reflects the views of many taxpayers.

I share his misgivings about the whole business. Firstly these administrators are more than generously paid. Salaries ranging from $18,000 to $29,000 should allow recipients to put the family home on the table, with some left over for jam. It can hardly be suggested anyone in this salary bracket is living near the poverty line, so was there really any necessity for these increases?

Secondly, did these people approach the Board for an increase, or did the members of the board, in their wisdom, feel an increase was in keeping with the current psychology that awards bigger and better pay, boats to those already receiving more than enough?

With a new school board to be elected in the fall, the public should be advised of the names of the members that voted in favor of this totally unnecessary increase, so they may be reminded when it comes time to mark their ballot paper.

Small wonder that labor is disinterested in wage restraint, when almost daily, elected bodies show such complete indifference toward public opinion. It is surprising that politicians cannot understand public resentment when such acts become common knowledge.

The implementation of the new school boards was carried out with a suddenness that lacked ill for favorable public reception. The almost indecent haste that was evident from the beginning left much to be desired. Regional government should have been introduced, and become a practical working system before the introduction of regional school boards. It now begins to look as if the cart was put before the horse, as has it been the case so often with the present provincial government.

With all the improvements and experiments being carried out in our schools under this new system, can we honestly say our children are demonstrating any noticeable educational advancement, they would not have shown under the old? Only the 'future will show — but if Hastings County Education Board continues to spend money the way they have been doing, any benefits are likely to be forgotten in the struggle to find the wherewithal to pay for it.

Either we are battling the evils of inflation, or we are being duped by all levels of government. If, as we are told, inflation is our prime target, then we must all play our part in the fight, not just those in the lower pay echelons.

In this particular case, Hastings County Board of Education should be called upon to justify their action. We are all fed up with being told to hold the line, while those in authority take more and more, from the less affluent, and hand over utterly uncalled for bonuses to those whose task is unlikely to ever be cause for concern. Bread still costs a man earning $3,000 the same as one earning $20,000.

Thank goodness we have individuals like Mr. Fleming, who have the plain old - fashioned guts to stand up and be counted, by saying "No".

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY

A Man's World
Compassion In Ottawa!

Montreal Gazette

In Ottawa there is such a thing as the right sex to be, and it is male — especially if you are enduring that peculiarly male ordeal of having a child. The compassionate regulations of the federal public service, written no doubt by men who have suffered through the long wait outside hospital maternity wards, allow a male civil servant to have a day off with pay when he becomes a father.

What about a female civil servant who is to become a mother? She's not nearly as deserving of special consideration.

C. M. Drury, the no-nonsense president of the Treasury Board, told the Commons there is no provision for a woman employee to have time off with pay for childbirth and furthermore, no such grant of leave is under consideration.

This is a real man's government, a government that believes that women are only women but a day off is a day when a man doesn't have to go to work.

It's 'Bloody' But Censors Give the OK

Richard Needham in
The Globe and Mail

It's with great joy I learn that the Australian movie censors have banned Alan King's A Married Couple on the ground of its "strong language". All through my life, the Australians themselves have been notorious for their lavish use of strong language, like the Australian didn't understand the one - man - one - vote principle of democracy until it was explained to him as "one bloody man, one bloody vote". We've the same magnificent hypocrisy in Canada, of course; the kind of kids who appear in that picture Woodstock cannot see it because it uses the kind of language they themselves use. Praise the Lord!

Pakistan Annexes A Tiny Monarchy

Regina Leader — Post

The Wali of Swat sound like something out of Alice in Wonderland.

Actually he is a monarch in a very difficult situation — out of a job and running the risk of being exiled from his country.

Monarchies have gone that way but not the Wali. They have had the autocratic power — the old-fashioned name — of the Wali of Swat.

It appears that the Swat royal family lost 49 power when a military take - over six months ago made the monarchy redundant.

The 51 - year - old Wali and his 41 - year - old heir apparent are now going to run for seats in Pakistan's constituent assembly, seeking to represent the 4,000 square miles of tourist paradise and the 500,000 Swatis. Swat has now become part of Pakistan. It was formerly an independent state, ruled autocratically by the Wali, and governed by a mountain valley.

Whether the Wali of Swat will reach the assembly is a matter for the voters to decide. What is certain is that never again will he ride absolutely according to mountain custom and Islamic law.

Even the outermost parts of the earth are shedding their mantles from the past.

A Matter Of Faith

Letter to The Globe and Mail

Franz Maier's photograph (Silly 29) of a mother duck escorting her young brood across Lake Shore Blvd. W. under the safety supervision of Constable Ed Cypta, should certainly qualify as the Picture of the Year in so far as I am concerned.

Her disregard of man - made laws respecting traffic signals, coupled with her supreme confidence in danger from fast-travelling vehicles, is clearly expressive of the implicit faith this creature of nature has in the Creator — an example that might well be emulated by more of the human race in this strife-torn world.

Hasty Pees to Hire 75 to 100 Trainees

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, as well as other Canadian militia regiments, may have the solution to some of the student unemployment in Belleville and in Canada.

It was revealed recently that Canadian regiments will employ students in their summer training programs in an effort to lessen the student unemployment crisis.

In Belleville the Hasty Pees will hire from 75 to 100 students for seven weeks in the summer.

For the first time, the student employment centre will screen the applicants for the regiment before they are sent to the armories to be signed up.

The course is expected to run from July 13 until Aug. 30, with each recruit being paid $7 a day and $1 a day for food.

Some of the summer trainees will be from the regular Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment but there will be room for at least 75 new applicants.

"It's not a recruiting device. They're not expected to stay after the summer," Lt.-Col. F. R. Allan, commanding officer of the regiment, said this morning.

The training session will be divided into a four - week military training segment and a three - week community project segment.

From the military end of things, the new recruits will take no rifle training. Instead, border safety, first aid and heavy map and compass training will serve to make up a good deal of the course.

Basic survival techniques will also form a major portion of the course.

The final three weeks will find the recruits preoccupied with some form of community project such as anti-pollution work.

The regiment will confer with the civic authorities to decide just what project can be done.

Training Centre, Motel Ready by 1971

Construction is well underway at Bell's new training centre in Belleville and the school should be in service by January 1971.

The new centre will combine under one roof, Bell's engineering school and instructional data training centre, now in operation at two different locations in the city.

The centre will be housed in the $14-million Four Seasons motel on the Bay of Quinte. The complex includes 124 rooms, dining room, lounge and such recreational facilities as an outdoor heated pool.

Roger Harvey, staff engineer - training administrator, of Belleville, already has requests from other Bell groups such as commercial, statistics and finance for use of the new centre.

"The centre will be the only one of its kind on the continent with such a wide variety of expected users," said Mr. Harvey. "Even now the Belleville training schools serve students from Bell, governmental agencies and other telephone companies in Canada and United States. We are confident the centre will produce an atmosphere where everyone can train together and work together."

Not only will there be a new building, but courses will be rewritten and restructured to utilize the up-to-date equipment.

A new training program for engineering associates is being prepared in conjunction with the Loyalist College of Applied Arts and Technology. The college will assist the training centre with such subjects as electronics, mathematics and inter - personal communications.

Students will also find an array of self - instructional material available in the library or audio-visual area to browse through at their leisure.

Instructors will find a change at the new school. Backed up by support services, the instructors will be able to devote all their time to teaching and forget about setting up classrooms, training aids and living accommodations.

One of the highlights of the school is a dazzling array of electronic communications equipment. Closed circuit TV will be installed throughout the school, and a studio will be available for some television production work.

The design also provides for future Information Retrival Television (IRTV) to the students' bedrooms and computer assisted instruction. And classrooms will be outfitted with rear - screen projection facilities.

In the future, closed circuit TV will link Belleville to other major Bell centres in Ontario and Quebec. This system could be used for remote teaching and feature guest speakers.

Meeting on Kente School Still Not Confirmed

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County board of education trustees have received no reply from the Committee for Quality Education with Fair Taxation, an Ameliasburg ratepayers' group, concerning a meeting tentatively scheduled for June 25.

The request for this meeting to discuss proposed plans for the $2-million Kente school project in Ameliasburg was made by the committee several weeks ago.

Recently trustees agreed to meet with committee members at the board offices in Bloomfield. The committee earlier had announced preparation of a list of 10 questions pertaining to construction of the proposed new school for presentation to board members.

Trustees asked for a copy of the committee's agenda including the 10 questions in advance to prepare for the meeting "in order that it might run smoothly and answer all questions to the satisfaction of all".

It was revealed during a board of education meeting last night that no reply to this request has been received to date, nor has June 25 meeting date been confirmed.

Trustees decided to correspond with committee members again regarding the suggested meeting.

Adoption of Metis Child Represents Challenge to Parents

SASKATOON (CP) — Louise is a dark-eyed, bright 5½-year-old who, although her mind can't comprehend it yet, is engaged in a desperate battle which will shape her future.

The fight is for security, something she hasn't found in three different homes and something which her fourth parents hope to give her.

Louise's fight is different from that of most adopted children because her new family is white and she is Metis—part Indian and part white.

She represents a challenge not only to her new parents, but to a branch of the Saskatchewan department of welfare called AIM—Adopt Indian-Metis centre.

AIM was established three years ago as a pilot project in the Regina area when a serious backlog of Indian and Metis children under provincial care developed.

During 1966-67, the fiscal year before the project started, only 38 Indian and Metis children were adopted in Saskatchewan.

From April 1, 1967, to Dec. 31, 1968, a total of 140 were placed in permanent homes. Sixty of these were placed by AIM's Regina office and by Saskatoon branch and the rest by the welfare department within hamlets, towns and Metis adoptions outside the two districts.

One of the questions Louise's prospective parents had to answer before going to AIM was: Aren't there enough problems in adoption without taking a child of another race?

"To most people who come here, race makes no difference," said Allan Vickers, AIM supervisor for the Saskatoon office. "But they are aware that it does to some people."

Louise's new parents, who have two boys aged 13 and 10, and a girl 6, were drawn in AIM by its publicity campaign and a long-standing interest in the Indian people.

"I'm adopted myself and have wanted children both ways," says Louise's new mother, who wished to remain anonymous. "I'm not afraid of a child. "We felt that if we wanted another child, why produce one when there are so many already available?"

She and her husband wanted another girl and after months of thought went to AIM because they felt they could help the plight of Indian and Metis children by adopting one.

"At first I thought that when I took her shopping with me I would be apprehensive, but I'm as proud as punch taking her and I expect everyone is like her.

"We haven't met any discrimination yet . . . but perhaps it's discrimination of a form when people say 'Aren't you the good Samaritan.'"

Louise was abandoned at two years of age and lived in two foster homes. When taken into the care of the province she spoke only Cree.

Mrs. Vickers said most people who go to AIM already have families, either natural or adopted or a mixture.

Few children under couples adopted Indian or Metis children. She said the reason probably is that those who already have had the satisfaction of having a family are willing to give all they can to some child who otherwise may never have a permanent home.

"The history of wards is one of moving from one little permanence in their lives."

A couple applying at AIM attend two interviews during which a social worker tries to determine attitudes on racial and illegitimacy and gives them an insight into some of the problems they could face in raising a child with dark skin.

There is a six-month probationary period during which the family and the child can adjust. At the end of that time the child may be returned—though not many are—or the child fights in the courts to be transferred to the new parents.

Before AIM was established the number of Indian and Metis children awaiting adoption had been increasing at about 100 a year.

In October, 1967, there were 335 Indian and Metis children under provincial care and by last month 386.

Mrs. Vickers says that AIM is at least keeping ahead of the increase and that the program has boosted the number of adoptions of all types in Saskatchewan.

The toughest task now is to find parents for older children and children in family groups.

"With older children it's not like a birth. It's like a marriage, an Oriental marriage made under contract. It's not instant love."

In Louise's case, she has been accepted by her brothers and sister who were prepared for her arrival. She also has been accepted by the neighborhood kids.

The children can see her skin is darker than theirs, but don't seem to realize, or care, that she is of another race.

Her new parents are confident that given the love and security that her natural children have received, Louise will become a stable adult, proud of her race and proud of the white family which gave her the happiness and security she couldn't have obtained in a series of foster homes.

Various Clubs Conclude Season's Activities

BELLEVILLE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Guest speaker at the June meeting of the Belleville Horticultural Society held at Tabernacle United Church, June 3 was Bob Patterson, past president of the society and district director of the provincial society.

Chairman Glenn Gardiner commented on the Rose Festival and Violet Show to be held at Centennial Secondary School June 26 and 27. A judging school will be held in conjunction with the show for anyone interested in judging of flower shows. Dr. R. Potter will officially open the show.

The speaker's topic was "The Rose Queen of the Garden." He started off by showing a slide of a rose bush as it is received from the nursery and continued on with advice on how to plant and trim the bush. All parts and many were examples of various kinds of roses best suited to garden and show. Some roses, while beautiful in the garden, are not good show roses.

Phil Dodds, Picton vice-president of the Ontario Horticultural Society thanked the speaker. He also thanked Mrs. Jackie Watson for her work with the Junior Horticultural Society.

President Larry Johnson announced Mrs. Joan Berkinshaw winner of the contest for getting the most new members.

There will not be any meetings July and August. Starting September 8, meetings will be held the second Tuesday of each month.

ALPHA LAMBDA CHAPTER

Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi closed for the summer June 10 with Mrs. Gordon Vaughan as hostess.

Discussions during the business meeting of the evening included the Black and Gold Ball scheduled for October; further additions to the history and ways and means projects for the fall.

Mrs. Cheryl Entwistle and Miss Lorraine Nicholls reported on the pen-pal project, a chapter as they are leaving the city for the summer. Silver spoons were to be presented to Mrs. G. Hill, Mrs. R. Burrows, Mrs. A. Shell and Miss N. Smith on their 25th exemplier chapter Xi Alpha Mu to September. Best wishes were expressed to all these girls by chapter president Mrs. L. Roebuck.

The cultural theme for the evening "Absolute Music" was presented by Mrs. A. Snell with the use of tape recorder and stereo. Selections were played by Anita Baroza. Next concert pianist who will perform in Belleville in October.

SENIOR CITIZENS

TWEED — The Senior Citizens of Madoc and community held a busy meeting recently. The attendance is growing, 50 or more were present.

Some played cards while others visited the Madoc Manor. Miss Adams conducted a sing-song and treated the inmates to candy.

An election of officers was held and the executive is as follows: president, Mrs. F. Wandsworth; vice-president, Mrs. M. Fox; secretary, Miss Raney; treasurer, Mr. Forrest and food convener,s Mrs. Blakely.

Flying Career Record Attained

EDMONTON (CP) — For Lucille aber is the ultimate weight and horsepower—of plane.

"I was aiming for 20,000 feet," said the 36-year-old pilot, who is an instructor at the Edmonton Flying Club. "I'm convinced now that this is impossible for this kind of plane unless you hit peculiar conditions like an upward draught."

Despite the record, set in March, Miss Haley is not going to file it with the Royal Canadian Flying Club Association in Ottawa. Such a process costs more than $200, and since she's aiming to break it again within a year, she has decided against the expense.

"Present funds are depleted."

Although her previous records were set in winter, she is going to try again this summer when conditions might be good for up-draughts.

When she came down from her record flight, she had ice in her hair and was shivering despite her thick thermal clothing. As warm air escaped from her oxygen mask it turned to frost as it condensed, then froze. The thermometer in the cockpit read 35 below at the top of the flight.

"It was at 10,000 feet after 30 minutes. I waited five minutes for clearance, then got up another 7,000 feet in about 25 minutes.

"That's when you start to work. The next 1,700 feet took me 55 minutes."

It was difficult to climb in thin air. She made her height by climbing in an upward spiral over about a five-mile radius.

"You level out, gain speed, and then go into a climb. You are disappointed if you don't reach the 20,000 mark."

District Women's Institutes

RYLSTONE WI

There was a very small attendance at the June meeting of Rylstone WI held June 11. Only eight women were present.

The usual opening exercises were handled by Mrs. Alexander.

Minutes of the annual meeting were read by Mrs. Jack Watson acting secretary-treasurer since the death of Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn early in May. Mrs. Watson also gave the treasurer's report to March 31. As a new secretary-treasurer has not yet been chosen, Mrs. Ernest Harris was elected co-signer of cheques along with the president, Mrs. Alex Watson.

An invitation to attend the 65th anniversary of Wellman's Corners WI to be held in their hall June 17 was read and accepted.

A proposed bus trip to Guelph has been postponed until fall.

A meeting to plan programs for 1970-71 will be held at the home of Mrs. Ernest Irwin June 18.

TWEED-CHAPMAN WI

TWEED — The 20th annual meeting of the Tweed-Chapman Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Isobel Martin, Sr. with 28 members and ten Chapman Chums 4-H Club girls present.

After business was discussed and dealt with, Mrs. Milton Elliott gave a report on the district meeting of the Women's Institute she had attended.

Each club girl showed some of the things she had made during different clubs she attended through the years.

Four girls got provincial honors for finishing 4-H clubs and were presented with gifts. They also had on display different items they made during this last club, which was "A Hobby I Enjoy" on which Charmaine Flieler gave a talk.

Club member Judy Johnston played on her guitar and everybody joined in the singing.

After the closing of the meeting, a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

QUEENSBORO WI

"A Way to Be Friendly to my Neighbor or a New Community" was the main topic by Mrs. Roy Rollins at the June meeting of the Queensboro branch of the Women's Institute held in the WI hall recently with Mrs. Arthur Bethoe acting as hostess.

During the business session it was decided to get someone to cut the grass and clean the yard of the WI hall.

A report was given of the district annual held in Eldorado by the members who attended.

Following the business session lunch was served and the meeting adjourned.

UNIONDALE WI

Recipe theme for the dessert tea held at the June meeting of Uniondale Women's Institute was the new ways to use dairy products. River Valley and Sidney South were the visiting institutes.

The program consisted of tap and modern dancing by Miss Tomalty of Sidney South Women's Institute. The dairy princess, Miss Gunning was introduced by Mrs. Douglas Harry. She gave an interesting address on highlights and responsibilities of a dairy princess.

Cheese was donated as door prizes as well as place mats and recipe folders.

Mrs. Dionne Maich, the regional nutritionist of the Milk Foundation of Canada also gave an instructive address and passed around pamphlets giving examples of her work.

Hostes for the July meeting of Uniondale Women's Institute will be Mrs. B. Gray. It will be held at Scott's Uniondale Hall.

Family Honors Couple Wed For 30 Years

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. (Doll) Pointer were pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening when friends and family piled up with them to mark the occasion of their 30th wedding anniversary.

The family including Mr. and Mrs. John (Gail) Lupersette and baby Michael, Kingston, Jim, Nancy and Karen at home had arranged the event for their parents, who along with a number of close friends were present.

During the evening's entertainment a number of gifts were presented to the honored guests.

EOCA Association Plans an Exhibition

TWEED — Members of the East Central Ontario Art Association plan to hold an outdoor exhibition and sale of paintings at the Schneider School of Fine Arts, Actinolite two miles north of Tweed, on Highway No. 37, Saturday, June 20 from 1 p.m. until dusk and Sunday, June 21 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. Everyone is welcome to see the works at each and bid for the pictures on display.

The Association was formed at a workshop on recreation held in Port Hope High School, in the fall of 1963. The membership of 27 at that time, it has grown to a membership of approximately 200, ranging from Belleville to Toronto, and as far north as Bancroft.

The East Central Ontario region is divided into five areas, north, south, west, east and central. The council is made up of two members from each area, with the addition of one member from Belleville and two from Peterborough.

The aim of the Association has been to awaken an awareness of visual arts in this area, by prompting and fostering the development of art, with emphasis upon good design and fine workmanship.

Additional information about the June 20 - 21 exhibition may be obtained from the secretary-treasurer, Rose M. Baker, 1163 Milburn Street, Peterborough.

"NO EASY ANSWERS" — Jeanne Warren, newly-appointed judge of provincial social welfare court, says there are "no easy answers to problems currently affecting family structures." Mrs. Warren, a mother of one, has been a force in Quebec social welfare since 1946 when she became the first woman admitted to the Quebec Bar.

Judgments Affect Child's Life

Judge Says Rendering Decisions To Children Very Important

MONTREAL (CP) — Jeanne Warren, newly appointed judge of Quebec's provincial social welfare court, says rendering a decision on a child is extremely important because it affects not only his life but the lives of everyone surrounding him.

"After all," said the petite blonde of 49, "such a judgment can affect a child's whole life, and a child is never an isolated unit, so his parents and family are affected as well.

"I realize these judgments must consider the points of view of child, parents and society."

Mrs. Warren said she has "great faith" in parents, although "there are no easy answers to problems currently affecting family structures and I am suspicious of those who say they do."

Her appointment became effective in April—"not an easy time to be appointed to the social welfare court, since all traditions and institutions are being challenged." But she feels "important changes in administration of justice will develop."

Her experience as a member of a Quebec commission on health convinced her "that while we are not backward in social welfare, there are holes in our legislation due to the fact that legislation has been voted piece by piece."

Mrs. Warren, mother of one, has been a force in Quebec social welfare since 1946 when she became the first woman to be admitted to the Quebec Bar.

After studying criminology and "a few courses in sociology" at the London School of Economics, she joined the Quebec civil service in 1948 to head a department of youth Protection Schools.

Her career was interrupted in 1953 when she met and married architect Walter Warren.

"I had to resign my position because I was getting married, and that was 17 years ago. You see many things have changed."

Marriage meant moving to Montreal, but Mrs. Warren says she could have continued her work "in the thank goodness."

She filled in time with volunteer work and lectured on welfare legislation before entering private practice. It was 1962 when she returned to public life as an election candidate for the Union Nationale. She was defeated.

"My father took me to political meetings and had many lawyers among his friends. I think I came to believe that the law was one entry into public life."

Mrs. Warren does not like being described as a feminist.

Even in my youth I never would have joined the Women's Liberation Movement. As far as I am concerned, women have their freedom but it is up to them to work hard to take advantage of it.

"I can't see myself marching in the streets. I consider that passe."

Mrs. Warren would prefer to be minister of a government department rather than a judge, she replied.

"It wasn't until last year that I developed enough courage to mention my age. I realized how stupid I was being and that attitude was part of the feminine folklore that I dislike.

"Now that I have told you I am 49, I will explain that I think that 48 is young—relatively, at least—for the bench, but is it that young for politics? Political life is so demanding.

"Perhaps if I had been 10 years younger I would have tried politics again as a means of achieving my goals in social welfare. I am not sure. But I do believe there is a great contribution to be made on the bench.

"On the bench, I will come face to face with reality."

Successful Living

Eternal Problem: Money and How to Spend It

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We are moving to a new job and since the pay is not very high, could you help us set up a budget?

My husband will be earning $270 monthly clear, and will have to pay for gasoline and fuel oil. We owe for a house trailer and payments are $80 monthly. There are only two of us and we have a foster daughter in Haiti whom we support for $10 a month. — Making Ends Meet.

Dear Making: Money is the eternal problem, yet no one can really dictate to another how to spend it.

There are certain principles and proportions, worked out on a chart. There are hints about shopping economically; there are budget books supplied by banks which can help you set things down and see where the money goes.

I am sending you all of these. Then it is up to you to keep track of the pennies, study your needs, devote several months to settling down to some sound financing.

Other would - be budget experts may have the same three items: shopping hints, budget book and chart, by writing in for them, enclosing 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

Dear Doris: Do you know if there is some floor that is never in calories? — Counting Them.

Dear Counting: Afraid not. Calorie is the name of the game when you are talking about flour. A home economist tells me that while there are slight variations in the calorie content of wheat flour, potato flour, rice flour and whole wheat flour, they are all carbohydrates and more inclined to put weight on than take it off.

When you diet to reduce, you cut down on carbohydrates, keep proteins high. Also keep up the vitamins and minerals (fresh fruit and vegetables). And keep your health.

* * *

Dear Doris: I was elected program chairman of our historical society and am to give a speech on the life of the Metis, and how we can help them.

I do have a few articles but would like to gather a few more notes. This is my first effort at public speaking. — Nervous.

Dear Nervous: It is a topic worth more study. If the Metis feel like a neglected minority, it seems they have good reason.

A search of the encyclopedias revealed only that there are about 18,000 Metis in Manitoba and that they are a mixture of white and Indian blood, many being descendants of the earlier French settlers.

There is a book on the fur trade which carries a page or two more, and a Canadian history book, ditto. I'm sending you the names of both. For more help, call up or write to the Indian and Metis Friendship Centre, 278 Donald Street, Winnipeg, or similar organization where you are.

Other Canadian governments is doing a good deal more, of recent years, to make these native sons of Canada feel like they belong. Probably your magazine articles go into this aimed as well as any other materials.

* * *

(Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope for her reply.)

Miniskirts Labelled 'Gruesome'

Conservative Hemline Preferred

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver fashion designer who described as "gruesome", the sight of miniskirted office girls and who—in 1967—predicted the early demise of the style, also has her reservations about the new midi look.

Barbara Routley said in an interview that she personally prefers a hemline just below the rounded part of the knee. "That length is most complimentary to most women and the best proportion-wise.

"But knee length is too safe and conservative for fashion."

Mrs. Routley feels that the mid-calf length often has the effect of making the wearer look "older and draggy."

"I can also be overwhelming, particularly by bright colors."

She described her major reaction to the sight of herself in a new, mid-calf-length spring outfit in yellow: "In a full-blow midi I look not like a daffodil but like a whole field of them."

But she is happy to see hemlines coming down. "Women went overboard on minis, which were not too kind to them."

Mrs. Routley says she has yet to talk to a man who wants to see longer skirts, but she thinks women will be happy with them, once they adjust.

"Fashion is change. People protest and say they would never wear such-and-such, but they do. Women like to look different."

Mrs. Routley said that buyers are afraid to buy anything short now, for fear they get stuck with it."

"When women go shopping for fall outfits they will find the mid-calf length everywhere and will gradually become accustomed to it.

"By Christmas it will be with us."

Mrs. Routley feels the transition will be gradual, with hemlines "creeping down."

"The braver ones will branch into longer lengths right away," she said, while others will begin by lengthening the clothes they now have until they slowly get used to the feeling and look of longer skirts.

Another form of transition she sees emerging as more popular is a midiskirt bottoming at the bottom.

It can be worn over a shorter skirt or slacks and left unbuttoned until women get used to the midi and wear it alone, buttoned to its full length.

The clothing company for which Mrs. Routley designs, and of which she is part owner, has brought out a new winter line of 100 pieces in which the hemline falls just below the knee.

Although they offer the same styles in mid-calf length, she said 90 per cent of buyers had ordered the regular length.

Fall colors in midi lengths are in deep, true tones, which Mrs. Routley feels are well suited to the longer lengths. "The effect of the extra length is not an overwhelming."

The step of the midi, she thinks, will depend on designers.

If they can avoid the "draggy" effect with its tendency to age the wearer, and create styles in which the extra length is not an encumbrance to activity, it will last.

If not, the only place for hemlines to go is back to the knee—she hopes.

A Good Recipe for Baked Lima Beans

By MARY MOORE

Because I like the soft texture of cooked dried lima beans I hunted for a recipe for Baked Lima Beans but could not find one so I made one up and guess liked it and it has my approval too. Take it in a bean pot to a picnic.

BAKED LIMA BEANS
(Serves 4)

1 1-3 cups dried lima beans
About 3½ cups water — divided
1 med. onion chopped (or ¼ Spanish onion)
¼-lb. chopped bacon or bacon ends or salt pork
¾ tsp. salt
½ tsp. dry mustard
1-16 tsp. pepper
3 tbsps. brown sugar
3 tbsps. catsup
Soak the beans overnight in 2½ cups of the water, covered. In the morning add 2 more cups water and cook covered 30 min. until beans are nearly tender. Measure the water on the cooked beans. (I had 1¾ cups.) If you do not have 1¾ cups make it up to that amount. To this water add the onion, bacon, salt, mustard, pepper, brown sugar and catsup. Mix well and add drained beans. Turn into bean pot, cover and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for 3 hr. then reduce heat to 250 deg. Fahr. 4 hrs. longer. But halfway during this longer baking period look at the beans and see if they need the last cup of water specified in the list of ingredients. Mine did. If so stir this last cup of water (which should be hot) gently into the beans to prevent breaking them.

Do not overcook these beans because part of their appeal is their delicious mildness.

Points for Parents

By MARY BEYSON

Mother: "Teddy seems to be such a whiner these days. I know it's not that he's jealous of the baby. He's crazy about her; wants to play with her all the time and is always talking about her."

Mother: "Teddy is not as A child may not admit even to himself that he feels displaced by a new baby, but if he reverts to baby ways or seems unhappy, it may be time for the parents, especially the mother, to give him a little more exclusive attention.

happy as he used to be. I think he needs a little more special attention from both of us."

Father: "I'll put the baby to bed at night for awhile, so you can read Teddy his bedtime stories the way you used to."

Women's Rights Defender Finds Sex Discrimination on Campus

EDMONTON (CP) — "Even in the universities, where you would expect reason to prevail, you still find plain, old-fashioned, rank discrimination on the basis of sex."

So says Lis Law, who became known on the University of Alberta campus last year as a defender of women's rights.

She got her reputation early in the university year after she publicly denounced beauty contests as "treating women to object status."

A beauty herself, with long, dark, wavy hair and deep brown eyes, Mrs. Law obviously couldn't be accused of shooting "sour grapes."

She wants to see a change in society's values. "Women should be valued as thinking, acting persons."

Mrs. Law was vice-president of the university's student council the first of two women on the six-member executive. She said she had not campaigned as a champion of women's rights.

"But somebody else seemed to be looking out for the problems of the woman student. I became interested and then it became my priority.

"One out of every five students on this campus is married. Yet the university can find money for bowling alleys and curling rinks but not for day care centres, which are necessities for married women students or for women working to put their husbands through school."

There are all sorts of inequalities, she said during an interview just before the end of the academic year. For example, married men students could get up to $2,500 in financial assistance, but a married woman here could get only $900.

"Education in our society is changing. People will be being educated several times during their lives. We need some action now so that women who didn't go on to university immediately from high school can go back as married women."

She believes society still sees women as inferior beings.

"Women themselves accept this role. We have to break this attitude."

She said, for example, employers still tend to think that a woman is only looking for a job "temporarily, until she can get married" or that a married woman will be away from work often.

"A study by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows that women changes jobs less, not more, than men and that women have less, not more, absenteeism."

People conditioned children from the age of 2 to believe that there are girls' roles and boys' roles.

"Unfortunately, our society also is conditioned by advertisers who spend millions of dollars to reinforce the 'Barbie Doll' image."

Mrs. Law, who is divorced, went back to university after having been away from school for several years. "I found I really wanted, and needed, a better education."

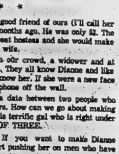
In her late 30s, she has two children, a daughter, 12, and a son, 6.

"It was hard going back with the children. I had financial problems and there is never enough time to do all the things I want."

She now is moving to Vancouver to take a job with the Inter-City Service Project.

"I was lucky. I was one of about 500 applicants. It gives me a chance to do the kind of research I want."

She has 4 bachelor of arts degree with a major in political science, and she said she'd like to do even more research into the institutional that forces women into inferior roles.



It's even worse now than it used to be, Mrs. Law said.

"Statistics show the percentage of women entering the professional fields or getting advanced degrees has been going down since the 1930s."

More than 50 per cent of high school graduates were female, but only 33 per cent went on to university.

"What happens to those brains? I wonder if our country can afford it wasting them."

She was also annoyed—"but at this stage no longer surprised"—to find that the median salary for men with a Grade 8 education was the same as that of women with four years' university.

Ann Landers

Unwanted Child Needs Counselling

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married late (29) and was a successful career girl at the time. My husband wanted a family immediately. I did not. I secretly used contraceptives, pretending to want a child as much as he did. When I accidently learned of my deception, I decided to make an honest attempt to have a baby in order to save our marriage.

My plan back was with me. I became pregnant immediately. My husband was overjoyed. I had a terrible nine months and a horrible delivery. Gregory was a breach birth and colicky from the first week. We didn't not know what a good night's sleep was for ten months.

Gregory is now seven years old and has given us nothing but aggravation. He is allergic to everything and I can't handle him. Neither can his teacher. She told me that in 20 years in education she has never seen a more difficult child. He is disobedient, stubborn, incorrigible and a disruptive influence wherever he goes. She suggested counseling.

My husband, who professed to want this child so much, is never home. His work takes him out of town from Monday through Friday. He says the boy is a mess because I'm a poor disciplinarian. He wants to send Gregory to a military school to "straighten him out." We finally found a school that will take him. What do you say? — WORN OUT.

DEAR WORN: I could write a book on what's wrong with your son — based on your letter — but you need a quick answer. The boy needs counseling, not military school. And you need counseling, too. A child whose mother regarded his conception as "rotten luck" was in trouble the moment he was born.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A good friend of ours (I'll call her Dianne) lost her husband five months ago. He was only 43. The widow is an attractive gal, a great hostess and she would make some lucky fellow a wonderful wife.

There are two bachelors in our crowd, a widower and at least four eligible divorced men. They all know Dianne and like her. That's the trouble — they know her. If she were a new face in town they'd be ringing her phone off the wall.

It's awkward to arrange a date between two people who have known each other for years. How can we go about making some of these men aware of this terrific gal who is right under their noses? — COMMITTEE OF THREE.

DEAR COMMITTEE: If you want to make Dianne Miss Lonely of 1976 just start pushing her on men who have "known her for years."

The best thing friends can do for a widow is include her as they did when her husband was alive. These eligible men are aware of this "terrific gal" and they need not be reminded.

Deloro Council

MARMORA (Special) — At the last regular meeting of Deloro Village Council before the summer recess, council was presented with proposed recreation committee members. They are: chairman, Alton Robinson; members, Ray Brown, Len Bicknell, Ross Campbell, Doug Bedore, Jim Coe and reeve Charles Gordanier, ex officio.

On motion for acceptance, result was affirmation of Mr. Robinson and Brown; negative Clemens. Reeve Gordanier declared the motion carried by majority.

This committee will be responsible for completing plans already started on outdoor rink, playground, and ballfield; for keeping tab on improvements soon to start on the hall; plus any other plans of improvement to make a better community centre for the village.

Dogs are again on the loose, Mr. Clemens noted his garden is being ruined by dogs running at large and requested the clerk to contact the dog patrol officer. People are reminded that dog tags are available from the clerk.

Property chairman, Councillor Alton Robinson, was directed to keep the village property cleaned up by getting grass cut and reminding the garbage collector to empty village litter cans.

Tenders were opened for improvements on the hall; prices received from W. Lalonde, R. Brownson and E. Lajoie. Council submitted the tender to R. Brownson, work to be completed by September 15, and that Mr. Brownson be notified at once. Since a new roof will be put on the hall, Mr. Brownson is requested not to erect the ceiling before the roof is finished. Tenders for the new roof will be going out.

Councillor Clemens, chairman of roads and streets, asked his committee to inspect the condition of the roads and streets on Wednesday evening to decide the work to be done. He also instructed the clerk to contact Peter Anderson, county engineer, in regard to having road work done.

During the past week, representatives from OWRC have been in Deloro Village to check the sewage disposal system and the water supply system. Further reports are forthcoming.

The clerk informed the council that T. McEachren, Department of Municipal Affairs, will be reviewing the 1970 budget later this week. As soon as final approval has been given, the tax bills will be going out.

A special meeting will be held June 26 at 7 p.m. to accept the 1970 budget, and to open tenders for the new roof on the hall. The next regular meeting will be Monday, September 14.

Huntingdon Township Meeting

IVANHOE (Special) — The June meeting of the Huntingdon Township Council met at 6 p.m.; minutes were read and adopted. Mr. Earl Beatty, requested permission to build a horse barn on a road allowance. No action was taken by Council.

The clerk was instructed to write to the Canadian Transport Commission regarding flooding of a road along the Canadian National Railway at Lot 11, Concession 12. Road Voucher No. 6, for $7451.36 was ordered paid. The application for consent to divide part of Lot 18, Con. 11, received from W. J. Wickson, was approved.

The resolution received from Uxbridge requesting cold gravel pits and quarries was concurred in by the Council.

Numerous accounts were presented and ordered paid: Charles Irvine, tax collector, $425; Village of Madoc — fire R. Pierce — Lot 2, Con. 7 — $50; Village of Madoc, fire at Lot 12, Con. 9 — $27; James Wilson — bulldozer work at the dump — $48; David Thompson — 2 lambs killed $40; John McGuire — one valuation — $4; Bell Canada, service charge — $13.07; Village of Tweed — firm at Sinnen, E. Kellar, E. Thompson, $170; Tweed Fire Department, wages, at Lot 12, Con. 11, Lot 12, Con. 9, Lot 13, Con. 11, Lot 13, Con. 3 — $115.

Next meeting will be held at 8 p.m. July 6, 1970.

Sidney Passes Resolutions

At a meeting of Sidney Township Council, which began at 10 p.m., following presentation of a joint urban expansion plan with the town of Frankford, two resolutions were passed.

Tenders will be received by the township for the resurfacing of the Third Concession Road allowance between Lot 18 and 28, inclusive. There have been numerous complaints concerning the condition of this road, which runs north of and parallel to Highway 401.

Frost Road from Highway 2 to Burns Avenue will be widened to the required 66 feet.

Also it was announced that two employees had completed post - secondary courses directly related to their work with the township.

Hugh Lyons, Treasurer and tax collector for Sidney Township, has successfully completed a three - year course at Queen's University and has received his degree as a member of the Association of Municipal Clerk Treasurers.

Mr. Lyons took his AMCT course by correspondence.

George Caves, building and plumbing inspector and bylaw enforcer, last week received his diploma from George Brown College in Toronto as a certified building inspector. Last year he received a diploma in the inspectors course for plumbing. To take this 22-week course, Mr. Caves drove every week to Toronto for his one - day course.

Peter Pan Presented

The lead role in the musical stage production of Peter Pan at Sir Winston Churchill Public School is played by a girl as was the Broadway showing. Eleven year old Karen Rickman is Mary Martin's counterpart, in the complete play written for public school level by Toronto student, Barry Clarke.

The play is the second year-end project at the school, involving as many students as possible, directed by Beryl Summers, principal with assistance of John Smith, vice-principal.

On Monday, the premiere performances was for fellow students, with a limited number of guest students from Queen Victoria, Harry J. Clarke, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Alexandria and Queen Mary Schools for the playing this afternoon. Adults and families are invited to attend the evening performance.

The children were responsible for their own costumes, creating the scenery and handling the lighting.

New Course Owner Cries All the Way to First Tee

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

The Belleville Golf and Country Club is alive and well at RR1, Marysville.

And with the extensive seeding process about to begin on his Highway 2 venture, Earl Johnson just laughs out loud at the gossips who have him going out of business.

"You see that field," he points to what will be fairways come May, 1981. "We've been over that 50 times, rolling, tilling, discing . . . getting it down fine enough to seed."

"We'll be seeding the greens the last week of June, and start seeding the fairways the first week of August."

Take Earl Johnson's 39 years of landscaping experience, add 4,200 yards of fairways, 18 bunkers and the couple of thousand trees being planted this fall, and you have the makings of the Belleville area's first public 18-hole golf course.

The fact Johnson has already spent some $18,000 in renovating the 80-year-old home that went with the course site 12 miles east of Belleville would also discourage thoughts that his is a fly-by-night venture.

It's literally his liquid assets that most enthuse the 53-year-old Burlington newcomer about his project.

Water will serve both esthetic and practical purposes, coming seamlessly into play on eight holes, while also providing the reservoir to keep 18 fairways well-watered.

Johnson has capitalized on a natural stream that meanders through the course site. Damming and an excavator that costs $34 an hour to operate has bitten out ponds that a mobile pumping system will siphon to keep fairways from baking.

Being strictly a 90's shooter himself, Earl Johnson is also interested in the little things that can make the weekend golfer's game a more enjoyable experience.

For instance, most tees will be situated so a golfer can sit in the shade while waiting to drive off. And there'll be a pump at the pictureque par-three fourth hole for parched drifters to wet their whistles with cool spring water.

Parallel fairways playing in the same direction avoid the common hazard of walking into a shot from adjoining holes.

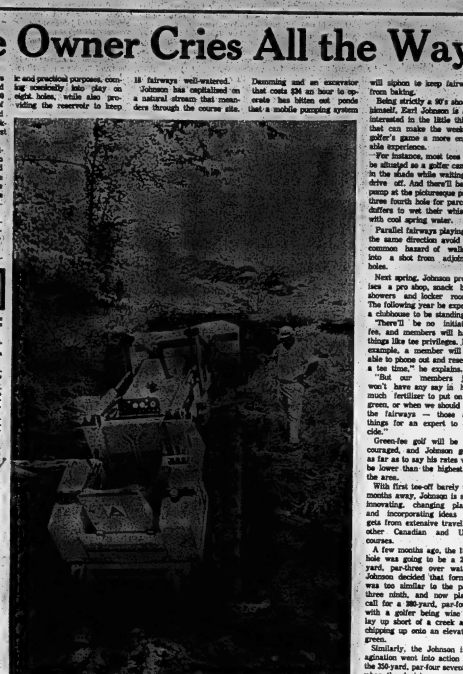
Next spring, Johnson promises a pro shop, male/ female barbers and locker rooms. The following year he expects a clubhouse to be standing.

"There'll be no initiation fee, and members will have things like tee privileges. For example, a member will be able to phone out and reserve a tee time," he explains.

"But our members just won't have any say in how much fertilizer to put on a green, or when we should cut the fairways — those are things for an expert to decide."

Green-fee golf will be encouraged, and Johnson goes as far as to say his rates will be lower than higher in the area.

With first tee-off barely ten months away, Johnson is still innovating, changing plans, and incorporating ideas he gets from extensive travel to other Canadian and U.S. courses.



A few months ago, the 18th hole was going to be a 210-yard, par-three over water. Johnson decided that format was too similar to the par-three 16th, and now plans call for a 380-yard, par-four, with a gutter being wise to lay up short of a creek and chipping up onto an elevated green.

Similarly, the Johnson imagination went into action on the 350-yard, par-four seventh, when the decision was made to set an elevated tee into a hillside of clay just south of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

With all this back-hoe and mental activity, it's easy to see why course - builder - owner Earl Johnson chuckles at the "folding" rumors.

He's more impressed by the optimistic sort who phoned up last week from Kingston after seeing the new course's ad in the yellow pages.

"The guy wanted to know how much our green fees were," grinned Johnson.

Unworkable Lie

This excavator ran into the water hazard on what will be the par-three fourth hole of the Belleville Golf and Country Club course when it opens next May. Earl Johnson, designer-owner of the Highway 2 venture 12 miles east of Belleville, tries to figure out what he can pull out of his bag of tricks to play this lie.

Lacrosse Juniors Break Eggs

You can't make a playoff omelet without breaking eggs and the Belleville Junior Lacrosse team is hoping that breaking their winless goose egg will carry them into the fight for a playoff position.

Steve Casselman fired an unassisted goal with only three minutes remaining in the game to give the home team a 2-1 win over Trenton in Quinte Lacrosse League action Monday night.

Trenton opened the scoring on a goal by Rick Reid with Ian McInnes drawing an assist at 16:06 of the first period.

Greg Scarlett tallied Belleville's first goal with five minutes remaining in the game after the two teams had battled through a scoreless second period combined with a penalty play with Jim Matthews and Randy Lamont.

Paul Muldoon continued his superb work in the Belleville nets and was the undisputed standout for the winners. Others who played a strong game included Jim Lamont, Tom Hehn and Ron Molnah.

The Belleville club suffered a blow to their attack when offensive specialist Jim Corbett was injured and unable to play for the second and third frames.

The Juniors' next home game is Monday night against Tweed.

Whip Juniors 9-2

Two drives were kept alive last night in the Commercial League softball double-header at the Alemite.

In the first game Rollins Construction continued their thrust towards first place by shellacking league leading Ellis Juniors 9-2 while in the nightcap Dry Hotel took a step closer to vacating the cellar with an an eighth - inning, come-from-behind 8-7 victory.

Wayne McConnell toed the rubber for Rollins' allowing just two hits while striking out nine Junior batters and walking four.

Scotty Reid started for Ellis' but gave way to Ted Waite in the fourth. In all they gave up 11 hits, walked four and fanned six Stinson batters.

Jerry Hill led the winners at bat with a single and a sixth-inning home run. Ralph Place cracked a double and a single, Wes May two singles and Carl Boomhower punched a single and stole home in the last inning.

Cliff Scott with a double and two runs batted in and Dale Duval with a single were the only Juniors to reach McConnell.

Rollins Continue Big Push for First

Mark Sheridan started for the Hotelmen but gave way to Bob Ethier in the second. The duo allowed five hits, issued three free passes and fanned nine batters.

Bob Swan went the distance for Stinson's giving up seven hits, striking out five and walking only one man.

Murray's homer and Lyle Wanzamaker's triple and double led the City's attack. Ed Lemon's game-tying round-tripper in the seventh on a costly Stinson's error and single by Pete Corbett on a wild pitch gave Rollins the victory.

Gary Misses Own Open

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)—Herb Holzschecker, an assistant professional playing on his home Thunderbird course, fired a three-under-par 69 Monday to grab one of the available spots in the 1979 Canadian Open golf tournament.

Joining the Thunderbird assistant in the Canadian Open, scheduled for July 2-8 at London, Ont., were Gary Mauer of Kitchener and Ken Girard and Dave Clayton both of Toronto.

Girard finished second with a two-under-par 70 while Clayton and Mauer tied for third at 71 with Orest Spooner of the London Hunt Club. Spooner, as host professional, already has a starting spot in the Canadian Open.

Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., and Toronto's Gary Bowerman, Gary Pitchford, Bobby Breen and Leon DeCaire all failed to qualify.

Lacrosse Nets Full

Goaltending didn't appear to be in vogue in Belleville Minor Lacrosse last night as two power contests saw a total of 37 markers counted.

Bob's Sports came up with a 13-6 win over Y's Mens Club, Andy Hyzer fired four goals and Mike McDonald three. Randy Hutchinson and Jeff Siddall each counted twice, and John Merrill added the other goal.

Dan Flesch and John Green led the losers with two goals apiece with David Thomson and Bob Bruce adding the others.

Kent Manning went on a six-goal scoring spree to lead Atlas Van Lines to an 11-4 victory against Dairy Queen. Jeff Belanger added three goals and Robbie Richardson added the other two. Brent Walmsley was best for the losers with a hat trick while Steve Wilson scored once.

Exams Costly For Kinsmen

Belleville Kinsmen Juniors lost much of their firepower due to exams and a junior softball contest and the results were evident as they dropped a 6-1 South Hastings decision to Plane's Concrete last night.

The Kinsmen were unable to muster any hitting attack against Plane's pitcher Bob Chappell, who scattered four hits throughout the contest. Chappell walked four batters and set seven down on strikes.

John Noakes worked four innings for Belleville giving way to Terry Meagher in the final two frames. They allowed seven hits walked a pair and struck out five batters.

"We've had trouble getting our ball team out lately," said coach Chuck Hunter, "but we're a long way from out of it yet."

The Belleville coach singled out Rick Meagher as one of the most improved members of the team and was also satisfied with the work turned in by midget call - ups Barry Calkin, Bill Kirkham and Stan Brooks.

Meagher tallied the Juniors' only run in the final inning with some heads-up base running as he scored from second on an errant pick - off attempt.

Ron Urch collected a double and single to pace the Plane's hitting attack, while Larry Adams blasted a solo second - inning homer. Other hits went to Bob Neilace, Ted Abrams and Bob Chappell.

Rich Meagher was the top Kinsmen hitter with a pair of singles, while Glenn Carleton and Leo Baker collected the other safeties.

Belleville's next home game is Wednesday night at 8 p.m. against the Reserves.

Mulroney's Loudest In Minor Baseball

Mulroney's batters spoke loudest in Belleville Minor Baseball play Monday night as they came up with 19 runs to stop the Gordon Ray Tadpoles 19-5.

Wayne Deighton and Shawn Mulroney worked for the winners with Tim Uens and Mike Leger were on the mound for the losers.

Shawn Mulroney bonered and singled for the winners with Terry Deighton, Wayne Deighton, Shane Butcher and Jim Mulroney each getting a single.

In another Tadpole game, Eric Watkins pitched Crawford Metals 8-2 as Terry McEachern and John Dent combined for a one-hit 7? - strike out victory.

Mark Pearson and Curtis LaBelle shared the mound while taking the loss. They struck out 16 men but issued 11 bases on balls.

Dent paced the winners with a grand-slam homer afti Chris Love added a single. Mike Pearson's base hit was the only safety for Crawfords.

Cableview peewees won a 13-3 decision over Farrell's Tim Walsh, Dan Cecilia and John Minnes getting the win and Clyde Routley and Jim Mahaffy taking mound duty for the losers.

Mike McClellan banged three singles while Cableview pitcher with Paul Prokopenik getting two and Kerry Locke hitting a triple.

Brian Bennett's three safeties were beat for Farrell's with Tim Walsh (2) and Tom Boretski getting the others.

Legion Branch 99 levelled Mel Barriages 13-7 in the other peewee game. Bill Hasler and Brian Turner got the win, while Paul Meeks and Glen Pearson were tagged with the loss.

Brian Turner and Bill Balyz each had a pair of singles for the Legion. Rick Culkin added a triple and George Bougard a home run. Jeff Merrill connected for two singles and a double in a losing cause, Stan Hymers had a pair of safeties and Gordon Male doubled.

Bata Defaults

The Oddfellow Juniors came up with the easiest win of the Belleville Minor Soccer action Monday night as Bata Braves opposition failed to make an appearance. The Oddfellows won the game by default.

Uptown Billiards Peewees won a one-way slam manhandling Station Street Food Market Mosquitos 5-0. Bob Barrington scored two for Uptown with Tony Donovan, Seymour Jacopoulos and Paul Douglas each adding one.

The Steelworker mosquitos scored three times against La Modada Hair Style, coming up with a 3-0 win. Tom Coulson (3) and Ralph Kolars were the goal-scorers.

Carbide: They Came Back!

Union Carbide came up with six runs in the last inning to complete a comeback 16-14 win over Deloro Stellite, last night and move into a four-way tie for second spot in the Industrial Softball League.

Ken Osborne buried the win for Union Carbide while Paul Trumpour, Dennis Lane and Jim Mahaffy split the losers' mound duties. Deloro outhit the winners 13-6 and had an 8-1 lead after the first inning.

Wayne Brown had a two-run homer for Union Carbide and Garnet Bird picked up a pair of doubles.

Ken Kleinsteuber and Paul Trumpour homered for the losers.

Morch Mariners came through with their first win of the season as they stopped UIC 3-1.

Bill Bulpit pitched the win allowing five hits and striking out eight batters. He did not walk a man.

Brian Rodgers and Brian Chase split the UIC pitching duties. They gave up seven hits and four walks while fanning three batters.

Perrin had two singles for the Mariners while Bone added a double. Hafaday, E11, Ganfords and Marcia all had base hits.

Chase was the big gun for UIC clouting a single, double and triple. Smith added a triple and Conroy had a single.

American Optical defeated the Firemen 4-1 at Prince Charles last night behind the one-hit pitching of Gerry Greveaux.

He fanned three and walked two in going the distance.

Wake, Nobles, and Greveaux all hit safely for AOCO.

Scale gave up three hits in defeat while striking out two and walking six.

Stan Papke was the only Firemen to touch Greveaux in seven innings.

Wings Soar Over Bears, Bobcats Shade Leafs

The near and the far of the West Hill Tyke games were brought to light last night as the Wings battered the Bears 21-2, and the Kinsmen Bobcats edged the Leafs 9-8.

Tim Soule fired a two-hitter for the Wings and struck out 17 while walking four batters.

Steve Gilby paced the winners with two homers and Tim Soule added his cause with a solo shot.

Andy Rosati and Peter Corrigan combined on the Bears mound to fan 13 batters but issued 17 walks and gave up 13 hits.

Bobcat hurler Wigger Leonard walked 15 batters but with 13 strikouts hung on to earn the victory. Steve Mollins led the Cats with a home run.

Don Green fired a six-hitter and fanned eight batters in a losing cause for the Leafs. David Dick and Joe Lewis punched home runs for the Leafs.

Holds Dodgers to Five

Pirates' Prodigy Wins First Start

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jim Nelson, a sore-shouldered rookie right-hander, Monday scattered five hits to pitch up a win in his first major league starting assignment as Pittsburgh Pirates clipped Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2 in one of two National League games.

Nelson, 22, last week struck out Willie Mays and forced Willie McCovey to hit into a double play in his big league debut against San Francisco Giants. He has allowed only one earned run in 13 innings.

St. Louis Cardinals edged San Diego Padres 5-4 and Houston Astros were rained out at Philadelphia Phillies in the only other scheduled National League action.

Five games were played in the American League Monday. Baltimore Orioles fell 9-8 to Milwaukee Brewers and had their East-Division lead over the idle New York Yankees trimmed to 2½ games. Minnesota Twins downed Washington Senators 5-3, Cleveland Indians nipped California Angels 3-2 in 13 innings, Oakland Athletics outscored Detroit Tigers 12-7 and Kansas City Royals defeated Boston Red Sox 7-6.

The Pirates built a 4-0 lead in the first two innings off loser Joe Moeller. Willie Stargell belted his 16th homer in the seventh.

Roberto Pena's three-run double led a six-run explosion in the eighth inning that lifted Milwaukee from a 6-3 deficit to its victory over Baltimore. It was the Orioles' ninth setback in the last 15 games.

Merv Rettenmund socked a grand-slam homer in the first inning and Chico Salmon a two-run shot in the sixth for the Orioles.

Harmon Killebrew brought the Twins from behind with a three-run homer in the seventh inning, his 18th, and they opened a 4½-game lead over the Angels in the West Division. Frank Howard homered for the Senators, his 18th of the year.

Jack Heidemann, who doubled and scored in the first inning, singled home the winning run in the 12th following a pair of two-out walks for the Indians.

Heidemann had a double and three singles, giving him 10 hits in 16 at-bats since being inserted in the leadoff spot Saturday.

A grand-slam homer by Frank Fernandez highlighted a six-run third inning that carried Oakland past Detroit.

Rick Monday also homered for the Athletics while Dick McAuliffe's grand slam was one of three Tigers home runs. Willie Horton and Al Kaline hit the others.

The Royals rallied three times to beat the Red Sox. Two-run homers by Pat Kelly in the fourth and Ed Kirkpatrick in the fifth wiped out early Boston leads. Kansas City won with three runs in the ninth inning.

Joe Torre's eighth-inning homer proved to be the winning run for the Cardinals.

Braves' Aaron Topping All-star Polls

NEW YORK (AP) — Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves led the early balloting, released Monday, for the National League all-star team while team-mate Rico Carty still placed third in the outfield despite his absence from the ballot.

Carty, hitting .400 most of the season, did not appear on the list of nominees by managers and player representatives last February, but overcame the omission with 71,511 write-in votes.

The NL team will face the American League All-Stars July 16 in Cincinnati.

Familiar Taylor Silks Not Appearing in Queen's Plate

TORONTO (CP) — The official field for Saturday's 111th running of the Queen's Plate will not be known until entries close Thursday, but it is already apparent that the silks of one of the most famous Canadian stables will not appear.

E. P. Taylor, whose horses have earned him nine Plate purses in the last 31 years, had one of the top contenders for this year's run for the guineas until the horse was injured last week.

Vice Regent was on his way to the track at Delaware Park in Stanton, Del., when he was frightened by a passing car and reared back into a ditch.

"He knocked the skin off his left hind leg and he has a few knicks on his right hind too," said Joe Thomas, director of Taylor's Windfields Farm.

Thomas said the colt now will be aimed toward the Prince of Wales and the Breeder's Stakes, the other two events in Canada's triple crown of thoroughbred racing.

Vice Regent is a son of Taylor's famous Northern Dancer, the last Windfields Farm product to win the Plate, Canada's premier event for home-bred three-year-olds.

Taylor first won the Plate in 1949 with Epic, then came back with Major Factor in 1951, Canadiana 1953, Lyford Cay 1957, New Providence 1959, Victoria Park 1960, Fleming Page 1962, Northern Dancer 1964 and Connaught Park 1966.

Taylor's Canadiana 1953 and Northern Dancer.

In winning the 1966 edition, Victoria Park set the Woodbine record for the 1¼-mile Plate distance with a time of 2:02.

But while Windfields may not have an entry in the $25,000 stakes race Saturday, the blood lines will be represented.

Victoria Park was the sire of Almoner, one of this year's top contenders owned by Parkview Stable of Toronto.

Another elegant missing from this year's Plate will be a top contender from Western Canada. In fact the only western horse entered in Sunday's two-division running of the Plate Trials was a chestnut gelding called True Willis owned by two Langley, B.C., cattlemen, Pedro Garcia and Feliz Ayarra.

True Willis has won only one race in six starts this year—a mile on the turf. On the 1 1-16-mile dirt course of the Plate Trial he finished sixth in the second division's field-of 18.

The first western-bred to win the plate was Olivier Sanches' Whistling Sea in 1965 and the last western victory was in 1960 by Merger, owned by Frank McMahon and Max Bell.

Gomez Figures Field Playing Second Fiddle to Two Violins

TORONTO (CP) — Avelino Gomez, whose four victories as a jockey is a record for the Queen's Plate, believes Saturday's 1¼-mile race for Canadian-foaled three-year-olds is a cadenza for Two Violins.

In fact, Gomez feels that Two Violins is such an overwhelming choice to win that he rates the rest of the probable field from second-place Saidee back.

Two Violins, owned by George Gardiner of Toronto, did not run in the two divisions of the Plate trials Sunday. Bees Wax, owned by Jack Stafford of Toronto, and Big Blue Bomber, owned by Cons. Sophie of Toronto, won those trials.

Bill Gomez, who has retired as a jockey, doesn't pick either Bees Wax or Big Blue Bomber to finish even second Saturday.

Gomez picks Almoner, owned by Parkside Stables of Toronto, to finish second behind Two Violins. He points out that Bees Wax edged Almoner in Sunday's plate trial because he ran into trouble on the backstretch.

Gomez doesn't rate Bees Wax as a serious contender in the Plate because he "has to be ahead."

Victoria Park was the sire of Almoner, one of this year's top contenders owned by Parkview Stable of Toronto.

MORE ABOUT CHARGEX

Answers to some pointed questions people are asking about Canada's most versatile charge card.

What is Chargex?
Chargex is an all-purpose charge card sponsored by four Canadian banks, and is available to customers of any bank. It takes the place of cash in a wide variety of shopping situations, when you don't have cash with you.

What's it going to cost me?
You pay nothing to get a Chargex card. There is no annual dues as with many other charge cards. Payments are not deducted from your bank account. You are sent one monthly bill for all purchases, and pay with one cheque from your own bank. There is no service charge when you pay for purchases within 25 days of your billing date.

Do I have to pay right away?
When you find your expenses unusually high in one particular month, and require more than the 25 days from date of billing, you can budget your payments over several months. There is a service charge for this convenience of extended payments.

Can I use Chargex when I'm out of town?
Chargex is part of a worldwide charge card system, and is honoured in more than 40 countries around the world. Wherever you see the blue, white and gold symbol that identifies Chargex, you know your Chargex card is welcome there. Even when the identifying name is different. For instance, the name is Bank Americard in the United States and Hawaii. In Great Britain, South Africa and the Caribbean it's Barclaycard. In Japan, the name is Sumitomo Card and in Mexico the name is Bancomer Card. They all identify charge cards backed by some of the world's greatest banks. Just like your Chargex card.

Will Chargex get me cash in an emergency?
Whether the emergency comes up at home, or when you are travelling, just present your Chargex card at any bank displaying the familiar blue, white and gold symbol. They'll see that you get the cash to tide you over.

Do Chargex merchants raise their prices?
Chargex is as much a convenience for the merchant, as it is for you. He is relieved of the cost of maintaining his own credit facilities. When you pay for a purchase with your Chargex card, the merchant receives his money that same day. (Unlike many other charge cards, where it is weeks before payment is made.) So, the merchant will be happy to have you use your Chargex card. With no increase in prices. Just ask him.

What if I lose my Chargex card?
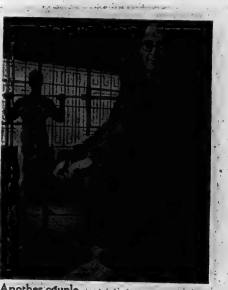
Until you personally receive and sign your Chargex card, you are under no obligation for its use. If you should lose your card after signing it, simply notify us. Even if you forget to let us know, you are protected by a maximum $50 liability for misuse of the card.

The Chargex charge card. It works almost anywhere.



You finally give up and call a plumber. Chargex.*

It'll be months before you can get new ones. Chargex.

The kids keep growing and growing. Chargex.

Another couple of months and you'll need new clothes. Chargex.

The prescription cost $5.00 and you only have $3.50. Chargex.

More than 30,000 merchants honour the Chargex card, and the number is growing every day. You can use it in your own neighbourhood, and downtown. You can use it in over 40 countries. Your Chargex card is welcome wherever you see the familiar blue, white and gold symbol. Even when the identifying name is different. (It's BankAmericard in the United States, Barclaycard in Great Britain and the Caribbean, Bancomer Card in Mexico, and Sumitomo Card in Japan.) You can even get a cash advance with it in an emergency, at any bank branch displaying the Chargex symbol.

You get one monthly statement for the things you buy, and pay with one cheque. Payments are not deducted from your bank account. There are no service charges when you pay for the things you buy within 25 days of billing date.

No matter where you bank, you can enjoy the convenience of a Chargex card. Just pick up an application from any bank or merchant displaying the Chargex symbol.

Now, shouldn't you have one?

Belkin Leads Canadians to First Zone Final in 57 Years

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mike Belkin downed Gary Parun of New Zealand in four sets Monday to send Canada into the zone final of Davis Cup tennis play for the first time in 57 years.

Belkin, a 26-year-old Montreal native, beat Parun 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3 to give the Canadian team the best-of-five American zone north section title three matches to two. They now face Colombia or Brazil, currently playing in the south section final. Colombia leads the rain-delayed round in Brazil 2-1 with the final two singles matches scheduled for today.

The last time Canada progressed to a zone final was in 1913, Canada's first year in Davis Cup competition. That year, Canada beat South Africa and Belgium before losing 5-0 to the United States. All three rounds were played in England with captain Robert Powell and Bernard Schwengers representing Canada.

"Winning for Canada gives us the real pleasure," Belkin said Monday after his victory in the fifth and deciding match. "I left Canada when I was 11, but I'm still a Canadian and I'm playing for my country."

Belkin moved to Florida where he developed his game well enough to become Canada's top-ranked Davis Cup player.

The second member of Canada's team, Toronto's John Sharpe, is a transplanted Australian. He shares Belkin's national pride in representing Canada.

"I moved to Canada on my own free will," Sharpe said, "and as far as I'm concerned this is my country."

Peter Burwash of Toronto, Canada's other Davis Cup squad member, did not play against New Zealand.

Belkin described his Monday victory over Parun.

"We manipulated each other around the court. I started fast . . . but lost my concentration in the second set. I had to play well to come back in the third set when I was down 3-1 in games."

In the strenuous third set, trailing 3-1, Belkin won six of the next eight games.

"If we could have won that third set it could have changed the outcome," said New Zealand captain Eric White.

"But Belkin played some great shots, especially his passing shots."

Before the deciding match between Belkin and Parun, Brian Fairlie evened the tie, at two matches' each when he beat Sharpe in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

White said it wasn't the last match that beat the favored New Zealand team.

"I feel we lost it in the first day when Parun was off color and lost to Sharpe," he said.

We felt sure of two singles against Sharpe and thought Belkin would win a match."

But Parun was unable to defeat Sharpe Saturday. He withdrew in the fifth set because of a leg cramp. When Parun was taken from the game, each player had won two sets. Sharpe was ahead five games to four and leading 30-40 in the game.

Belkin said his Monday victory "was the happiest moment of my life, especially after they had predicted a 5-0 whitewash."

The prediction of a 5-0 or 4-1 win was made by White prior to the tie.

"You always say that . . . I knew they would be very tough," the New Zealand captain said after Canada took the series.

Pele Playing Last Cup

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — King Pele of Brazil's two World Cup winning teams, says this year's tournament is "the cup of my life."

At 29, still considered the world's greatest soccer player, Pele finds it most important that Brazil wins this tournament.

"This will be my last World Cup," he said. "That is why I'm so interested in winning it, because there is nothing like winning the last competition in which you are involved."

The great Brazilian, who has scored a total of 1,027 goals in his 14-year professional career, was asked about the chances of playing in a fifth World Cup.

"I don't think I will play in another world cup. I need to spend some time with my family.

"I intend to retire t 32, within three more years."

Brazil or Uruguay Win Would Retire Rimet Cup

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Two perpetual rivals with the same desire to retire the Jules Rimet Cup with a third world soccer championship meet Wednesday in one of two semi-final matches.

Brazil and Uruguay have both won the world crown twice and this meeting has a flavor of vengeance for the Brazilian selection which suffered a disastrous defeat to Uruguay 20 years ago.

In the other semi-final match West Germany, the 1966 runner-up to England, plays European champion Italy at huge Aztec Stadium here while Brazil and Uruguay meet at Guadalajara.

The Uruguayan win came in 1950 when Brazil had built a huge stadium for the world championship and hoped to win its first title. Everything favored the host team, not only because it would have a partisan crowd but because of its performance prior to the world competition.

But Uruguay took to the field against Brazil and in the final game walked off with a 2-1 victory and ruined Brazil's planned celebration.

Brazil later won the Jules Rimet Cup in 1958 in Sweden and in 1962 in Chile. Uruguay, besides 1950, had won the first cup games in 1930. Italy also has been the world soccer champ twice in 1934 and 1938.

In unofficial betting, Brazil is a 2-to-1 shot to win this year. West Germany is 3 to 1, Italy 4 to 1 and Uruguay 5 to 1.

Brazil has made it to this semi-final round with relative ease. The team came out on top of Group III competition with wins over Czechoslovakia, Rumania, defending champion England and Peru in the quarter-finals.

Uruguay took second place in Group IV after losing with a accession against Italy, a 2-0 victory over Israel, and a 1-0 loss to Sweden. The South American squad made it past the quarter-finals with a 1-0 over-time triumph over Russia.

Meanwhile, inquests on England's defeat continued in British newspapers Monday with strong criticism of England manager Sir Alf Ramsey. There were suggestions he may quit.

"If there is any attempt to curb his complete control of England soccer, I feel sure his pride will compel him to quit," said Desmond Hackett in the London Daily Express.

"Frankly I think Ramsey has made errors during this Mexican campaign. He has stubbornly geared his thinking to the World Cup series of 1966.

"He has killed the star system, almost forbidden any attempts at individuality and refused even occasionally to experiment with skilled wingers," Hackett said.

The London Daily Mail said in a headline: "Alf Took No Risk, Lost All."

Mail writer Brian James said: "If England's manager, Sir Alf Ramsey, has made a mistake it is this: To ignore with contempt the critics and outsiders who now gather to try to pull him down."

Looking ahead to the rest of the tournament, Geoffrey Green, respected soccer writer of The Times, paid tribute to Brazil.

"They are the ones who live off the cuff and give the other person a chance," Green said.

"Their attitude is—you score four and we will score five. That is how football should be played. That is entertainment, and that is what all the world loves—goals and entertainment."

Buffey New Scout

VANCOUVER (CP) — General manager Bud Polle of Vancouver Canucks announced Monday that veteran National Hockey League referee Vern Buffey will join the club Sept. 1. The 41-year-old Buffey will work as the Canucks' special representative for Eastern Canada and will live in Montreal. He will scout the pros, amateurs and college players in the East. Buffey spent 11 seasons officiating for the NHL and for the last four years was the league's No. 1 referee. He announced his retirement two weeks ago after a series of injuries.

Bruins Sign Pair

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins announced Monday the signing of left winger Rick McLeish and goalie Dan Bouchard, two outstanding prospects selected in the National Hockey League's junior amateur draft in Montreal last week. McLeish scored 68 goals for Peterborough Petes in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A last season, while Bouchard starred for London Knights in the same league.

Helmets for Junior A

BOIESTOWN, N.B. (CP) — The New Brunswick Amateur Hockey Association has ruled at its annual meeting here that all Junior A hockey players must wear helmets during the 1970-71 season. Helmets were compulsory in the New Brunswick Junior-Intertry League last season. They have also been compulsory for Junior B players.

Bear Back Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Piccolo, 26, halfback with Chicago Bears of the National Football League, died today in hospital. Death was attributed to cancer. Piccolo missed the last five games of 1969 because of surgery for removal of a tumorous growth in the chest. He re-entered the hospital June 4 for further treatment. Before the Bears he was the top ground gainer and scorer in 1964 in the United States while at Wake Forest.

Expos Deal Cline

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds obtained veteran outfielder Ty Cline Monday from Montreal Expos who acquired outfielder Clyde Mashore from the Reds' Indianapolis farm club. Cline, 31, batted only twice this year before undergoing internal surgery. He hit .239 in 101 games with Montreal last year. Mashore, 25, was with the Reds in spring training but did not make the team.

Sweet Revenge

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Shirley Engleborn gained a measure of revenge by winning the Ladies' PGA championship by four strokes Monday in an 18-hole playoff with Kathy Whitworth. Miss Engleborn, who forced the playoff with a birdie on the final green of the 72-hole tournament Sunday, fired a steady one-over-par 74 in the pressure-packed duel with the LPGA top money-winner at Pleasant Valley Country Club. Edged by one stroke by Miss Whitworth in the LPGA championship on the same course in 1967, the 28-year-old Idaho native got even in picking up $4,500 and tying Mickey Wright's record of four straight tour victories.

Ceppetelli's Status Hazy On Arrival in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Gene Ceppetelli, who could easily become the most controversial figure in Canadian football in the coming weeks, was expected to arrive here today.

Ceppetelli, a native of Edmonbury, left the Canadian Football League Hamilton Tiger-Cats in 1968 to try his luck with Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants of the National Football League.

The Als acquired the CFL rights to Ceppetelli from the Ticats this year, and the Cats, indebted to the Montreal Eastern Football Conference club, tried to waive the centre through the other 23 United States' teams.

However, the latter move failed and Ceppetelli was claimed by San Francisco 49ers, but the latest word the Als have is that he is en route here.

"Gene could be in any time," Red O'Quinn, the Als general manager said Monday. "He's driving here from Pennsylvania."

Asked about Ceppetelli's status, O'Quinn said:

"There's not too much can be said right now. There are some things you just can't talk about."

O'Quinn said "extenuating circumstances" surround Ceppetelli's case and if a fight for the player's services becomes necessary "we'll fight that battle when we come to it."

In order to gain the Canadian rights to Ceppetelli, the Als sent import-tight end Bill Starr to the Ticats. However, with Ceppetelli supposedly in the fold, the Als then carried the move one step further when they dealt Starr to Basil Bark, also a non-import, to Calgary Stampeders of the Western Conference as part of the deal Dait brought flanker Terry Evanshen here.

Apparently word of Ceppetelli's double loyalties has not reached CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur.

Gaudaur said Sunday he could not comment on a hypothetical matter.

"I haven't seen a CFL contract signed by Ceppetelli," Gaudaur said. "The National Football League and the CFL have an 'esteem cordial'—no respect each other's contract."

It appears Ceppetelli's future here lies with whether the 49ers complain and to what extent Pete Rozelle, commissioner of football in the United States, pursues the matter.

TENDERS

TENDERS FOR ADDITIONS AND ALTERATIONS TO THE BELLEVILLE GENERAL HOSPITAL

Stipulated Sum Tenders are invited from General Contractors for construction at the Belleville General Hospital, Belleville, Ontario, of Stage 3 of the Hospital's construction program. This consists of new laundry, receiving and stores, and processed stores areas, a Hospital Administration Wing — a total of approximately 71,500 square feet, being, in general, two-level reinforced concrete construction; together with approximately 6,300 square feet of alterations to an existing hospital building to provide new staff locker and change areas.

Documents will be available only to Contractors who have indicated their intentions of bidding, in writing, to the Architect prior to June 24, 1968. Drawings and instructions to bidders will be available for inspection as of June 17, 1970 at the Architect's office and at the Builders' Exchanges in Kingston, Belleville, Ottawa, Trenton and Hamilton.

Tender documents will be issued June 20, 1970, on receipt by the Architect of a cheque for $200.00 in favor of the Belleville General Hospital, to be refunded upon return of these in good condition.

Tenders must be accompanied by a certified cheque (only) in the amount of five per cent (5%) of the bid. Tenders to be valid for a period of sixty days. Cheques from Contractors whose bids reject them out of consideration will be returned immediately.

Mechanical and electrical tenders will close at the Toronto Builders' Exchange at 3:00 p.m. on Monday, July 27, 1970.

The General Contractors' tenders will close at the Office of the Administrator at the Belleville General Hospital at 2:00 p.m. on Wednesday, July 29, 1970.

Lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose fractionally in light mid-morning trading today at the Toronto stock market.

On index, industrials were up .05 to 152.10 and western oils 1.89 to 138.18. Golds were unchanged at 153.52 and base metals down .03 to 89.58.

The market turned around from opening losses under pressure from a sharp gain on Wall Street.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 250,000 shares, compared with 214,000 at the same time Monday.

Volume Monday was the lightest in more than 10 years.

Losers edged out gains 59 to 55 with 137 issues unchanged.

Largest gains were in beverage, merchandising and bank stocks.

Losing sectors included real estate, utilities, oil refining and food processing.

Among advancing issues, Pacific Pete was up ¼ to 21¼, Home A 4s to 15¾, Asamera 1¼ to 13¾ and Lake Dufault ¼ to 14¾.

Bell was down ½ to 41, Investors Overseas ¼ to 21, Gulf ¼ to 14½ and Kaiser Resources ¼ to 15.

Stockbrokers stood around with plenty of time on their hands Monday as trade fell to new lows.

On index, industrials were down .41 to 152.05, golds 2.13 to 153.52 and base metals .09 to 89.59. Western oils gained .3 to 131.56.

Trading dropped off to 1,000,000 shares, compared with 1,381,000 Friday.

Volume Monday was the lightest since April 18, 1960, when 881,000 shares were bought and sold.

Losers outnumbered gains 205 to 150 with 209 issues unchanged.

Some observers described the languishing tend as a calm after the storm—with investors proceeding cautiously after the violent ups and downs on markets a few weeks ago.

Analysts say investors are waiting for a firming trend before dealing at the stock market.

The market opened with trading at a small's pace. Buying interest remained near-dormant throughout the day.

Largest gains were in merchandising, oil refining and steel sectors.

Gaining sectors included communications, food processing and real estate.

Among declining issues, Bell was down ¾ to 41½, Comineo ¼ to 21¾, Falconbridge ¾ to 132, Alcan Industries ¼ to 14¾, Dofasco ¾ to 18¼ and Bethlehem 1⅛ to 13.

Sherritt was down ¼ to 17¼, Asamera ¾ to 13¼.

Auto Electric gained 90 cents to $4.50, Erie Diversified ¾ to 6¼, Simpson-Sears ¾ to 29¼, Lake Dufault ¼ to 14¾ and Triad Oil 25 cents to $3.40.

Eldorado

ELDORADO — Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Sinn attended a 25th wedding anniversary party for Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bailey of Cooper recently.

Merrick Boyle is reported to have had a slight accident and is resting at home for a few days.

A community farewell party was held recently in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lloyd who have taken up residence in Madoc.

Queensboro

QUEENSBORO — Allan Sager has returned home after being a patient in Belleville General Hospital for the past three weeks.

The Dollar Floats Free

The Canadian dollar floated up on International exchange markets Monday to 97.5 cents in U.S. funds at the close of the market in Montreal. Finance Minister Edgar Benson announced Sunday that the Canadian dollar will be allowed to float freely in relation to other currencies, ending an eight-year fixed rate at which the dollar was pegged at 92.5 cents to American funds. The move is effectively an upward revaluation. It will mean Canadian exports will tend to be more expensive, imports will be cheaper, and overseas travel by Canadians less expensive.

Most MPs Prove Skeptical Of Interest-free Loans Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — A parental Creditiste proposal that interest-free loan should be provided by the Bank of Canada to all levels of government fell on skeptical ears in the Commons Monday.

Revenue Minister Jean-Pierre Coté said the suggestion, outlined in a non-votable Creditiste motion, was unconvincing.

Jack Bigg (PC—Parkdale) said he is tired of hearing the "empty nonsense" about debt-free money.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said the Creditistes "think you can have something for nothing."

Of the reactions of the other parties, Charles-Eugene Gauthier (Creditiste—Roberval) remarked that "there is no worse deaf man than the one who doesn't want to hear."

Mr. Matte, who moved the motion, said capital projects can be financed without taxes if the Bank of Canada provides interest-free loans to the various levels of government.

Mr. Coté said the Creditiste argument is based on the false hypothesis that the public debt has sharply increased. This was not so.

The proposal that the Bank of Canada make interest-free loans to provincial and municipal governments and school boards was outside the jurisdiction of the central bank.

He said the government is considering further steps to stimulate economic growth. But these had to wait until inflation had eased.

Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats lamented foreign domination of the Canadian economy, they still welcomed American loans.

These loans should be provided by the central bank so that Canada could run its own economy.

Mr. Cannetto said the prime minister has opposed low-interest loans because he has said Lucy would spur inflation.

But Canada had poured millions of dollars in low-interest loans into developing countries. Did this cause inflation?

Leonel Beaudoin (Creditiste—Richmond) said the government should provide more money to end the housing shortage. Municipalities needed more money to solve their financial problems.

Mr. Bigg said Social Credit governments do not practise what they preach. Little had been done for the taxpayers in oil-rich Alberta.

Adrien Lambert, (Creditiste—Bellechasse) said his party doesn't oppose credit but only wants to "lighten the burden."

Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) said public works should be financed through a system of credit without imposing taxes. Financial considerations now limited construction of public works.

Charles-Eugene Dionne (Creditiste—Kamouraska) said the present financial structure is a "diabolical system." Taxes were being used to pay the national debt.

Slick-licker From B.C. Shipped to Lap Up Oil

FORT CHIPEWYAN, Alta. (CP) — A British Columbia-developed slick-licker is to be thrown into the fight against a film of oil near the mouth of the Athabasca River in northeastern Alberta.

Norm Sewell arrived in this northern community during the weekend with the machine invented in Esquimalt, B.C., by his brother, Dick. Modifications were completed Monday to suit local conditions, including the shallow channels of the river's delta area, and the machine was expected to be operating by noon today.

Dr. W. J. Doug Stephen, federal officer supervising the clean-up operation, said the slick-licker operates on the wheat combine principle, with a conveyor belt designed to pick up drops of oil.

A similar Sewell-developed machine was used off the coast of Nova Scotia to help clean up oil from the sunken tanker Arrow.

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., from whose pipeline the oil poured into the Athabasca River June 6, was unable Monday to estimate how much oil was involved. A spokesman said it was hoped the company would know in a few days after total losses from the pipeline are assessed.

Killing Yourself

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We have four children who are perfectly normal but our fifth, a 4 - year - old son, is a problem. Practically all day he sits by himself in a corner. He doesn't talk. Doesn't play with other children. At times he breaks out into a terrible temper tantrum. Our doctor says nothing can be done. He says our child is "autistic." Will you explain? — Mrs. D.

Comment: These heart-breaking problem children often look like normal children. Many are unusually beautiful. Until lately we had little to offer in treatment. But love and more people are becoming more aware that they require constructive help.

For example, Robert Hamblin and associates wrote recently: "The problems of autistic children usually thwart those of all other children. They appear sealed off in a world of their own. The more severely they recover learn how to talk, though they sometimes echo phrases. They remain dependent upon Mother and become more and more destructive. They develop increasingly destructive and bizarre behavior problems. Finally, between 5 and 10 years old, autistic children ordinarily become unbearable in their families and at that point they are almost invariably institutionalized. Until recently, at least, this meant a rear ward to vegetate in until they died."

These children need food, warmth, play, love and education. But they also need special help.

I have received this note from Mr. Morris S. Weiss, president of Miami Society for Autistic Children (1180 North East 128th Street, North Miami, Fla. 33161): "One estimate is that there are some 75 autistic children in the greater Miami area. Only six are receiving the training that has proven effective . . . Operant Conditioning Reinforcement. Two specially trained teachers for the six boys. One of them, now 8½, now has a vocabulary of about 20 words, lives at home, and improves steadily in relating to others.

"Our fight is to bring the autistic child to the attention of the communities, so that proper classrooms will be made available to them . . . and thus prevent these children from spending their lives in institutions. Many thanks for your interest, Dr. Steincrohn. I hope you can bring help to many unhappy and frustrated parents who do not know which way to turn."

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 13 years old and disagree with Mrs. R. I think sex education should be taught. Some parents don't tell their children about sex because they don't think the subject should be brought up. Then we go around asking other kids what it is all about. And nine chances out of 10 they are wrong. So I think sex should be taught at the right time at school. Don't you? — Miss M.

Comment: Ideally, it should be taught both by parents and by well - equipped teachers in school. But if your parents won't talk, I believe that school is a better classroom than the back alley.

Gremlin's Meaning Lost

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Apropos my recent piece on the new American Motors car, "Gremlin," which I suggested was a somewhat negative name for a car, since the word let from the company's director of merchandising seeks to

I wrote, in a friendly fashion, set me straight.

that "Gremlin" seems an odd name for an automobile, a letentered the language during World War II, meaning a pesky little imp that caused malfunctions and motor trouble in machines.

Well, it turns out that the company had a "name study" made, and could find no one under the age of 30 who made Gremlin and the World War II troublemakers. Moreover, of the over-60 group, only 7 per cent recalled the negative implication of that little imp.

I am willing to take American Motors word for it, but it surprises me (and probably claims me) that so useful a neologism as "gremlin" has almost completely faded from the modern-day vocabulary. I would have expected it to find a more permanent place in language, especially since it seemed to fill a real need.

Actually, most neologisms and slang words stay around long enough to become permanent, if they express something that has never before had a good equivalent.

Prof. Mario Pei, the linguist, once looked up a "New Words Section" of an old dictionary, and found that 90 per cent of the words and phrases had survived 30 years later.

Among these were: cheesecake (for semi-nude photographs), sweet (for old-fashioned and trite), wolf (for a philanderer), whodunit (for a mystery story), as well as moppet, gimmick, snafu, scoop — and gremlin.

Earlier neologisms that had manaded to survive were words we hardly think of as slang any more — like klutz, and comeback and getaway, and joy ride and wangle and scrip issue and two-bits and juke box. And, surprisingly enough, not too many decades ago, such words as strenuous, spurious, clumsy and bogus were not considered standard English. (Bogus, by the way, has been almost entirely replaced by phony, except in Great Britain.)

If "gremlin" has failed to make it in the permanent vocabulary — along with another World War II neologism, "Quisling," for traitor — it is one of the few coinages that have been lost in our time. The rate at which slang becomes absorbed into the mainstream of language is equalled only by the rate at which we forget the words we discard.

For June 17

Your birthday today: More activity than you are quite ready for awaits you in the coming year. A crash program of new study might become necessary as conditions change. Your ability to persuade people grows. It's a "green" and growing out of a time if you will let it be so. Today's aspects carry a touch of scientific, perhaps sadness and are usually refined in taste.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Aside from some extra care in travel and its statements a correspondence this is a busy and productive day. Give a small party this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The confidence of your workmates you over the momentary confusions of today. Deal with professional consultants. Listen to good music tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Surprise lucky escapes from good fortune in your creative work and contacts with important people, to minor failures of communication. Money matters take a lucky trend.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Distractions intrude while you are trying to get something done. Care with details and facts will help things. Family conditions provide encouragement and stimulation.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Children, young people do things which give you very happy. Friends are skeptical while actually trying to be helpful. Something new is added to your home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Economic factors are on the upturn and promise rapid growth while purely emotional ties suffer setbacks. Seek the cause to make changes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Be alert today for an opening. What is not available for you may serve very nicely for somebody else. Important people can help if they can stay out of the limelight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): An opportunity arises you are not quite ready to grasp. Information is incomplete, needs double-checking. A deep emotional need finds some encouragement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Just when things seem unlikely to work out, your associates pitch in and the day concludes with everybody fairly well satisfied.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Influential people are likely to notice what you have been doing. A little discreet promotion is the right course now. You stand to make some money: put it in the bank.

Plan Ready for Major Revision of Unemployment Insurance

OTTAWA (CP) — A new reading on the government's orientation toward social reform should emerge when Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey makes public the results of his cabinet campaign for a major revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Mr. Mackasey's score sheet, expected Wednesday, will be in the form of government white paper on unemployment insurance and will be designed to complement the long-promised white paper on social security.

Together the two documents have been foreseen as principle blueprints in the reform of social services and the delay in production of the insurance paper has produced speculation about a rift between reformers and economic conservatives in the Liberal cabinet.

Mr. Mackasey can be considered a winner, for the time at least, if his white paper shows cabinet endorsement of all, or almost all, the reforms of the Unemployment Insurance Act which he and department officials have proposed over the past year.

The changes would incorporate in the act the "new philosophy" of unemployment insurance that the minister told the Commons in March, 1966, he was seeking. Among them are:

—A sizable increase in benefits, which now are $53 a week at most for a man with a family;

—An indefinite extension of the benefit period beyond the present limit of 51 weeks, in fact a guaranteed income;

—Inclusion in the plan of all members of the work force who are not self-employed;

—Payment of benefits to women on maternity leave from their work.

Mr. Mackasey outlined most of his proposals while presenting estimates of the unemployment insurance commission to the Commons labor department last month. Carefully noting that he was not stating government policy, the minister said his plan was to use the 30-year-old insurance scheme as a major weapon against poverty.

Before drafting the white paper, the labor department discussed its proposals with provincial governments and solicited opinions from business, labor and welfare groups. Mr. Mackasey sounded out Liberal MPs for their feelings.

Still to be heard from are 1,200,000 workers, most earning more than the present ceiling of $7,800 a year, who could be taken into the plan for the first time. The minister, however, has already braced himself.

"I'm prepared to take a lot of flak from those who say we consider unemployment insurance a kind of tax or something they'll never need for themselves," he told the Commons committee.

Any tendency in that universality is not only desirable, it's logical, he said.

Universality is perhaps a prerequisite for any increase in the benefits paid out by the fund. Its balance now stands at just under $580,000,000 but it would be drained within five years if unemployment continued at the current rate.

Offers Withdrawn To Striking Carpenters

KINGSTON (CP) — The Kingston Builders Exchange withdrew all contract offers to striking area carpenters Monday after union rejection of a contract offer.

Ernest Capido, chairman of the exchange's negotiating committee, said earlier that the union had been given this ultimatum in writing last Friday.

Securities Firms Want Foreigners Kept Out

TORONTO (CP) — A closure to further foreign investment in the Canadian securities industry has been recommended by a committee selected from the industry.

The study released Monday proposed that Canadian securities firms be allowed to seek some outside investment but said decision-making should remain with Canadians.

Other recommendations include:

—Canadian securities firms should not be allowed to be publicly owned.

—Regulations concerning raising capital should be liberalized.

—Brokerage houses should be financially controlled by persons actively engaged in the business.

The year-long study, done by a seven-member committee under chairman Trevor Moore, was commissioned by the Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Canadian stock exchanges and the "Investment Dealers' Association of Canada.

It covered the scope of operations of the 182 firms listed with the four exchanges—including 15 foreign-controlled firms which last year collected 11 per cent of the commissions.

Defining the investment industry as a "key sector" of the economy, it said it found no other country where foreign-controlled firms held a preponderant interest in the securities industry.

The committee was formed in mid-1966 after the United States firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc. acquired Royal Securities Corp. Ltd., a long-established Canadian investment dealer.

Mr. Moore, a retired senior vice-president of Imperial Oil Ltd., told a news conference following release of the report that the committee concluded that the investment industry now has sufficient capital resources.

But the committee recommended "the use of outside capital for those firms which can justify the need." The report said outside capital from "well-proved investors" should be permitted to a maximum of 49 per cent of the firms' invested capital.

"Approved investors" would be those approved by the bodies regulating the exchanges and should be individuals, not corporations. The controlling influences o n a corporation were often not easily identifiable.

The Canadian firms listed with the four exchanges had a total net worth of about $180,000,000, the report said. The parent firms of the 13 U.S. subsidiaries operating in Canada had total net worth of about $393,000,000.

Kierans Wants Canadian Role in Computers

OTTAWA (CP) — The questions whether and how common services such as Bell Canada and Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Telecommunications should get into the computer business are being sent to the Commons transport committee for a public airing.

Communications Minister Eric Kierans Monday tabled in the Commons a study by his department that says a decision is urgent and offers a number of options to "constrain" market forces before Canada is dominated by American giants such as IBM and General Electric.

Mr. Kierans said at a news conference that the report, before which the paper was placed during the winter, felt the public doesn't understand what is involved. It wanted a public debate.

The paper says the computer industry last year had a $650,000,000 investment in Canada that may grow tenfold by 1980, making the industry Canada's third-largest. The computer eventually would become as common as the telephone and make fundamental changes in society.

With foreign ownership already heavy, Canadian computer firms were floundering because of lack of capital, the current economic slowdown, and uncertainty about federal policy.

Mr. Kierans, saying he hopes the transport committee will make its report next Fall, described this uncertainty as one factor that makes a cabinet decision a matter of urgency. Others were:

—The fact that the government already has let CN-CP enter a field in which there is no policy;

—Formation in the U.S. of computer utilities by giants such as Western Union, with the prospect of them overwhelming the Canadian market.

Mr. Kierans said he has told the telephone companies he hopes they will make their case to the committee.

An aide said the feeling is that Canada is about the only domestic company big enough to give Canada a strong foothold in home control.

The paper says sovereignty could be threatened and the Canadian culture submerged if the north-south axis of the industry continued to develop.

Other dangers of the unrestrained computer were erosion of personal privacy and diminution of personal contacts. Cash would become obsolete and millions of face-to-face transactions would go with it.

Prosecutor Faces Hearing for Contempt

LOS ANGELES (CP) — The chief prosecutor in the Sharon Tate murder case faced a contempt-of-court hearing today on defence charges that he violated a judicial order by giving a published pre-trial interview.

The hearing for Deputy District Attorney Vincent T. Bugliosi was scheduled before the opening of the murder-conspiracy trial.

'Oversight' Jeopardized Apollo 13

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special review board accused the United States space agency Monday of "a succession of lapses" in equipping the Apollo 13 spacecraft with inadequately protected switches that it said led to the ship's near-disastrous explosion on the moon.

The board report, concluding two months of extensive investigation, also was critical of the design of the oxygen tanks that ruptured, specifically for the location of electrical components inside the pressure vessel.

The explosion, 205,000 miles from earth during the April space flight, endangered the lives of three astronauts and ruined man's third attempt to walk on the moon.

The board recommended several design changes for future flights, including the removal of electrical components and combustible materials from inside the oxygen tanks and rigorous testing and qualification of the re-designed system.

In anticipation that changes would have to be made, the space agency earlier postponed the three-man Apollo 14 moon-landing flight two months until Dec. 3 next.

Board chairman Edgar Cortright presented the report to Dr. Thomas O. Paine, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A number of factors contributed to the presence of the inadequate switches in the tanks' assembly, the board said. "The original 1963 specifications from North American Rockwell to Beech Aircraft Corporation for the tank and heater assembly specified the use of 28 volts DC power.

"In 1965, North American Rockwell issued a revised specification which stated that the heater should be used at 65 volt DC power supply for tank pressurization. Beech ordered the switches for the tanks but did not change the switch specification to be compatible with 65 volts DC."

"The thermostatic switch discrepancy was not detected by NASA, North American Rockwell, or Beech in their review of its documentation, nor did these tests identify the incompatibility of the switches with the use at the Kennedy space centre since neither qualification nor acceptance testing required switch cycling under load as should have been done.

"It was a serious oversight in which all parties shared."

Six New Municipalities Suggested at Sudbury

SUDBURY (CP) — Establishment of six new municipalities governed by a regional council was recommended Monday in a report to regional government for the Sudbury area made public by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

The report, prepared by J. A. Kennedy, chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board, notes there is strong opposition to any regional government which would deprive local areas of a decision on police and fire protection, water, sewage and other facilities and "other distinctly local services."

As a result, Mr. Kennedy recommends that only a limited number of responsibilities, be transferred to a regional council, including planning, building standards, licensing, health and social services and capital borrowing.

The report urges municipal councils and other local government bodies to study the report carefully and to submit their comments to Mr. Kennedy by Sept. 15.

The report recommends that a further review of local government in the 1,300-square-mile area be initiated after the system Mr. Kennedy proposes has been in operation for three years.

In the meantime, to protect the interests of those persons concerned who showed "relatively little support" for the two-tier system of government proposed, local councils would be able to appeal to the provincial government against unpopular decisions of the regional council.

Several mayors, reeves and councillors of municipalities affected by the report were present as Mr. McKeough outlined the report, which means 1½ years in preparation.

The six new municipalities recommended are:

—A city of 94,000 population to be formed by amalgamating Cooper Cliff and the townships of Broder and Snider with Sudbury.

—A township with a population of about 17,500 to be formed by the merger of the town of Levack, the improvement district of Onaping and the townships of Dowling, Cartier, Levack, Trill, Fairbank and Cascaden.

—A township with a population of about 13,000 to be formed by uniting the townships of Balfour, Rayside, Snyder and Lumsden.

—A township with a population of 17,000 to be formed through the merger of the town of Capreol with the townships of Valley East, Norman and the southern half of Hutton.

—A township with a population of about 13,000 formed from the town of Chelmsford and the townships of Falconbridge, Neelon, Garson, Dryden, Cleland, MacLellan and Scadding.

Tradeau and Bennett Open Deepsea Harbor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier W. A. C. Bennett joined hands to start conveyor belts rolling at the new Roberts Bank deepsea port Monday and the first of more than $1,000,000 worth of Canadian coal poured into the hold of a bulk carrier bound for Japan.

From the port, 7,500,000 tons of low volatile coking coal from southeastern British Columbia will be shipped to Japan over the next 18 years for less money — a little more than $2 a ton — than coal from its own mines.

About 1,000 invited guests braved a persistent drizzle to hear the prime minister praise the national and international co-operation that went into the port project, calling it "a tribute to human imagination and ingenuity."

Mr. Trudeau said he was "a bit staggered" by the magnitude of the work involved in the port, representative of the kind of federal-provincial co-operation people like Premier Bennett and Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan have insisted upon.

B. C. Towboat Dispute Settled

VANCOUVER (CP) — The West Coast forestry industry slowly returned to operation Monday following settlement of the five-week towboat dispute, but the Canadian Merchant Service Guild continued to pay a heavy price for its action in the dispute.

Mr. Justice James Macdonald of the British Columbia Supreme Court fined the guild $52,000 Monday for what he termed "utter contempt of the law" in defying an injunction banning picketing at Ocean Seawolfe of Vancouver, a division of Canadian Forest Products Ltd.

Mr. Justice Macdonald ruled there an apology made earlier by Robert Cook of Ottawa, national president of the guild, came "too late."

He said the picketing had ceased, not in obedience to the law, but simply because the dispute was settled.

He ordered the guild the total fines imposed on the guild as a result of contempt-of-court actions from the strike.

Two weeks ago, Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm fined the guild $5,000 and sentenced its chief negotiator, Capt. Arnie Davis, to six months in jail for contempt of an anti-picketing injunction. He was released last Friday on $1,000 bail pending an appeal to be heard June 21.

Mr. Justice Macdonald ruled Monday contempt actions are still to be heard.

The strike came to an end Saturday after the guild and the B.C. Towboat Owners Association accepted a package proposal providing for compounded wages increases of 7.5 per cent over three years and new manning and accommodation clauses plus improvement in safety regulations.

About 1,150 engineers, masters and mates went on strike May 3 and the dispute methodically strangled the forest industry where some 20,000 men in logging camps, sawmills and pulp mills were made idle.

German Envoy Free, Unharmed

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters) — Ehrenfried von Hollenben, West Germany ambassador to Brazil, was free today after guerrillas who kidnapped him Thursday released him on a Rio de Janeiro street Tuesday night.

The ambassador stepped from a Volkswagen in front of his house in the seaside suburb of Gloria just before midnight Tuesday night, after being held more than 125 hours in a secret hideout by his kidnapers. He was released after 40 Brazilian political prisoners were flown to freedom in Algeria Monday.

He looked tired from his five-day ordeal following his kidnaping last week after a two-minute gunbattle. As he went through the gate into the garden, his wife Isa embraced him. His two sons flew here from West Germany after the kidnapping.

He arrived in the car of Sergio de Costa Apolinari, a Portuguese lawyer, who recognized von Hollenben and picked him up in the north Rio suburb of Tijuca.

This was in the same area where U.S. Ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick was freed in September after being held by guerrillas for 77 hours.

Von Hollsben, 58, was driven around for an hour in a car by his captors before they released him. West German sources said.

The release came amid conflicting rumors, including one from a caller who said von Hollsben would be freed in Sao Paulo. The rumors were believed part of a ruse by the guerrillas to ensure their safe getaway after dumping him.

Von Hollsbsben's kidnapping was one of the most daring terrorist actions of the clandestine Popular Revolutionary Vanguard organizations, reported to be led by Brazil's top urban guerrilla chief, Carlos Lamarca, 33-year-old former army captain.

The two previous diplomatic kidnappings here were of unescorted diplomats—Elbrick and Japanese Consul Nobuo Okuchi in March.

Von Hollsben's kidnapping plunged the diplomatic corps here into a turmoil of apprehension since it proved that even a police escort is unable to ensure their security against determined guerrilla attacks.

Police Guard Shulman

TORONTO (CP) — A member of the Ontario legislature left the house with a police bodyguard Tuesday night after saying his investigations into alleged Mafia influence in the province had resulted in a threat on his life.

Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) said he had been informed by police that the Mafia, or Cosa Nostra, "had given a contract for my death."

As a result, he was dropping his investigations which he said now had become the responsibility of the legislature.

He indicated the threat was a result of his statement to a legislature committee June 4 of an alleged connection between suspected Canadian Mafiosi, a prominent Ontario businessman with a criminal record and senior officers of the provincial police.

He also disclosed that a libel suit had been lodged against him as a result of a letter he wrote to Attorney-General Arthur Wishart last fall asking for investigation of two prominent Toronto men concerning "possible infiltration of suspect money into legitimate Ontario businesses."

Replying to Dr. Shulman's demands for a full inquiry into these matters, Mr. Wishart said he would make a full statement to the house in due course on the results of continuing investigations.

Statement of a death threat against Dr. Shulman was confirmed by Mr. Wishart and by Bernard Simmons, deputy chief of the Metropolitan Toronto police.

Both officials said police became aware of the threat, in the form of a letter to a minor, at the deputy chief put it. However, it added, there was no proof of a Mafia conclusion.

Dr. Shulman has been under police guard since Saturday when he returned from a week-long trip to Europe. Donald MacDonald, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, had said previously his colleague was visiting Sicily to pursue a lead in his investigations.

Dr. Shulman made only one reference to the trip in his statement, and that was to say that on his return from Europe he found that police had visited his home during his absence and told his wife of the death threat.

He said his family was terrified and "I do not feel that I can continue to take part in any Mafia investigation."

Bon Voyage on A Bad Day

Monarchist Chapter Formed By 500 at Ottawa Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — With a stirring call to rally around the monarchy, well over 500 people turned out in an Ottawa hotel Tuesday night to form a chapter of the Monarchist League of Canada.

The average age of the participants was somewhat higher than you would get at your normal basketball game, but the enthusiasm was roughly the same.

And while the league is billed as politically non-partisan, the Trudeau government took its lumps from the main speaker, Robert C. Coates (PC-Cumberland-Colchester North.)

Mr. Coates accused the Trudeau government "and the Pearson government before it" of regarding "royal" as a dirty word and "undermining the form of government we have today."

To rousing cheers from the audience — about 75 per cent women — Mr. Coates said that the whittling away of Canada's traditions and heritage must be stopped. He referred to the replacement of "the Dominion Observatory time signal" by the "National Research time signal," broadcast by the CBC and said there is a move afoot to change the name of Dominion Day to something else.

"If the Grits had it their way they'd call it Trudeau Day."

The Monarchist League of Canada, affiliated with the International Monarchist League, is headed by John Almers, 18, of Montreal, who works in Mr. Diefenbaker's office. He is in the process of organizing local chapters across Canada.

Nader Charges Hospital Mishaps Kill Thousands

DETROIT (CP) — Consumer crusader Ralph Nader said Tuesday that medical societies and hospital administrators are responsible for "covering up" the deaths of thousands of patients annually.

He said the deaths were due to electrocution caused by faulty equipment and improper operation of electric-powered hospital machines.

Speaking at a convention of the American Society of Medical Technologists, Mr. Nader said that "estimates from respected and conscientious physicians and medical technicians run from 1,200 to 2,000 of these accidental electrocution deaths in the United States each year."

Good Thing They Weren't Sentries

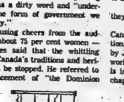
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Appliance dealer Arthur Fitch and Carroll Williamson were tired of break-ins at their establishment. So they armed themselves with rifles, equipped themselves with cots and decided to stand guard.



But they dozed off on the cots. When they awoke, their wallets had been stolen. To make matters worse, the intruder also took their rifles.

News Briefs

TEL AVIV (CP) — Israeli commandos Tuesday night made their first raid into Syria in three months. The raiders penetrated 70 miles into Syria, striking a bridge 40 miles south of Damascus and shelling an army base 49 miles northeast of the capital.

Vital Highway Held by Reds

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops took over part of another provincial capital in Cambodia today and ambushed a Cambodian army force trying to reopen the vital highway between Phnom Penh and the country's only oil refinery, the Cambodian command reported.

Another provincial capital also came under heavy pressure from North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units, a military spokesman said.

Labor Calls Agency Servile

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress met Tuesday with Inflation-fighter John Young, but the two-hour encounter led only to a bitter labor condemnation of the government's proposed six-per-cent ceiling on annual wage increases.

Donald MacDonald, the CLC president, told a following news conference that the meeting with the chairman of the federal prices an incomes commission substantiate labor's conviction that the commission-proposed ceiling is unsoundly based, inequitable and totally unworkable.

Going further, Mr. MacDonald labelled the commission a "servile agency of the government" which had "lost all credibility."

Mr. Young had no comment on the meeting. A source said he was disappointed at the way it went.

The commission released a copy of his comments to the labor leaders. He said labor is having a chance to influence government policy by refusing to take part in the program of price and income restraint.

These and other remarks by Mr. Young prompted Mr. MacDonald to say later that the commission was fostering political divisions in the country. The wage guidelines are the "crassest form of class legislation."

Mr. MacDonald called for a national meeting of government, industry and labor to work towards effective and realistic solution to the problem of inflation.

The commission, in his view, wants labor to make economic sacrifices under longterm labor contracts that no member of the economy is willing to accept.

British Election Campaign Closes on Desperate Note

LONDON (CP) — Britain's 1970 election fight ended on a note of desperation today with Conservative Leader Edward Heath raising the spectre of another currency devaluation and Prime Minister Harold Wilson condemning "this unfounded scare."

And from the north, Enoch Powell loosened another bolt of thunder, saying that the Tory hierarchy had made him an "outcast" with no hope of office if the Tories should win Thursday. His comrades had turned their backs on him, but nevertheless he still pleaded with the electorate to vote Conservative.

Thus the curtain was lowered on a three-week campaign in which issues tended to play second fiddle to personalities and in which an unusually long period of hot sun and the diversions of World Cup soccer matches in Mexico tended to divert the voters' minds from the basic challenge of free enterprise versus socialism.

From the beginning it was an uphill struggle for Heath, who was besieged by a flood of pulse-takers all saying he would be soundly beaten in Thursday's ballot. Towards the end the tide seemed to move a bit towards the Tory leader but The Times today added to his grief with its Marplan poll giving Wilson an 8.7-per-cent margin.

This swing, if matched by the vote, would give Labor a majority of about 150 seats in the 630-seat House of Commons, sharply higher than the 97 margin captured by Wilson in 1966 and more than double the 48 margin at dissolution May 29.

In contrast, the Harris poll published in The Daily Express today gave Labor a margin of only two per cent, down from seven per cent a week ago.

It was anybody's guess how close the polls would be to the actual results, but they have been generally swinging Wilson's way.

Heath, fighting his second campaign against Wilson, continued to say that Tories will win, despite the obvious dissension in his party ranks and the sluggish response to his policies and pledges.

He at times spoke of voter "complacency" as sought to stir Britons from accepting a "little England" life. But though he painted pictures of how a Tory government would reduce taxation and curb government spending, making Britons more self-reliant and energetic, the Wilson concept of security and welfare, linked with prosperity, seemed to capture wider acceptance.

Toward the end, Heath stepped up charges that Wilson was disguising the true state of the economy. A wage explosion would lead to uncontrollable inflation, followed by a new economic squeeze. He seized on new trade figures published for May which showed a deficit for the second month. At his daily news conference Tuesday, Heath issued a statement warning of the probability of another devaluation of the pound.

Wilson said that the desperate Tories, unable to capture votes, were willing to do anything in one last election gamble. They would even provoke an unwanted devaluation scare in the hope of winning votes. Wilson maintained the economy is strong and that the country is still building up big surpluses in its foreign accounts.

CN Trainmen Won't Back Yardmen in Dispute

By LEONT WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Trainmen of local 463 of the United Transportation Union today formally disavowed any association with the leaders of the yardmen, now protesting a union decision affecting their seniority with Canadian National Railways.

The yardmen, now delinquent in their dues to the union, have until 4 p.m. today to pay up or face preference of service — be placed on a spare board for calls to work as needed.

The deadline was set last week by CN management here, in accordance with the railways' contract with UTU.

The yardmen, who switch cars and assemble trains in terminals, have said they would all book sick and refuse to work if the CN placed them on the spare board. About 54 yardmen in Belleville are affected.

Today, in a statement signed by J. W. Knott, president of UTU local 463 here, W. H. Arthurs, treasurer and L. C. Kellett, secretary, the three-man executive said it would not assume responsibility "for any improper action the yardmen may take or have to be taken" against the CN.

"As members of this organization, each of you is expected to honor the contract we have with the railways and continue to perform your duties in the prescribed manner," the local 463 executives' statement read.

"Any individual who participates in an illegal work stoppage is subject to charges under the law and dismissal from the railway. Govern yourselves accordingly," the statement concludes.

Mr. Kellett told The Intelligencer that since trainmen, running crew on make runs, have interchangeable rights with yardmen, the Belleville trainmen will take over switching in the yard if the yardmen book sick after 4 p.m. today. There are 42 trainmen working out of Belleville.

The inter-union feud now splitting the ranks of the UTU dates back to 1962, when the union decided that yardmen would integrate with trainmen and both would have interchangeable rights to seniority. Jobs on the publicly-owned CN are based on seniority and trainmen earn more than yardmen.

According to Albert Lesnini, spokesman for the yardmen here, interchangeable rights, when implemented, were to be made retroactive to 1962.

But last September, the CN signed a contract with union, making interchangeable rights effective in 1969.

As a result, a yardman with as a trainman in early 1969 would be considered senior to a yardman hired in 1970.

"If the interchangeable rights were made retroactive to 1962, we would have eight years seniority," said Mr. Kellett of the trainmen today.

According to Mr. Kellett, under terms of the original decision on interchangeable rights made in 1962, the 1962 date for figuring seniority became null and void if interchangeability were not implemented by 1969.

Mr. Kellett said the yardmen, led by their general chairman in the Central Region, succeeded in having the date of 1962 retained. In a counter move, the trainmen formed the Trainmen's Existence Unit and went through the union to its appeal board in Cleveland. The appeal board upheld the trainmen's demands for date of interchangeability to coincide with date of implementation, thus overruling the earlier decision in favor of the yardmen.

Yardmen of local 488 protested the withdrawal of their union dues, leading to the present impasse.

Albert Lesnini and E. J. Burton, leaders of the yardmen here, could not be reached for comment today.

A Service of Ordination for Wayne Sobie of Hamilton, formerly of Belleville, will be held June 21 in the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church in Belleville. Mr. Sobie, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sobie of Belleville, graduated recently from McMaster Divinity College with his Bachelor of Divinity degree. He was named to the Principal's honor roll. He also holds a honors bachelor of arts degree in English and History from McMaster. In August he and his wife, the former Connie Stowell, will travel to Zurich, Switzerland to study at the Baptist Theological Seminary where Mr. Sobie hopes to obtain his master of theology degree. Mr. and Mrs. Sobie have both graduates of BCVS.

Belleville Family Off to Pakistan

The Belleville family of E. A. Smith will leave July 1 for a two-year assignment that will take them to the east Pakistan capital of Dacca.

Mr. Smith, a supervisor of physics at Loyalist College, has been granted a two-year leave of absence termed by Technology - Division Dean Paul King as "a recognition of his college experience at Loyalist".

Mr. Smith's appointment is that of an assistant project manager for a contract awarded to a Canadian engineering firm in connection with a major power development project.

Part of his job will be to assist and train workers in power systems and maintenance.

He will be under contract to a Niagara Falls firm of consulting engineers which has a joint contract with the Canadian Government's International Affairs Department and the Pakistan Government.

The Smith family plans to return to Belleville on completion of Mr. Smith's assignment. He will then return to the staff of Loyalist.

Lightning Destroys Tweed Area Barn

TWEED (Special) — Tweed area farmer Aloysius Trudeau won't be using the new roofing he recently purchased to re-roof his barn.

This morning, during a severe electrical storm which passed through the district, lightning struck the Trudeau barn, destroying the building, the new roofing and a quantity of hay. No livestock was in the barn.

The Tweed village fire brigade answered the call for, assistance and was able to save the nearby Trudeau home.

Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau left yesterday for a week's holiday in Quebec city and their daughter Ann, a recent nursing graduate from Belleville General Hospital school of nursing, was the only one home.

Ontario Grant For Parkland

TORONTO — A $5,000 provincial government grant for further development work on a 2-acre greenbelt-beach site in Marmora, has been announced by Clarke Rollins, MPP, Hastings South.

The park runs north from Highway 7 along the Crowe River. Plans for its development include service roads, tree-planting and parking areas.

Truck Damaged

TWEED (Special) — Carl Knapp, 43, of RR 2 Godfrey, escaped injury yesterday when his half-ton pickup truck went off Highway 62 and crashed into a rock cut south of Madoc.

The truck, owned by L. N. Weller of Kingston was damaged to the extent of $1,500.

Custodian Promoted

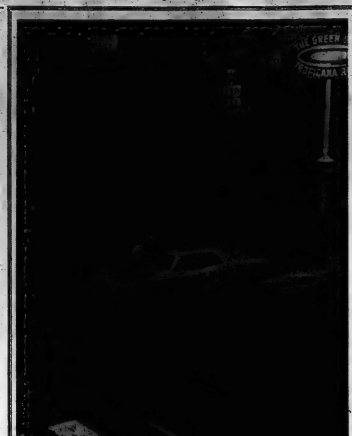
Francis Trumble, head custodian of Centennial Secondary School, will become supervisor of custodians for the Hastings county board of education Aug. 1.

He will replace Milt Robson, present supervisor, who is retiring July 31 after 13 years of service with the Hastings county board and previous boards.

Mr. Trumble was employed by the Bay of Quinte District High School board for nine years and was head custodian of Moira Secondary for three years before going to Centennial.



He is now a satellite supervisor in school board area 4, a position he has held since October, 1969.

Napanee Meeting For Herb Society

The Ontario Branch of the American Herb Society will hold its June meeting at the Allan MacPherson House in Napanee. It was announced this morning.

The meeting, scheduled for June 23, will be preceded by a picnic on the grounds of the house.

The society is visiting the home to inspect the lawns in preparation for a society project to restore them.

By noon a half-inch of rain had fallen in the Belleville area.

The CFB Trenton predicted continuing interm ittent thundershowers today and Thursday.

Last heavy rainfall in the Belleville - Trenton area was May 26.

Welfare Under Budget

Despite increased numbers of people drawing welfare benefits, the county of Hastings for the first four months of the year was "ahead of the game" on expenditures as compared with budget estimates.

County Welfare Administrator Reginald Tucker said today that the over-all county welfare budget for the four-month period January to April 30, was $407,220 while expenditures for the same period amounted to $361,112.

Mr. Tucker said it was hoped that expenditures would be lighter during the summer months with heavier costs expected again late in the year.

Monday evening, during a discussion on welfare matters at city council, Alderman Jack Ireland said that there were 2,000 persons on welfare in Hastings at the end of April. This compares with 1963 for the same period last year.

At the end of April, Belleville had spent 29.6 per cent of its welfare budget; Trenton had spent 28.92, while the county had spent 33.56 per cent.

Welfare costs are not a true barometer of employment as many welfare recipients are unemployables.

However, Mr. Tucker said this year's welfare figures showed an increase in the number of employables.

Of the 2,009 people on welfare at the end of April, 213 were listed as unemployed heads of families while there were 52 employable single people drawing benefits.

This compares with 144 heads of families and 61 single employables at the end of April last year.

Hastings Schools Fully Staffed

County schools will be fully staffed when fall, teachers were told Monday night, despite the alarm earlier this year that teacher hiring would be banned indefinitely.

But Metro Toronto teachers, deadlocked in contract negotiations with their boards, lifted the picket-line last Friday, the Trustees' Council responded by lifting its ban on hiring, announcing the weekend officials of the Hastings county board of education hired 91 of the 95 secondary school teachers they need.

Superintendent of academic services, L. F. Reid, told the board the weekend's accomplishment in Toronto set a record in teacher hiring.

All the teachers hired are fully qualified, many with master's degrees, he said. About 70 per cent are new teachers, just graduated from colleges of education.

All the required 135 elementary school teachers have been hired, Mr. Reid reported, "all highly qualified."

"We will have no elementary school teachers on letters of permission next year," he noted.

Trainable Retarded School Need Is Great

A school for trainable retarded children is urgently needed in the centre Hastings district and shortage of accommodation in the Belleville school is becoming alarming, board of education trustees were told Monday night.

At present, there are 31 probable candidates for a retarded children school in centre Hastings — 21 of them now in regular schools and 10 of them of pre-school age.

The advisory committee on schools for retarded children asked the board to consider providing suitable accommodation in Centre Hastings and to fix a date on which larger accommodation will become available in the Belleville area. Assistant superintendent Frank Tate was instructed to look for temporary, non - school accommodation in centre Hastings for temporary use.

Avondale Public School is slated to be used for retarded children in the Belleville area, and its facilities are badly needed with the William R. Kirk School on John St. now filled to capacity.

The three-room Actinolite Public School will eventually house retarded children, but its use depends upon a school shuffle in the centre of the county.

If and when the S. H. Connor School at Tweed is enlarged or replaced, Actinolite pupils will be bussed to school in Tweed, leaving the Actinolite school available for the retarded.

But the uncertainty at the moment concerning the fate of S. H. Connor school makes it impossible for the board to set a definite date for initiating a program for the retarded in the area.

Mr. Tate gave a tentative date of September, 1971 to January, 1972 for opening of the school.

But trustee Donald Williams of Stirling was dissatisfied with the timing, saying he was unhappy that "the children will have to wait a year."

"None of us here is happy about the situation", responded director of education Eric Runnalls. "We have only begun to scratch the surface of special education and retarded children's needs in Hastings county. This board could hardly solve in 1½ years of existence a problem that has been around a long time. There will have to be a lot of searching of pocketbooks in this county before this problem is resolved."

When accommodation is provided for the centre Hastings retarded children in Actinolite, it will be a joint venture with the Lennox and Addington board. Their pupils from the Cloyne, Northbrook and Kaladar regions would attend the school, along with Hastings county pupils from as far north as Gilmour.

Modern Voyageurs Montreal-bound

Voyageurs dipped their paddles into the Bay of Quinte this morning as they embarked on a 16-day canoe trip to Montreal.

With Lee Westwell, the youngest director of the YMCA, and Donald Carr, a director of the YMCA day camp in command, the sturdy canoe faced a day of rough weather.

It was overcast at the time of embarkation, 8 a.m., and by 9 a heavy rain was pelting down on the Quinte region.

"They'll get wet but the rain won't stop them," Dave Hahn of the Y staff remarked.

There are blocks of foam plastic on the floor of the boat and these will soak up the rain much like a sponge. Mr. Hahn explained that the crew would wring them out and keep going.

Lee Westwell and Don Carr intend to cover at least 30 miles a day as they ply their way down the historic Quinte-St. Lawrence waterway.

The YMCA voyageurs have an advantage over their fur-trading predecessors from the distant past. They did not face the necessity of stocking the canoe with a great bulk of provisions.

The crew has a two-day supply of provisions and will replenish stocks by pulling in to shore and going to supermarkets.

However, the youths will do their own cooking and pitch a tent for their accommodation.

The highlight of their voyage will be their reception at Man and His World, which is already arranged.

Several patrons have pledged money to the voyageurs on a mile-for-money basis, in the same fashion as a walkathon pledge. Proceeds will go to Belleville Family YMCA.

If the ambition of the voyageurs has anything to do with their success, the two young men will be received by the people of Montreal within the next two weeks.

David L. Brisbin, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Brisbin, Ottawa, Ont. received his Bachelor of Law degree at Queen's University convocation June 6, 1970. He is a graduate of BCIVS. David and his wife Margaret will reside in Hamilton, Ont.

Rainfall Will Help Berries

This morning's rainfall may not have been general throughout the Quinte district but area strawberry growers will see it as helping to extend the season.

First locally grown strawberries appeared Saturday on the Belleville farmers' market and were quickly snapped up at 75 cents per box.

Tuesday greater quantities were in evidence and the price had dropped to 60 cents.

But Earl Onderdonk, of Redeersville, long time county berry grower said unless there was rain this year's crop would be of short duration.

"We need rain badly," said Mr. Onderdonk.

Minor Injuries On Dealer's Lot

A Belleville man sustained minor injuries yesterday afternoon when his car collided with a vehicle while driving on the Elliott Motors lot.

Paul Douglas Bolten, 21, of RR 3 Belleville sustained cuts to his face and a sore right knee when his car collided with a second vehicle driven by David William Cass, 19, of Dufferin avenue.

The incident occurred at 1.40 yesterday afternoon.

Man with the Slides

J. M. Porter, president of the Sheridan College of Applied Arts and Technology, shows some slides to illustrate his information about his Oakville school.

College President Describes School

J. M. Porter, president of Sheridan College of Applied Arts, was on hand as guest speaker last night at the annual meeting of the Quinte Arts Council at Centennial Secondary School.

Mr. Porter outlined the aspirations, success and history of the new school in Oakville for the members present.

He said that the idea of the college was "to train people to become artists of some kind".

"Our program in art is mainly directed toward careers," he said.

He told of the school's organizers, himself included, who travelled throughout many of the world's countries to see other schools of art and to relate the plans of Sheridan College.

The next step was the introduction of the visual arts segment of the school.

"We're finding out that art has no boundaries. It's becoming a very mixed up and involved thing," he said.

He spoke of the photography, art and communication boards in the visual arts section of the institution.

Mr. Porter outlined the introduction of the crafts section of the school, explaining that the Ontario Crafts Foundation had recommended a school to the government.

Subsequent location of an area for such a school led the foundation to Brampton and to Sheridan College.

Ceramics, jewellery, furniture, and textiles are the main subjects taught in the crafts section of the school.

"The aim of the program is to get in touch with manufacturers, allowing people to become craftsmen," he said.

Mr. Porter also mentioned that the school was slowly trying to get into music, television arts and drama.

He utilized several slides to describe the school, its students and its programs.

Boys Adopt Baby Coons

It's raccoon time in Hastings county!

Several families in the Belleville area have mischievous young raccoons as pets but a Canniffon family has gone all out in providing a home for the animals.

Kevin and Greg Dahlfie befriended three baby coons after their mother had been killed near their cottage at Tweed.

They brought the playful young animals home and with the help of milk bottles are raising them as pets.

"They even hold the bottles themselves," reminisced the Dahlfie boys as they told The Intelligencer of their pets.

Strong Link Between Arts and Education Seen by Speaker

The Quinte Arts Council closed another season as far as administration is concerned last night with its annual meeting at Centennial Secondary School.

On hand as guest speaker was J. M. Porter, president of the Sheridan College of Applied Arts and Technology.

Murray Irwin, president of the council, reminded the members that everywhere artistic activity, creative activity, is becoming more apparent.

He was delivering his president's report.

"Since what is happening in the arts is undoubtedly linked to the tremendous expansion of educational opportunities, it is not surprising that education and the arts are becoming increasingly linked in men's thinking that the arts are moving toward the centre of education and away from the periphery," he said.

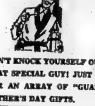
Mr. Irwin described the association between the Quinte Arts Council and the Hastings County Board of Education as a "happy one."

He also rehashed some of the year's activities of the council, commenting on the Youth Music Committee, the Youth Art Workshop and the "Flight to Flint" project.

He suggested that the council must work to involve more people actively in the function of the council.

"We must seek to involve in executive and other leadership roles people who enthusiastically support the arts but are not themselves active participants in any one art.

"We must involve men of business and industry in the council; we need their organizational skills and financial acumen.



"We need to broaden contextually our horizons so that we seek always to serve every segment of the community," he said.

"And we must work to create a strong financial base so that the council has the means and the authority to assist, encourage and stimulate the arts throughout the Quinte Region."

UK Vote Tomorrow

Seldom has a great political party in Britain — or any other country for that matter — faced the last few days of election campaigning with such ominous signs of defeat.

Briefly, the word is that barring some unexpected shift in public opinion, the Labor party will be returned tomorrow with an even bigger majority. Opinion polls give Labor with a lead of as much as 12 per cent. For the Conservatives, defeat is all too real a possibility.

Rather than issues, the outcome of the election hinges largely on the contrasting images projected by Prime Minister Wilson and Conservative leader Edward Heath.

Wilson is a clever and experienced politician who also has more rapport with the average voter than his opponent. Heath is a man of integrity and an excellent administrator, but he is also shy and ill at ease with what one observer has described as the "trumpery of political campaigning."

Compounding this disadvantage, Heath's chances and those of the party he leads are being hamstrung still further by the racial extremism of Enoch Powell who for years has been campaigning against admitting colored immigrants to Britain and whom Heath is powerless to silence. For one thing Powell enjoys a considerable measure of support and furthermore is believed aiming for the party leadership which Heath is almost certain to lose in the event of a Conservative defeat.

If Labor does win, as seems likely, it will be on the strength not only of Wilson's dominant personality and political acumen. Their victory will stem also from the country's greatly improved economic showing and international trading position. Britain in the last few years has gone far toward repaying its debts and balancing its books. With such an embarrassment of riches the Wilson government's only worry now may be too big a majority, for this can be as much a hindrance as one that is too slight. But that is another story.

Senators' Duties

It is fashionable if one thinks much about the Senate at all to regard it as perhaps an anachronism, something existing out of its time, of little consequence to the working affairs of the nation, at best an institution for parliamentarians who have been "kicked upstairs," at worst a chamber which indulges in mere talk and occasionally sleep — and not infrequently in one of those overseas junkets that are made at taxpayers' expense.

A study of the record of Senate debates however reveals much more. For example, Senator Muriel Fergusson of Fredericton recently described two overseas visits she made with the Annual Non-Governmental Trade and Goodwill Mission. The missions were composed of alumni of the Banff School of Advanced Management.

After giving details of visits to women's prisons in Czechoslovakia (where inmates are paid for the work they do, thus avoiding the necessity of placing their families on welfare), Poland, Iran, Japan, Australia and New Zealand, Mrs. Fergusson made this interesting observation on the tasks and responsibilities of a senator:

"As I said before, the fact that a Canadian senator (the group was led by Senator Donald Cameron of Banff) is leader of the group opens many doors, but that same fact also places certain responsibilities and obligations on the group. Although each person defrays his or her expenses entirely, the fact that the group is led by a senator gives it a semi-official standing in the eyes of the citizens of another country. All members of the group are conscious of this, and certainly on the two trips I took with them they conducted themselves as to leave a good impression of Canada. They are 'excellent ambassadors for Canada.'"

Senator Fergusson went on to describe how in Turkey their hosts asked if the Canadian group would like to place a wreath at a mausoleum commemorating the Turkish nationalist leader Ataturk.

"The floral piece necessarily had to be large enough to be suitable as a gift from Canada and we all gladly paid our share for it. I mention this merely to show that, as Canadians, we found we had responsibilities in many countries as well as many privileges. I am told that a similar presentation of flowers was made by the 1970 group when they visited Hiroshima."

Here then, from the lips of a Fredericton senator, we are afforded some insight into the workings of the upper chamber and of the jobs its members perform in absorbing information overseas that may be useful at home, and as ambassadors for our country. Far removed perhaps from the heat and battle of the Commons, but nevertheless an indispensable part of our democratic system.

Nixon Contemptuous of Wage-Price Controls

WASHINGTON (CP) — Given the intertwining of the United States and Canadian economies, it seems a good bet that many Canadians will be as interested as Americans in President Nixon's long-awaited and much-heralded report Wednesday on the health of the U.S. economy.

The fact that he has been talking about giving such a talk for weeks gives some indication of the uncertainty within the Nixon administration over just what he should say.

But the wagering among most economic observers is that he won't say much, and that he will not look to wage and price guidelines, the route Canada chose in seeking a way out of her inflationary dilemma.

From the early days of his presidency more than 18 months ago, Nixon has seldom lost an opportunity to display his contempt — not only for formal wage-price controls but even the voluntary-guidelines variety

Shoe Workers, Management Combine in Appeal to Ottawa

A two-man labor delegation left Belleville for Ottawa today seeking government action against foreign shoe imports.

Lodging the protest are Robert Andrus, president of the Quinte District Labor Council and Ian Reilly, regional representative of the Boot and Shoe Workers Union.

Both men left after a meeting this morning with Lee-Grills, MP, Hastings.

On arrival in Ottawa they plan first to call on George Hees, MP, Prince Edward-Hastings.

Topic of discussion is the threat to local shoe workers posed by a mounting volume of foreign-made shoes being imported into Canada.

The labor council last week assumed the defence of local workers, warning that the situation could leave a large segment of the Quinte labor force out of work.

The Ottawa delegation is one in a series of moves being organized by the council on behalf of shoe workers.

Last week the council warned it was considering picketing stores selling imported shoes, hoping to attract more public involvement in a situation threatening about 1,000 workers. Mr. Andrus estimated.

(The shoe workers' local at the Bata plant at Batawa has 325 members — the largest in Canada; Bata has smaller operations in Picton and Campbellford. Eldon Footwear at Stirling employs about 200.)

The picketing now has been set for July 4.

Leaflets drafted by the labor council appeal to workers to stop buying imported footwear. A meeting of politicians and labor leaders is planned for July 4 — likely in Belleville.

Today's Ottawa visit is not the first contact government has had with the situation.

Mr. Reilly said government had been approached several times since 1967.

"The government has a responsibility to these people, particularly the older ones," he said.

"There wouldn't be a problem today if the government had established a quota system when this importation started in quantity in 1967.

"If the government isn't going to do something, they should tell us and we'll go to look for work somewhere else — if there is any," said Mr. Reilly.

Stan Middleton, president of the Bata union local said the shoe workers were "fighting for our bread and butter."

The issue was touched off publicly by a Bata Shoe advertisement in The Intelligencer which advertised 10 per cent discount on imported shoes. A labor councillor estimated about 400 styles were advertised.

"You mean to tell me that they couldn't have made some of these 400 shoe styles here?" asked Mr. Middleton.

The Shoe Manufacturers Association of Canada has called for changes in government policy.

In a submission in April to the federal government, the association claimed that "low wages are the single, most important force behind the flood of footwear imports".

It calls for easing of duty on components used by Canadian shoe manufacturers; import controls and a correction of federal sales tax applications.

Import taxes, said the brief, are based on market value in countries of origin — giving low-wage areas a definite advantage over Canadian producers.

Among statistics cited are those for the period between 1956 and 1968.

In this period Canada's population increased by 8,300,000 (33 per cent) while Canadian footwear production decreased by 816,000 pairs (one per cent). Footwear imports increased by 39,200,000 pairs (569 per cent).

Further, the decline in Canadian leather footwear was most evident late in 1969 and January of this year. The association claims the situation will worsen.

In terms of "Market share", Canadian footwear production fell from 88.7 per cent in 1956 to 55 per cent in 1969. It is expected to drop to 50 per cent this year and under 50 per cent in 1971.

Noting that "jobs shouldn't be sacrificed in unfair wage competition", the submission claims that Canadian productivity in the footwear industry is 25 per cent higher than its countries belonging to the European Common Market.

"In 1968, each Canadian footwear employee produced an average of 3,000 pairs of footwear similar to that imported," the submission asserts.

"Thus, the 46.1 million pairs imported in 1969 were equivalent to the loss and exportation of a minimum of 15,000 job opportunities," the submission emphasizes.

Tweed Students Give Musical

TWEED (Special) — An ambitious musical undertaking by S. H. Connor Public School in Tweed has showcased the talent of senior pupils in a production of J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan."

The production, directed by Mrs. Clive Kingston and David Weir, was given in public performance two nights recently.

Musicals, as a form of school year wrap-up, are becoming increasingly popular in Hastings schools. The S. H. Connor production is the third such performance to be given this spring, the others being presented by Belleville schools.

Although staff and parents have assisted with the production, the major part of the responsibility for the play rested with the pupils.

Art classes prepared the sets and backstage work was also handled by the pupils.

Local Liberals Meet Prime Minister Trudeau

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, and George Cunningham, Hastings-Prince Edward Liberal candidate for the next federal election are surrounded by group of riding Liberal Association ladies outside parliament buildings at Ottawa. About 120 riding association women made the trip to the nation's capital, with many meeting the prime minister personally.

Papers Presented To Trent Library

Dr. Mary Northway and, Miss Flora Morrison, both of Toronto, presented Peterborough's Trent University Bata Library with sets of papers of historical interest on Monday, June 15.

The Morrison papers, are a set of pioneer letters dating back to 1840, describing pioneer life in the Weller's Bay area of Prince Edward County and the Carrying Place district.

The Northway papers, were business and personal correspondence between John Northway, founder of the Northway department stores which existed between 1903 and the early 1960's in the Toronto area, and his son A. G. Northway and granddaughter Dr. Northway.

Receiving the gifts, T. H. B. Symons, president and vice - chancellor of Trent University, commented "much of Canada's history is mirrored by commercial records and these are thus of great interest to historians, economists, sociologists and others."

PRIVATE PUNISHMENT

Number of City Women Enter Men's Domain

Editor's Note:

This is the first of a series spotlighting 10 women of Belleville who hold positions usually held by men. Women's reporter Nancy Hastings interviewed women in this category and has come up with some interesting personalities to their positions.

By NANCY HASTINGS
Women's Reporter

Belleville too has its share of ambitious women who desire a challenge in the business world. Four of these women were interviewed: Mrs. Marg. Cooke, manager of La Page Real Estate; Mrs. Shirley Woodcock, manager of W. T. Hawkins Limited; Dr. Joan Bronskill, research scientist at the Research Institute and Mrs. Stella Culhane, manager of the Belle Theatre. All of these women have something in common — they hold positions usually held by men.

First of these is Dr. Joan F. Bronskill, one of the 24 research scientists at the Research Institute, Canada Department of Agriculture in Belleville, searching for non-polluting methods of reducing agricultural losses caused by insects and weeds. She is unique in that she is the only female research scientist.

Essentially there are three possible ways to approach the problem. First one can reduce a pest's rate of increase by imposing a kind of birth control. That, the process of insect reproduction is studied to see how one can interfere with it. Or secondly, the pest's death rate can be increased by the manipulation of non - chemical factors or by the use of selective non-persistent chemicals. For example, in the former case, the natural enemies of pests, their predators, parasites and diseases are studied. Often, the most effective enemy of a pest occurs outside Canada and has to be brought here. The Belleville Institute is the national centre for the importation and quarantine of natural enemies of pests.

The third way is by learning why a plant or animal is attractive to a pest so then, by changing it to make it unattractive, the victim is protected from attack. This aspect of victim protection examines a greater understanding of the food preference of pests.

Dr. Bronskill did her graduate work at Cornell University in insect histology and embryology and since receiving her Ph.D. degree in 1955 has been involved in several research projects at the Institute concerned with the first two methods of approach for insect control discussed above.

Her work has included studies on parasite and pest insects at the tissue level in order to learn whether the pest insects are susceptible to parasites imported specifically to cause mortality because it is known that a defense reaction against the parasite can occur in species of pest insects in this reaction can eventually cause parasite mortality which then permits normal development of the host.

In 1967 Dr. Bronskill's research took a different phase when she was asked to do cellular structure of the female sex attractant glands in several species of lepidopterous orchard pests at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, Cornell University. The work was done in conjunction with research being conducted by Dr. Wendell Roelofs, organic chemist at that establishment, on the isolation, identification and synthesis of the sex attractant material produced by these glands.

Recently Dr. Bronskill began to work on a project with Dr. Robert Bodnaryk, another research scientist at the Belleville Institute who is investigating biochemically the effect of anti-tanning agents on insects. She is studying how the anti-tanning agents affect the internal tissues and organs of the insect during metamorphosis. Anti-tanning agents will affect a large number of economically important insects and could possibly be useful as non-polluting chemicals for the control of such pests.

Her research has also involved the making of a movie on a specific insect by time-lapse cinemaphotography with the assistance of Charles Beeton. This film has since been used as a teaching aid in developmental biology courses at several Canadian and American universities.

Dr. Bronskill has published results of her research in Canadian and American scientific journals and has reported on it at International Congresses of Entomology held in Vienna (1960), London (1964) and Moscow, (1968).

Club Discusses Food Habits

Mrs. F. Henderson led in a discussion on "Food Habits" at the June meeting of the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club held in the Recreation Centre recently with 28 members and one visitor present.

It was noted during the business session that Mrs. Clare Storrs sent in a donation of $5 to the club, and that Mrs. M. Welch is a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Mrs. M. McGowan is reported to be seriously ill in Hastings Manor.

Discussion took place on the July bus trip and it was decided to go to Peterborough July 8 and leave at 10 a.m. from the Recreation Centre. A trip to Toronto is being planned for August 12.

In charge of the program was group four under Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. F. Way.

Britain's Tourist Industry May Have Record Year

LONDON (CP) — The year 1970 is shaping up as a record one for Britain's tourist industry.

But the glee of local businessmen and government officials about the resulting benefits to the national economy is being tempered with warnings about what may happen if development of extra accommodations doesn't match the rising tide of visitors.

And some Britons say they fear the outcome for their green and pleasant land even if the accommodations challenge is successfully met.

Last year this country played host to 3,500,000 foreign tourists. The figure for 1970 is expected to reach 4,000,000.

...Lord Mancroft, head of the London Tourist Board, is fearful that the foreign flood may place heavy strains on the traditional friendliness of Britons towards visitors from overseas.

Mancroft is all the more worried in this respect because the friendliness is itself a big tourist asset for Britain.

He says that last year a number of visitors found the locals resentful over being squeezed out of London theatres and hotels by the influx of foreigners.

This year the tourist tide is so great that in some cases Londoners arrive at their accustomed restaurants only to find them almost totally filled with busloads of hungry, strident-voiced and garishly attired sightseers.

Mancroft wants efforts made to avoid having armies of tourists arriving in Britain at the same time.

In addition to the staggering of such arrivals, he seeks new ways of steering visitors off the beaten—and chronically congested—tourist track formed by London, Oxford, Stratford on Avon and Edinburgh.

Meanwhile the scramble is on to increase British hotel accommodations.

An extra 18,000 beds, half of them in London, will be available to tourists this summer, double the growth rate set last year.

The capital's new facilities include two big hotels. Another 30 are scheduled to start business in London before 1973.

Yet Mancroft finds all this "too little and too late," especially with tourist traffic—swollen by introduction of jumbo-jet flights across the Atlantic—expected to hit 10,000,000 a year by 1975.

The London tourist chief's idea for staggering tourists' arrivals met with expressions of editorial skepticism from The Daily Telegraph.

The newspaper doubts too whether his plan for greater dispersal of tourists once they get here will be kindly received by the visitors themselves.

"The only practical solution is to press on with the building of hotels and with propaganda in favor of some of our more neglected glories," says The Telegraph.

However, the idea of wholesale hotel-building across the country is by no means to the taste of everyone in Britain.

Plans for a luxury hotel at Stratford, glitteringly geared to the tastes of American visitors, left some lovers of Shakespeare's birthplace appalled.

For connoisseurs of London, where a number of cherished landmarks already have fallen victim to the wrecker's hammer, the vision of new demolition projects designed to make way for more tourist hotels and motorways is a nightmare.

Even the present level of tourist traffic is enough to "make the spirits droop," writes columnist J. W. M. Thompson in the weekly magazine The Spectator.

"I say this not out of any xenophobic prejudice but because I don't see how this small, grossly overcrowded island can accommodate such a vast influx of holiday-makers without paying a severe price," said Thompson.

In addition to the Stratford hotel project and demolitions at various points around London, The Spectator's columnist sees this price as including "a swamping addition to native traffic in places already sorely congested, an upgrading of restaurant prices and a downgrading of comfort, and much more besides."

Reflected in his comments is a widespread dislike among Britons and other nationalities that a country should become economically dependent on tourism, particularly in an age when that industry involves mechanized conveyance of carefully regimented droves of humanity along standardized sightseeing routes.

"Could there be a ladder end to this rough island story than to dwindle into a processing point along Route 2775 of Gadarene Tours Inc.?" Thompson asks.

Computer Measures Hearing Capabilities of Newborn

MONTREAL (CP) — An experiment designed to feed sounds to a new-born infant via computer to measure his hearing capabilities may some day lead to an effective method of detecting and preventing deafness, says a leading medical expert.

Dr. Daniel Ling of the Royal Victoria Hospital says several hundred babies have already been tested in experiments.

Essentially, she involves attaching electrodes of a machine to a one-week-old baby. The machine is connected by a telephone line to a computer which has been programmed to feed a variety of sound stimuli to the infant.

Electroencephograph equipment records variation in the rate and strength of the baby's heartbeat. All the information is recorded on magnetic tape by the computer so that it can be analyzed at a later time.

During an initial period of three minutes, the baby's heart rate is checked when no sounds are being given. Then the baby is subjected to sound presented at random intervals for three minutes.

"But we're running into difficulties," says Dr. Ling. "What is happening is that we can't always be sure any change in the baby's heart activity is directly related to a sound stimulus.

"We obviously can't ask him and if he moves suddenly that action is recorded and might be interpreted as reaction to sound.

"Also there is a definite environment that prevails in the nursery with its particular noise level. Now, when we move the baby to a quiet area for the testing, any changes might be related directly to the momentary change in environment and not to the testing.

"Yet, some hearing deficiencies in infants have been detected and we are hoping to equip these children with hearing aids in several months that will improve their hearing and speaking abilities in the future."

Dr. Ling says that to date most hearing deficiencies are undetected until the child reaches the age of four or five years, and by that time it may be too late to start rehabilitation.

The doctor says one out of every 1,000 babies born in the Montreal area suffers from a hearing defect.

"But we're also missing a lot of defects with the test. I'd say we miss one out of four defects.

"What we have to figure out is should we subject the baby to more or less sounds in a given period, higher or lower sounds, slower or faster sounds.

"But I do think we're on a threshold of discovering just what will be needed and once we break through we'll be able to do so much more."

Other members of the experimental team include Dr. R. P. Gannon and Dr. Charles Lasla, a biomedical engineer.

Dr. Gannon said that while doctors and nurses have often subjected infants to sharp sounds such as handclapping or noisemakers to see if babies react by rapid movements, "it is possible that these movements are a result of other causes and that a hearing loss can go undiscovered."

He explained that in the current computer test, data from the no-sound period is displayed on a screen with the data from the sound period. Heart action is compared between both periods.

"It is a known medical fact that when a baby cannot hear normally at birth, and this is not discovered until he reaches the age of three or four, that part of the brain associated with hearing does not develop properly. This can be a handicap in teaching such a child to speak.

"But if we determine that there is a hearing deficiency, we can present the child with the correct auditory stimuli and that part of the brain will develop properly."

Community Honors Couple

Minto Community Hall was filled to capacity recently when friends, relatives and neighbors gathered to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Ern Broadworth who have sold their farm and are moving to Stirling.

Ivan Sarles acted as chairmen and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Lang led in community singing. Readings were given by Mrs. Edna Tanner, Mrs. Harold Holden and Mrs. Tom Clements. Piano solos were rendered by Debbie Sine, and Kathy Ketchen; Jim and Larry Truesdell sang and Mr. and Mrs. Lang played several piano and violin selections.

Mrs. Frank McGee read the address to the couple and then they were presented with gifts.

UCW MEETINGS

SPRINGBROOK UCW

Springbrook United Church Women were hostesses recently at their regular meeting to the youth groups and visitors with an attendance of about 65.

The president, Mrs. Lorne Bailey opened the meeting with a special welcome to all.

It was noted that Mrs. K. Thompson is the June visiting volunteers. The president reminded the members of the Senior Citizens' picnic in July and the Observer subscriptions to be renewed.

Mrs. Joe Thompson, chairman of the Christian education committee, conducted the program presented by the youth groups beginning with a sing song. The program consisted of songs sung by the messengers and the explorers presented a series of skits depicting their study of "Reconciliation in a Broken World".

Mrs. Ralph Thompson, treasurer for the mission of service fund of the congregation received the group's offerings as each was presented.

Mrs. Murney Bateman explained that the missionary offerings of the messengers were entirely each child's own free will offering and she conducted promotion from the messenger group to the teen group.

The group leaders were introduced as follows: messengers, Mrs. Murney Bateman and Mrs. Sam Downer; explorers, Mrs. Joe Thompson and Mrs. Bob Barrons; trefoil, Jack Spencer; CGIT, Mrs. Clarence Thompson and Mrs. Wayne Reid.

Mrs. Baidey paid tribute to the group leaders and also their individual members and urged each one present to be concerned and give their loyal support to the youth of the church. A lively sing song brought the evening to a close.

Ann Landers

'Miss Virtue' Irks Office Co-workers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A certain woman in our office is such a 'goody' she makes everyone sick. Miss Virtue (so we call her) wears colorless nail polish, sensible shoes, but no lace and no girdle. Got the picture?If anyone says "damn" in her presence, she lowers her eyes and acts offended. This Holier-Than-Thou dame reads dirty books and collects pornography. We found a few choice items in her desk drawers.)

ANN LANDERS

Another gal in this department pointed out that Miss Virtue always wears the same dress on Wednesday that she wore on Tuesday. And on Wednesday her usually perfect hair-do looks like a rat's nest. This means, of course, she has a standing date every Tuesday night with some guy — and she does not sleep at home.

Somebody should tip off Miss Virtue that we are on to her, but no one wants to. Will you do the honors? — IN THE KNOW.

DEAR IN: According to your extraordinary powers of deduction, if a girl wears the same dress to work two days in a row she did not sleep at home. I'd say the evidence is fairly frail, Dearie. Who does your work while you figure all this stuff out?

Thanks for letting me know what some office workers do with their time.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The whole town is discussing your wonderful meat loaf recipe. I am so pleased it won the prize in New Orleans! I did not see the recipe, unfortunately, because my husband hiked right out whenever he gets mad at me. I'm sure this is what happened the day our local paper carried your meat loaf recipe.

Will you please do me a favor and reprint it, Ann? You are the most popular person in Hopkinsville, Kentucky on account of that recipe. Thanks a lot. — A READER WHEN I CAN GET THE PAPER.

DEAR SOMETIMES: I printed that meat loaf recipe twice and several hundred readers wrote. It was once too many. A few food editors around the country threatened to start writing an advice column if I didn't stop printing recipes. Please ask one of the ladies in Hopkinsville to give it to you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is it too much to ask a son who makes a fine living to pick up the phone and call his mother twice a month? On Sunday it would cost him one dollar. The last time we spoke I placed the call. He said he would call me "soon." That was three weeks ago. Why are children so selfish and thoughtless? I'm dying to hear his voice. Shall I call him? — BLUE MONDAY.

DEAR BLUE: Children don't get selfish and thoughtless overnight. Most of them were indulged or ignored when they were younger. My advice is to leave your son alone. You can't change him. Maybe when his children give him the chill he'll remember to pick up a phone and call you.

Doris Plays Detective Role in Search for Verses

By DORIS CLARE

Dear Readers: At the risk of the column being dubbed "Poet's Corner", we have been conducting our own detective service for famous and infamous poems, rhymes, verses and limericks. Success to date is better than half-good.

But I do need a little help with the following:
